The long tables were most attractively appointed, with their snow-white tablecloths, accented by deep blue candles in crystal holders. The head table had a centrepiece of potted mauve colored 'mums, flanked by tall tapering deep blue candles in gleaming silver candelabra.

The Rev. M. G. McFarlane opened with grace and after partaking of the first course, the president of the Board of Director, Mr. J. H. Lennox, QC, introduced the guests at the head table, who included: Mr. C. Finkle, new president of the Trenton Branch, and Mrs. Finkle; the Rev. and Mrs M. McFarlane of Tabernacle United Church; Mrs. F. W. Wallis, guest speaker; Mrs. J. H. Lennox; Mrs. S. E. Morton, secretary; Mr. A. Gignac, treasurer, and Mrs. A. Gignac; Miss J. Moyer of the Trenton VON, and Miss Dorothy Connor.

RESUME OF WORK GIVEN

The president extended a most gracious welcome to all and gave a resume of the work accomplished during the year. He paid tribute to Miss Dorothy Connor, head VON nurse, and her staff, for the many tasks they had accomplished during the past year and also to the many organizations and individuals who had helped this organization. He stated that the VON had a comparatively successful year and added that a grant of $5,600 from the United Appeal had helped immensely, as well as the annual grant from the City of Belleville of $3,500. A successful spring tea was convened by Mrs. J. Nelles and Mrs. R. Brain contributed $1,199.13 to the funds.

Mrs. S. E. Morton, secretary, gave the secretarial report for the year. She stated that meetings were held monthly except for July and August. The minutes of the last annual meeting were approved.

TOTAL RECEIPTS $19,734.59

Mr. A. Gignac gave an itemized account in the treasurer's report, stating that the total receipts for the year 1960 amounted to $19,734.59 which included the United Appeal donation and the grant from the City of Belleville, and the total expenditures amounted to $16,301.32, leaving a net revenue of $3,433.27, but this was not actually a profit for the year as an automobile was purchased and there were other minor expenditures, leaving a slight deficit.

Mrs. James Nelles, in charge of publicity, gave her annual report and was pleased to report the success of advertising over CKWS television station.

A most comprehensive and inspiring report of the functions of the V.O.N. was given by the head nurse, Miss Dorothy Connor, who expressed thanks to the Board of Directors for their help during the year, and paid tribute to her staff for their excellent co-operation and for their loyalty and devotion to duty. She introduced the members of her staff who included Mrs. Neil, Miss Pryce, Mrs. Bentley and Miss G. Connor.

Mrs. R. H. Ralph, accompanied by Mrs. Donald Scott at the piano, gave a beautiful rendition of three well-known vocal selections: "Danny Boy," "Tammy," and "When You Come to the End of the Day," which were well received.

Mrs. F. W. Wallis, amateur photographer of note and field naturalist, showed colored slides of the birds and wildlife in this area, which were most interesting, along with her witty commentaries. Also shown were pictures taken during a hunting expedition near Moosonee, last year, when Mrs. Wallis bagged a large moose.

Mr. Douglas Burr, who also gave a financial report, expressed appreciative thanks to Mrs. Wallis.

MAKES NEWS AGAIN

BURLINGTON (CP)—Ernest Hurley, 43, awarded $10,000 in October in an alienation-of-affections suit, has been charged with creating a disturbance Jan. 27 in a restaurant where his wife Rosina, 43, works. When he appears Friday, the court will also hear a complaint signed by his wife asking that he be bound over to keep the peace under the Criminal Code.

Themes Need System, Not Inspiration

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D., with HARRY KARNS

Article 8

As you go up the ladder in school, you will be asked more and more often to write themes, reports, and essays. Your grades in some courses will depend almost entirely on how well you have written your reports.

It is unfortunate that many students approach the act of writing with a sense of awe. You do not have to be a literary genius to write a competent paper. In fact, it is better to get rid of the idea that "inspiration" is needed.

Simply go about it as you would any other project. Decide what has to be done and figure out the most logical way to do it.

1. Make sure you understand exactly what the teacher expects you to write about.

If you are not sure, write a sentence stating what you believe the subject to be, and show it to the instructor.

Understanding of the topic can save you much fretting and many hours of work. You may write the finest paper in the world, but if it is not on the topic assigned ,you are going to be in trouble.

2. Make a list of places to look for material for the report.

Most student research is done in libraries. Your research will be made easier and more effective if you ask the teacher or librarian how to use encyclopedias, the New York Times index, the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature, and the library card file system itself.

As you consult such sources, make a list of the books, magazines, newspapers and pamphlets which offer some promise of giving the information you want. Behind each reference, write down the page number.

3. Now start gathering the information from these sources.

Make notes in your own words: don't just copy what the writer has written, unless, of course you intend to quote him word for word. Credit the source.

Don't copy material down in wholesale lots. Be selective. Ask yourself: "Does this actually pertain to the subject?"

This doesn't mean you should accumulate only a few notes. Gather plenty of material that you can use. It is better to have some facts and ideas left over than to have too few.

When you find that you have run out of things to say and yet have not written a substantial paper, this is the signal to go back and do more research. Don't try to "bluff" it out. If your teacher is a good editor of reports, he'll detect your effort to pad.

4. After gathering your material, organize it.

That is, make an outline. Decide which ideas are the big ideas, and which ideas are the smaller, supporting ideas. Decide the order in which these ideas should appear in the finished product.

The extent to which you use these suggestions will be governed of course, by the nature and the length of the paper you are asked to write. Normally, a one-page theme will not require the research required for a four-page report.

If your assignment is a lengthy term paper, you will want to consult one of the many fine books that have been written to guide you in that kind of project.

Of the four steps described above, the one most likely to spell success or failure for your paper is Number 4.

HOW TO OUTLINE

If you have never learned to make an outline, you should take time out right now to learn how.

First ,open a book to a brief chapter. The first paragraph or so, perhaps even the first sentence, will contain a statement of what the chapter is about. Write Roman numeral I on the top line of a sheet of paper, and copy that sentence behind it.

Second, find the main ideas or items of information in the remainder of the chapter which explain or support statement number I. Place them under I in their proper order as statements A, B, C, D and so forth.

Let us use a simple example A book on guinea pigs might contain a chapter which opens with the statement that guinea pigs make excellent pets. The chapter also explains that guinea pigs are clean animals, that they are strong and rarely get sick, and that they whistle at their masters when they want carrots.

1. Guinea pigs are easy to care for and make interesting pets.

A. They are clean.

B. They are strong and rarely get sick.

C. They whistle for food.

Usually, the pattern of a piece of writing is more complex. But with patience you can figure out that pattern if you start with these keys: One, find the biggest idea. Two, find the supporting ideas and facts.

After you have practised out-linging material that is already written, reverse the process. Write down a list of observations, thoughts, and facts about a subject with which you are familiar. Now take another sheet of paper and rearrange this material in a logical, sensible order.

You will get from this a sense of harmony and rightness which will give you enthusiasm and confidence when you start the actual writing of your report.

For one thing they've got a new engine that delivers 10% more acceleration and passing power. And a new heavy-duty transmission (that will stand up to almost any abuse), with new gear ratios selected to deliver every ounce of the extra engine power to the driving wheels. (You get better performance, with the same gas economy.)

The first gear is synchronized. Now you can slip into first on the move, just as easily as you engage the other three.

There have been many other improvements too. Among the most recent; a better heater, and fully adjustable seats.

We're constantly seeking ways to make the Volkswagen more efficient. And when we find them, we build them in. So far we haven't discovered how we can improve the basic design of our vehicles. That's why the latest arrivals look just like the ones that came over last year, the year before, and the year before that.

Try as we might, we can't upset the logic of putting the driver up front and the engine at the rear. It provides better traction in mud and snow, and the load rides cradled between the wheels.

Look at the vans. Big, double side doors, and a rear door make them easier to load than any van ever built.

Volkswagens still deliver the goods for less. Less loading and unloading time. And less running cost. Your dealer has the facts to prove it.

Come and drive one of the new Volkswagens this week.

Congregational Meeting

HOLY TRINITY LUTHERAN CHURCH

The first annual meeting of Holy Trinity Lutheran congregation was held last week in the Quinte Women's Institute hall.

Pastor H. R. Lindeman in his report of the church's activities during 1960 called upon the congregation to render thanks to God for His many blessings. He said "the year 1960 will always be remembered by us and generations to come because it was the year that God through the work of His Holy Spirit inspired 81 adults and 52 children to organize themselves into a Lutheran songregation in the city of Belleville. To accomplish this historic event, a lot of hard work had to be done. Prospective members had to be sought and visited. The Steering Committee had to meet several times to advance interest and enthusiasm as well as to conduct the business affairs of the unorganized mission. But the Holy Spirit was with us, and through the strength and ability granted to us by Him, our efforts were crowned with success and Holy Trinity was organized on Sunday, May 15th."

The pastor reported that by the end of the year an additional 17 adults and 19 children (16 by baptism) had joined the congregation making a total baptized membership of 169. Mr. Bruce Bartleman, superintendent of the Sunday School, reported that the Sunday School had grown from an enrolment of 12 in January to 36 in December.

TO PURCHASE SITE

Another highlight of 1960 was the decision of the congregation to purchase a church site on Victoria Avenue at Stanley Park Drive and a parsonage at 27 Melrose Crescent. The congregation [illegible] to make payments [illegible],389 on these two properties. Building plans for the construction of a church unit will begin immediately, and the congregation hopes that actual construction will begin early in 1962.

A budget of $5350 for local expenses and $1450 for benevolences was adopted for 1961. In addition, the members have pledged a total of $10,322 for the building fund over a two-year period.

New members elected to the church council were George Heitbohmer and Harry Hollander. Members re-elected were Lorne Fever and Sydney Willman.

Mrs. George Heitbohmer reported on behalf of the United Lutheran Church Women. She said that some of the purchases that their 30-member group made from freewill offerings were; a communion set for the church, living room drapes for th parsonage, and Christmas gifts for the Sunday School children. Other projects included the collection of 40 pounds of baby clothing for needy children; a used clothing drive for Lutheran World Relief, and the making of several stuffed animals as Christmas gifts for children of the Children's Aid Society.

GRATITUDE EXPRESSED

Pastor Lindeman expressed gratitude to the members of Holy Trinity who contributed of their time and talents to the welfare of their church. He called on renewed support and co-operation for 1961 so that the goals of the congregation can be fulfilled. His concluding remarks were: "God has guided and directed our steps to this day, and He will continue to do so. Let us humbly place all our hopes and prayers in His hands. To Him be all praise and glory."

ST. ANDREW'S PRESBYTERIAN

IVANHOE — The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, West Huntingdon was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace and was well attended.

The Rev. K. Rooney conducted devotions. Ephesians 4, was read, followed by prayer and "Bless Be The Tie That Binds" was sung.

The meeting was conducted by Mr. Rooney with David Fargey acting as secretary.

The following reports were presented: Church School and Bible vacation — Mrs. John Wallace; W.M.S.. financial — Mrs. H. Thompson; written — B. Fleming; Ladies' Aid — Mrs. Harry Benson; C.O.C. — Mrs. Milton Shaw; St. Andrew's Club — David Fargey; S.S. Missionary and birthday treasurer — Mrs. John Wright; choir — Mrs. William Donnan; Board of Managers — Harold Thompson; treasurer's report — Mrs. Harold Thompson.

It was decided that all reports be adopted.

The report of each group denoted growth and showed a substantial financial balance.

Mrs. Harry Benson, on behalf of the congregation, moved a vote of thanks and appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Rooney for their dedicated leadership through the year. Mr. Rooney in reply commended the small groups on their activities and hoped for continued success in the future.

After the meeting closed, refreshments were served by the ladies of the congregation.

Bishop Evans Confirms 63 At Christ Church, Tyendinaga

The rite of confirmation was administered to one of the largest classes from Tyendinaga Parish in a solemn service on Sunday morning in Christ Church by the Rt. Rev. Kenneth C. Evans, Biship of the Diocese of Ontario. The class of 63 was presented to Bishop Evans by the Rev. Edwin Wrightson, rector of Tyendinaga parish.

The Bishop in his sermon exhorted not only the members of the confirmation class, but the congregation, which filled the church to over-flowing, to heed the words of Christ who said, "follow Me".

Bishop Evans pointed out that it was not easy to follow these instructions. He enumerated the sacrifices that must be made to set aside personal preferences to follow the selfless example of Christ.

The Bishop said that help to be a good follower of Christ is found at the celebration of Holy Communion. He said, "At the service of Holy Communion we are reminded that Christ has paid the price by giving up His life for us. It is at the altar at Holy Communion that we renew our pledge of loyalty to try, with God's the Lord Jesus Christ. It is at the Lor dJesus Christ. It is at this service that we receive God's power and grace to overcome all temptations".

THOSE CONFIRMED

Those in the confirmation class were: William Edward Baberstock; Robert John Bernhardt; William Frederick Bernhardt; Larry Clifford Boomhour; Randolph Clifford Boomhour; Michael Shanton Brant; Glen Warren Brant; Carmen Glenn Maracle; John David Colley; Sherman Orval Green; Thomas Green; Eugene Garnet Oliver Hill; Austin Garnet Lewis; Richard Perry Lewis; Larry Gilbert Lewis; Delbert Edward Leween, Terry Cornelius Maracle; Douglas Eugene Maracle; Joesph Edward Maracle; Francis John Maracle; Glenn Gordon Maracle; Dale Frederick Maracle: Ronald Ernest Maracle; Francis Floyd Maracle; Louis Maracle; Morris Maracle; Percy William Maracle; Wilfred John Martin; Robert Watson; Teresa Audrey Baberstock; Donna Caroline Doreen Boomer; Verna May Brant; Cheryl Joyce Brant; Sharon Ann Brant; Mary Lucille Brant; Carol Ann Brant; Mary Nancy Sharon Dale Hill; Carol Ann Ethel Hill; Margaret Rose Leween; Shandra Jean Lewis; Lyn Dianne Lewis; Merle Evelyn Maracle; Shirley May Maracle; Evelina Maracle; Margaret Ann Maracle; Eleanor Maracle; Lorna Jean Moses; Dianne Viola Pritchard; Jill Estelle Thompson; Sharon Anne John; Mrs. Betty Eileen Maracle; Mrs. Shirley Ann Maracle; Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Brant; Mrs. Doris Marguerite Brant; Mrs. Evelyn Brant, and Mrs. Theresa Lillian Colley.

Club Activities

WOOLER M. B.

WOOLER — The February meeting of the Wooler Mission Band was held on Sunday morning in the church parlors, with Mrs. N. Crosby and Mrs. J. Putnam in charge.

The worship, "We Are All Brothers," was taken from the February "World Friends" with Gloria De Mille reading the Scripture.

The study book stories were reviewed and the children enjoyed coloring the world map. "World Friends" were given each family.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

KITCHENS

In the seventeenth century in his 'History of Women,' Thomas Heywood wrote "Her that ruled the roost in the kitchen." It might be possible to compile a large volume about kitchens from the time that men or women began to hold a piece of meat on a stick over a fire.

But did women always 'rule the roost in the kitchen?' This is doubtful when one remembers reproductions of scenes drawn in Egypt where baking was first raised to a degree of excellence. These scenes depict men doing the work. It would be safest to say that men and women have both been in and out of the kitchen during the ages. Connoisseurs say that the finest cooks are men; they are then raised to the eminence of being called chefs. Where they perform their duties, however, is not the kind of kitchen we will be wandering through in the next few paragraphs.

Though we have done no research we would wager that those long ago household kitchens in which women ruled the roost were kept well or badly depending on the women, even though they had little to work with in the way of conveniences. In the Old World and in the earlier days of our continent, the ordinary household had a better kitchen than the large and wealthy home mainly because the wife did the work. In the old days, the mistress of a mansion scarcely knew where the kitchen was and the servants worked in wretched conditions.

Of course there were exceptions. After Anne of Cleves was put aside by Henry VIII, she lived the rest of her life at Richmond quite happy to run her own household. She is said to have supervised her kitchen so well and prepared such delicious food that even Henry dropped in for the occasional meal.

Probably the greatest changes in kitchens have come within living memory. Change itself in all things is the order of the day and is accelerating all the time. The big old-fashioned kitchens of our grandmother's day seemed to stay the same for decades. Do you remember the huge coal and wood ranges, often ornamented elaborately with tile and mirror, with warming closests on top and the reservoir on the side? Kitchens on the farm, in villages and towns were what we would call now 'the family room'. There was often a couch for Father and a rocking chair for Mother, while the children did their homework at the kitchen table after the meal was cleared away.

Here was real warmth and even today you may hear an older person say "There is nothing like a fire in a stove." We hear that the latest triumph of sentiment over progress is the revival of heating stoves.

With the advent of the electric and gas ranges, there was a sweeping change from the old style and the smaller kitchen became the thing. Built in cupboards took the place of chests and sideboards, everything was functional and utilitarian with antiseptic white the universally favorite color. There are still many white kitchens but most are now enlivened by colorful curtains, decorations or utensils.

Kitchen planning has become a science mainly to save the modern housewife the steps wasted in the haphazard kitchen. As much thought is given to the decor of the modern kitchen as the living-room. How beautiful they can be — beautiful and utilitarian.

These thoughts were brought on by a large colored picture in a recent magazine. The work area with the latest modern equipment was bright and convenient and colorful. The room was large with an attractive table on one side where a boy and a girl were doing homework. Opposite them was a glowing fireplace with Dutch tiles (maybe transplanted from the old black stove) — and there were Mother and Dad in rocking chairs on either side. Perhaps the family kitchen has returned.

P.S. Winners Guests at Rotary Club

CAMPBELLFORD — Patsy Bibby, Maureen Keogan and Joanne O'Sullivan, first, second and third-place winners of the St. Mary's School oratorical contest, were guests of the Rotary Club on Monday when they delivered their award-winning speeches.

Patsy Bibby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bibby, spoke on "Explorations of Outer Space." She expressed the wonderment of the layman in his inability to grasp the significance of the new era of space travel. Unlike simple methods of transportation, the rocket makers have only trial and error methods of perfecting their products. Thus there are more failures than successes. Miss Bibby visualized the world of the future when rockets would run between a space station and the earth; when they would circle the universe at the speed of light. When this is accomplished, she said, man will seek further worlds to conquer.

RAIN

Maureen Keogan, winner of second place, spoke on "Rain." The endless process of precipitation depends on many factors: latitude, elevation, proximity to the sea and winds. Rainfall is the giver of all life, animal and vegetable, and the chief cleansing agent for the air. Five days of rain in the city of London will take 3,738 tons of impurities from the air of the city. It is a gift of God, and a blessing to all life.

Joanne O'Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul O'Sullivan, spoke on "Our Servant, Electricity." She outlined the earliest experiments in electrical generation by fuel and later by water power. The development of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario founded by Sir Adam Beck, marked the start of one of the largest publicly-owned systems in the world, and one on which industrial Ontario is founded.

The speakers were introduced by Paul O'Sullivan and thanked by Frank Linton.

TO THE RESCUE

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — A Toronto truck driver abandoned his huge tractor-trailer in the middle of a downtown street here to go to the rescue of a lady in distress. Ed Priest found Mrs. Mary Malinowski of Stoney Creek, Ont., had cut off a piece of her thumb while closing her car door. He took her to a hospital and returned to his truck 20 minutes later to find it still there in the middle of the street.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

Hearty

by Mary Moore

Armed with a heart-shaped cutter and a bottle of red food coloring you can have a Valentine party.

SANDWICH AMOUNTS:

Approximamtely 8 ounces (1 cup) filling will fill 6 full-size 2-slice sandwiches and serve 6 people generously. So for 100 people you should allow 8 pounds filling and 200 slices bread. Amounts depend of course on how generous you care to be and how hungry your guests are. Of course if your sandwiches are cut out with heart-shaped cutters there will be waste but you have to decide about this yourselves.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

WEDNESDAY

FILLING — CHEESE AND CHERRY:

One 8-oz. package plain white cream cheese, 1 cup chopped blanched almonds or walnuts or pecans, about 25 drained, finely chopped maraschino cherries, sprinkle of salt, enough cream to moisten. Cream cheese well, adding milk or cream to make of spreading consistency. Add remaining ingredients and mix. These amounts will fill one loaf of sliced crustless sandwich bread.

VALENTINE CAKE:

1-2 cup best quality shortening, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 cups sifted cake flour, 2 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 3-4 cup milk.

Blend together shortening, sugar, eggs, salt and vanilla and beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk to the shortening mixture. Bake in two 8" greased layer pans at 375 deg. Fahr. for 30-35 minutes. Cool.

FLUFFY PINK FROSTING:

Into a large bowl put 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 egg white, 1-2 cup boiling water, 1-4 teaspoon cream of tartar. At once beat with electric beater until it holds in firm peaks. Fold in red food coloring to tint a delicate pink. Use to spread between layers and on top and sides of cake. Decorate with drained maraschino cherries or tiny candy hearts or red granulated sugar.

This is an old foolproof fluffy frosting that I gave years ago. For other variations the liquid may be, for instance, boiling hot orange juice or pineapple juice.

For a young people's party, you will welcome this.

PINK PARTY PUNCH (32 servings):

3 (6-oz.) cans frozen lemonade concentrate, 1 cup maraschino cherry juice (chop the fruit and use it, too, if you like). 2 26-oz. bottles chilled ginger ale.

Combine the lemonade concentrate and the maraschino cherry juice. Just before serving, add ginger ale and ice cubes. Fill punch bowl.

BEST FRESH

Any frozen foods containing eggs, milk, meat, gravy or dressings should be used within two hours of preparation or else refrigerated until served.

Trim Coat

The wide, well-cut silhouette is relieved by seaming which starts at the under arm and converges towards the front at the hem. The back hangs straight and wide.

C.A.R.S. Aux. Plans Future Activities

The Women's Auxiliary of C.A.R.S. held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. J. Stock last Thursday. It was decided to hold a bake sale in March to which all friends of the Society would be asked to contribute.

There was considerable discussion about ways and means of making the annual rummage and auction sale to be held in the Armouries in April a successful one. Some details concerning the campaign to obtain as much saleable goods as possible were arranged.

as possible were arranged.

It was reported that cards had been sent to patients in the hospital, visits arranged for those confined to their homes; materials provided for occupational therapy for others.

The group was happy to hear of the arrival of the new physiotherapist from South Africa as her personal contact with the patients greatly aids the Auxiliary to give them more effective assistance.

At the conclusion of the meeting, refreshments were served by Mrs. T. O. Worrell and Mrs. J. A. Jarvis.

Design of Modern Lamps Is Appalling Says Professor

By EDNA BLAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — It isn't enough for a thing to be functional, it must also have graceful lines and be pleasing to the eye and touch, says Prof. Eric R. Arthur, professor of architectural design at the University of Toronto.

Good design, he says, is important to the cultural development of a country. He admires Canadian design generally but is appalled by modern lamps "which have become more of a decoration and less of a lamp.

Household equipment and kitchen utensils could be both useful and beautiful.

"Hygiene, that's probably a bad word but hygiene is important too. Utensils shouldn't have cracks and crevices which collect dirt. They should be easily cleaned."

In a modern kitchen, the old crockery teapot is probably the only thing of the past which remains, he said.

"I don't think there are modern teapots. They're a funny little Victorian thing which has remained."

ADMIRES 18TH CENTURY

The 18th century was a period of universal good taste, Prof. Arthur believes.

Standards were lost during the industrial revolution and only now is the machine age producing things of beauty.

"We went through a stage of tubular metal and then the Swedes introduced us again to the beauty of wood. Now we're back to wood—tables and chairs—we feel wood and we appreciate the grain. Now it's oiled instead of polished."

One of the most significant advances in design is the interest of trade and commerce which "had looked with apathy until recent years."

Prof. Arthur expressed pleasure at an international exhibition of stainless steel at the National Gallery at Ottawa last fal land he was delighted by a recent show in Buffalo of items that sold for $1.

Although he has an appreciative eye for good design, Prof. Arthur confesses an admiration also for simple kitchen gadgets "like those things that make radishes look like roses."

Trips to New York aren't complete until he visits the housewares department at Macy's to view the latest gadgets. "Some of them are very clever."

"The Japanese, once noted for their lack of taste now are noted for their designs of china," the professor said.

The motor car, "a juke box on wheels," is not a good example of modern design, he said.

Women's Activities

BETHEL - ZION W.I.

The regular meeting of the Bethel-Zion W.I. was held at the home of Miss Helen Tummon, with a small number of ladies present. The vice-president, Mrs. Roy Sills, was in charge of the meeting.

Letters and correspondence were read and bills dealt with. It was decided to have a "Pennies For Friendship" fund box at all meetings. Mrs. Fred Wellman gave an interesting story on "Glass."

Mrs. Percy Ray gave a report of the Federation convention ,the theme being "The Role of Farm Women In the Next Ten Years In Agriculture." This was most interesting. Mrs. Ralph Sills also gave a reading and Mrs. Roy Sills closed the meeting with a poem. A social half hour followed.

Achievement Days Named By 4-H Clubs

The Hastings County 4-H Homemaking Club Achievement Days for "Working With Wool" will be held in the Stirling Community Hall, on February 18th, and in Trinity United Church, Madoc, on February 25th, Parents, friends and Women's Institute members are especially invited to attend the afternoon session.

Fourteen communities had homemaking clubs started in the fall of 1960. They were Bethel-Zion, Foxboro, Melrose, Plainfield, Quinte, River Valley, Rylstone, Uniondale, Wallbridge, Chapman Cooper-Remington, Eldorado, Maynooth and Queensboro. Chapman and Wallbridge have two clubs.

Achievement day is held at the end of the project to show the results. Each girl has made a wool skirt and a record book which will be exhibited at the Achievement Day. The afternoon program consists of demonstations and exhibits given by the clubs and presentations of awards.

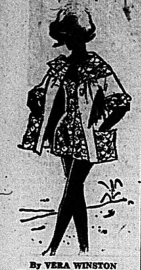
Beach Styles



By VERA WINSTON

Of printed cotton satin, it is a one-piecer with pie-cut neckline and figure-flattering seaming. The fish-scale print is in shades of blue, green and yellow and is used for the yoke, collar, cuffs and pocket of the yellow cotton coat.

It is worth noting that yellow is high on the resort color card and should be popular for wear come summer.

YPU Discusses Vital Force Of Religion

"You don't learn religion, you catch it," declared Judy Whitmore, conducting the devotional period of the regular meeting of the Frankford United Church Young People's Union, on Sunday evening. "More things are wrought by influence than this world dreams of," paraphrased Judy, driving home the urgency of wholesome conduct in daily living. Judy's interesting talk was based on the healing power of Peter's shadow in the book of Acts and dexterously interpreted as symbolic of the vital force of contageous influence.

Invitations to a box social by the Wallbridge Y.P.U. and a skating party at Brighton were accepted. Four visitors were introduced, Ian Finnegan, Gary Nelson, Fred Phillips and Karen Wickens. It was decided to send Barbara Mallory and David Brooks to the Easter teen-age conference at Five Oaks Christian Workers Centre at Paris, Ontario. The group will take complete charge of the worship service in Stockdale United Church next Sunday morning with special music ,and the preacher will be Bill Dafoe, ex-president Frankford United Church Y.P.U. and a cabinet minister in Ontario Older Boys Parliament for 1960.

MINISTERIAL CANDIDATES NEEDED

Colleen Chase gave a short talk and led a discussion on the serious shortage of candidates for the ministry in the United Church. With rapidly expanding congregations many churches are without ordained ministers..

Ministers' salaries, educational standards, duties, privileges, responsibilities and opportunities were discussed in a critical and sympathetic manner.

Turnips Have Many Uses

There they are, their round shiny faces twinkling up at you beneath royal purple or bronze-colored mantles. Makes you want to pick up one right away! Well do just that for they're a good buy these days and as the colors indicate, the turnip is a prince of a fellow — mild, full of vitamins and a good mixer.

Turnips go to a party — cut into slim fingers, fancy curls and minute triangles. Arranged around a little silver bowl of whipped sour cream for dunking and eating, they are a crunchy and delicious relish.

Turnips go in the salad — shredded fine and tossed with cabbage, celery and dressing— a reminder of the warm sunny fields from whence they came.

Turnips go in the soup — the crisp cubes added to vegetable or barley soup perk up its color and taste.

Turnips go in the stew — cut into chunks to improve the food meaning of meat stew and add to its homespun appeal.

Turnips go round the roast — sliced, parboiled for 10 minutes; oven browned in fat around the meat for 45 minutes — never a more edible garnish on any platter.

Turnips go on the dinner plate — creamy and golden, neat round balls. Boil sliced turnip in small amount of salted water until tender, 20 to 25 minutes. Drain and mash. Mellow with butter. Season to taste with pepper or nutmeg; parsley, brown sugar or grated cheese. Dish up with ice cream scoop to form balls.

The Consumer Section in Ottawa suggests you give your taste buds a treat and try their two recently tested recipes for Turnip Soup and Turnip Puff.

CREAM OF TURNIP SOUP

2 cups shredded raw turnip, 1 cup boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup finely chopped onion, 3 tablespoons flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, 3 cups milk, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Cook turnip in boiling salted water until tender, about 10 minutes. Melt butter in top of double boiler, add onion and saute over direct heat until transparent but not brown, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat, add flour and salt and stir until well blended, then add milk. Cook over direct heat, stirring constantly until mixture begins to thicken. Place over hot water and continue cooking 5 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Add turnip, cooking liquid and pepper to cream sauce, then heat. Makes about 5 cups.

TURNIP (RUTABAGA) PUFF

3 cups hot mashed turnip, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 eggs, well beaten, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon brown sugar (optional), 1 teaspoon baking powder, ¾ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1-3 cup buttered cracker or bread crumbs (optional).

Combine turnip and butter. Add eggs and beat thoroughly. Add flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and pepper, then mix until well blended. Turn into a greased casserole. If desired, top with buttered crumbs. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) until top is lightly browned, about 25 minutes. 6 servings.

Mock Wedding Marks 25th Anniversary

The bride of 25 years ago looked charming in a wine velvet dress with corsage of pink roses and beside her, the smiling bridegroom with white boutonniere.

The room was decorated with a white wedding bell and streamers. Centreing the table was a three tiered wedding cake with "25 years", in silver decoration. A centrepiece of white and yellow mums, from the Women's Institute and red roses from the grandchildren added a gay note.

The wedding couple were recipients of many lovely gifts — also many cards, among which were well wishes from Mr. Lee Grills, M.P. and Mr. E. Sandercock, M.L.A.

During the afternoon Mesdames C. Elliott, E. Anderson and C. Marisette poured tea. Two daughters, Mrs. H. Patrick and Mrs. J. Crowe received and registered the callers.

Mrs. G. Rice, Mrs. H. Faul, Mrs. F. Phillips and Mrs. H. Phillips were on the serving list, assisted by Mrs. May Caskey, Mrs. C. Frost and Mrs. A. Caskey.

The evening took the form of a social affair with the Rev. R. M. McMullen acting as chairman. Several readings and instrumental selections were given. A mock wedding was well performed with Mr. E. Anderson as the minister. The costumes and the wording of the mock ceremony sent the audience into gales of laughter. A large crowd was present and all wished the happy couple many more years of wedded bliss. A humorous selection to the tune of "My Darling Clementine", was sung. It concerned Edna and Ken and their every day routine including the watching of TY.

EDUCATION BEST AID

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. James Robinson, a Presbyterian minister from New York's Harlem section told a group of Toronto business and professional men Monday the best aid for Africa is the education of its youth. Africans should not be brought overseas for university training, but facilities should be developed in their own countries, said Mr. Robinson, founder of Africa Crossroads, a scheme which sends North American university students to Africa for two months in the summer to work with African students on community projects.

Stork Shower Honors Mother-to-Be

FRANKFORD — Last Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Grant a "Stork Shower" was held in honor of Mrs. George Chapman.

Mrs. Austin Watson was master of ceremonies and opened the evening activities with the singing of favorite choruses led by Mrs. Gerald Curry.

Mrs. Fred Wannamaker led in prayer.

Mrs. Gordon Smith and Mrs. Keith Helm favored with a vocal duet, "This World Is Not My Home, Mrs. Reg Elliott gave a reading, "I Never Dreamed". A "Baby Contest" was enjoyed the winner, Mrs. Keith Helm.

Miss Marjorie Forbes gave a reading "God's Masterpiece", a bible contest was led by Mrs. A. Watson and Mrs. Mary Ella Grant rendered a vocal solo, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer".

Miss Myrtle Grant and Mrs. K. Helm, nieces of Mrs. G. Chapman carried a large box of lovely baby gifts to the guest of honor. Eleanor thanked her friends for their kindness.

Refreshments were served and a time of fellowship enjoyed by all.

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

MARSH HILL — The February meeting of Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. David Little with nine members and two children present.

Mrs. Allyn Finkle, the president, opened the meeting with a few thoughts on 'Prayer'.

Two membership fees were paid.

Mrs. Frank Finkle gave a few thoughts on 'Stewardship' and Mrs. E. B. Finkle a reading on "Christian citizenship."

The members reported sending 28 cards and six letters and making three calls and seven hospital visits.

The members were reminded that the World Day or Prayer will be held February 17 at the Foxboro Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Fred Campbell, Mrs. Harold Detlor, Mrs. Leslie Finkle and Mrs. Allyn Finkle will assist with the program.

The Belleville Presbyterial will be held February 20-21 at Stirling and Mrs. Harold Detlor and Mrs. David Little will be the delegates.

The March meeting will be postponed for one week and will be held March the 8th.

Mrs. David Little presided over the worship, service the theme being, "Voices from Abroad".

Mrs. Berson Mitts read the Scripture from Luke 4: 16-21.

Miss Joyce Little favored with several songs which she had learned at Sunday School and Mrs. Leslie Finkle read, "When This Old World Looks Hum Drum."

Mrs. E. B. Finkle gave the second chapter from the Study book, "Turning World," which told of Miss Betty Thompson, the author's first stop on her global journey which was at a work camp in Europe.

After the benediction, members took part in a "Biblical quiz".

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

BRING DOWN BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP)—An $8,000,002 item for purchase of "green belt" land to be developed as park sites and recreation areas in and around Ottawa heads a 1961-62 budget of some $17,000,000 announced Monday by the National Capital Commission. The expenditure is expected to close out the land-purchase program started three years ago, and bring the total cost to $27,000,000—$7,000,000 more than originally estimated.

JOHNSTOWN W.A.

JOHNSTOWN — The Johnstown W.A. held its February meeting recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Vandervoort with a good attendance of members, visitors and some of the men.

Mrs. Earl Stickle opened with the theme song and prayer, also thanking the hostess and welcoming the visitors. Mrs. Douglas Harry read "The Prayer Perfect," which was an explanation of the "Lord's Prayer." Mrs. Alex Vandervoort held a quiz on "Do You Organize Your Time?" Mrs. Clayton Curtis read a poem, "No Time To Read" and Mrs. Fred Meyers "In the Morning."

Mrs. Alex Vandervoort gave a good report on the circumstances concerning the redecoration of Johnstown Church. The aim in the distant future is to build a room on the church where bazaars, teas, meetings, can be held.

Mrs. Arnold Harry gave "A Meditation on Community Friendship," aided by Mrs. A. Meyers. It was decided that Mrs. Douglas Harfy, Mrs. Arnold Harry and Mrs. Maitland Harder, be a committee to arrange for a pie social.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Walter Lohnes and Mrs. Maitland Harder, who so unstintingly gave of their time and to all others who helped to make the church at Johnstown so beautiful.

Mrs. Glenn Stickle, Mrs. Alva Meyers and Mrs. William S. Harry voiced appreciative thanks for cards from the W.A.

A contest was enjoyed and won by Mrs. Glenn Stickle. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

DIRECTS BLIND TEACHING — Louise Cowan, blind since a childhood accident, is the new national director of welfare and home teaching with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Toronto. A native of Princeton, Ont., she was CNIB's Ontario supervisor of home teaching for 12 years until she succeeded Mrs. R. W. Harper at the beginning of 1961. (CP Photo).

Director of Welfare, Home Teaching for Blind Well Suited for Her Position

TORONTO (CP) — Louise Cowan brings an unusual understanding of the problems of the blind to her new job as national director of welfare and home teaching for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

She's blind herself, the result of an accident when she was a child.

But there's more to recommend her for the post she filled at the beginning of January, succeeding Mrs. R. W. Harper on her retirement. She is eminently well fitted by her training.

Her early education was at the school for the blind at Brantford, Ont., near her home in Princeton. She got her B.A. from McMaster University, Hamilton, in 1943.

"I wasn't quite certain what I wanted to do then and for a while I worked in the CNIB national library at the old Beverley Street headquarters in Toronto."

Volunteer work with blinded veterans led to an interest in teaching and rehabilitation and she resigned from the library in 1944 to join the small staff of the rehabilitation centre.

STUDIED IN MICHIGAN

She spent three years teaching braille, typewriting and crafts and for two summers took short courses at the Ypsilanti School of Social Work in Michigan. In 1946 she decided to obtain her social work degree and got her M.A. from the University of Toronto in 1948.

Until her recent appointment she was the institute's Ontario supervisor of home teaching for 12 years.

"The CNIB sponsored my studies with the plan that I would come back and work in some phase of home teaching," Miss Cowan said. "It's interesting work and, just as teaching the veterans was, a rewarding experience."

She says there is a great need for more teachers.

"We try to find them within the registered blind group but we find people in their early 20s best for the job, and the majority of close to 25,000 blind people in Canada are in older age brackets."

The new national director will continue her work with the 14 Ontario offices while acting as consultant to all welfare workers and home teachers in the other six national divisions.

She will keep watch for all new avenues of social work that can be adapted to CNIB work and will probably be assigned to assist blind people from other countries who apply for CNIB help.

Women's Institute

RYLSTONE W. I.

RYLSTONE — Mrs. Stanley Kerr entertained the members of Rylstone Women's Institute at the Sunday School room of Zion Church, on the afternoon of February 1st.

There were 10 members, two visitors and one child in attendance.

The meeting opened with the Institute Ode and Creed. Minutes of the January meeting were read by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Stanley Kerr, who also gave the treasurer's report. Correspondence was read and other business was dealt with, after which a discussion followed concerning a social evening or a trip for the members, but no decision was reached, as yet.

In the absence of Mrs. Carl Reid, public relations' convener, the balance of the program was in charge of the president, Mrs. Don Kerr. Mrs. Jack Watson gave an interesting reading and a splendid motto, entitled, "Teen Agers Need Moulds, Not Critics," was given and read by Mrs. Don Stewart. The topic "Public Relations" was well explained by Mrs. Percy Reid.

Mrs. Ellis-Jones conducted a valentine contest and the meeting closed.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Jim Gray and Mrs. Jack Watson.

Stirling W.I. Hears Talk On Citizenship

Mrs. E. Luery, John Street, Stirling, opened her home to the officers and members of the Stirling W.I. for their February meeting on Wednesday afternoon with a fair attendance for such cold weather.

President Mrs. B. Reid, conducted the business of the meeting.

Mrs. E. Luery, Stirling W.I., branch convener on historical research, was appointed a member of the Historical Society for Hastings, the museum of which is located at Belleville.

Mrs. C. Gay offered her home for a quilting on Wednesday afternoon. These quilts are for the bale for Scott Mission welfare.

Two announcements were of interest: February 18: 4-H Club Achievement Day, and February 22, "Window Drapery" by the W.I. members; both at the community hall from 2 to 4 p.m.

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. E. Phillip, Belleville, president of West Hastings W.I. was the guest speaker, choosing as her subject, "Citizenship,' dealing with responsibilities and indifferent voters; training children from an early age for good citizens and civic affairs.

Key to a good life: A for ascend; B for beauty; C for charity and D for democracy.

Mrs. R. Stapley gave a solo, "Jesus Will Walk With Me," and Mrs. W. C. West gave a reading, "Home." A piano solo Ben Hur's "Chariot Race," was given by Mrs. Stapley.

Lunch was served and enjoyed with visiting with each other.

Mrs. M. Ayerhart expressed thanks to the hostess, to the special speaker and to Mrs. W. C. West and Mrs. C. Gay, conveners for lunch and program.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Shaw

RUSSIAN EMPRESS SET GUEST RULES!

People often say "how things have changed!" One glaring example of "change" is the manners procedure followed today in Russia as compared with how things were over two hundred years ago when Catherine II was ruler.

She presided over a brilliant court. She made her own rules and, if they were broken, she enforced penalties. A guest who dared to break any of the rules laid down by the Empress was in for a very unpleasant time.

I think these rules are worth consideration today. It it amazing to see how well some of them fit into our modern way of life! The code of the Empress was as follows:

1. When visiting, leave outside your hat, your rank, and especially your sword.

2. Leave outside your right of precedence, your pride and everything akin to them.

3. Be gay, but do not damage anything.

4. Sit, stand or walk as others do.

5. Talk calmly, but not loud enough to make the heads of others ache.

6. Discuss without anger or excitement.

. Neither sigh nor yawn, nor make others gloomy or dull spirited.

8. Let all join in any game proposed.

9. Eat what ever is good, but drink moderately in order that everybody's head may be level on leaving.

10. Tell no tales. That which goes in one ear must go out the other before you leave the room.

For breaking any of these rules, the guests of the Empress had to take the consequences, which ran all the way from drinking a glass of cold water to memorizing lines from a poem. If he broke the last rule, "Tell no tales," he was never invited again.

Perhaps these rules are a bit too inflexible for the modern hostess. Some of them are as good today as they were then, except that today we can't enforce them. Fortunately, perhaps, good manners are more or less voluntary and offenders are weeded out by more subtle means than being penalized!

Even so, I am sure there isn't a hostess alive who hasn't wished she could had certain guests a set of rules to follow! Of course the way to penalize them today, if they slip up, is never to invite them again!

* * *

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question: Will you please tell me if a person has to call the hostess the day after a party, and thank her again? Or is it sufficient to thank her when you leave the party? — Mrs. L. L., Alberta, Canada.

Answer: If the party has been of the cocktail variety, or a tea, a call is not really necessary. However, I think it is gracious to call, or write a note of appreciation, if you have attended aluncheon, dinner or buffet. I do not think a "thank you" at the end of the party is sufficient in any of these cases.

Club Activities

CHRIST CHURCH C.C.

Contact Club of Christ Church met Monday night for a work meeting under the chairmanship of Irene Weatherstone, who is layette convener for this year. This is a project of long standing, with the end results most rewarding, as such care is put into each garment.

Hostesses for the evening were: Barbara Cocke; Mickey Lake and Betty Ling. Next week there will be a social evening, with Marge Bunnett's group in charge.

Friends Hold Stork Shower

WELLINGTON — Mrs. Gary Ferguson was pleasantly surprised on Friday evening when a number of friends and neighbors met at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Pearsall to honor her with a stork shower.

A social time was spent and two contests were played, one a conceptration game and the other a scrambled word contest.

Mrs. Ferguson was seated at the dining room table, which was piled high with lovely packages of all sorts and sizes. Mrs. Upton spoke briefly before Carol unwrapped the many gifts. She was assisted by her niece, Miss Brenda Jeffery. The lovely gifts were passed around so that everyone could see them.

After all were unwrapped Carol expressed appreciation to her friends for the beautiful gifts. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs Godfrey Upton and Mrs. Garfield Whitney, assisted by Mrs. Pearsall, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Jeffrey and Brenda.

River Valley W. I. Hears Talk On Health, Home Economics

On February 2nd Mrs. Harry Morrow was hostess for the River Valley Women's Institute. There were 28 ladies and eight children in attendance.

Mrs. Roy Tucker welcomed the group and opened the meeting. Mrs. Ralph Utman was secretary pro-term. The Institute fees of $29.73 have been remitted to the District treasurer. The historical group have turned in $61. for the month of January. They convened three card parties and a family supper party.

Letters of thanks were read from Mrs. Gerald Brooks, Mrs. George Heasman, and Donnie Sager. The Home Economist, Miss Julia Lane sent an invitation for all the ladies to attend "Achievement Day," February 18th and view the girls' display of wool skirts.

HISTORICAL REPORT

Mrs. E. C. Hay-Ellis gave an interesting report of the recent meeting of Hastings County Historical Society. It is expected that the proposed museum will be open to the public, three hours per day for 121 days per year. She will be the representative for another year.

A letter from the provincial president, Mrs. L. G. Lymburner, was read. This stressed that each branch convener be sure to forward her report to the District. This year F.W.I.O. are asking that displays of histories and scrap books be displayed at all district annuals. The "Pennies for Friendship," fund should be gathered in at the district annual or at an international program. The "Adelaide Hoodless Fund" has exceeded $3,500. The "400 coupon plan" will close in March of this year. There was also much helpful advice for the F.W.I.O. safety program.

Mrs. Roy Bush reported almost $4. to date in "The Pennies for Friendship" fund. She gave excerps from the president's new year message. Mrs. Beekhoff said, "We just feel proud to belong and to work for an organization like the A.C.W.W." The story was told of one English W.I. president, who is 18 years old and lives in New South Wales, Australia. Mrs. E. Watt is 86 years of age and has been branch secretary for 17 years.

Plans were made for various expenditures in the near future which included replenishing the medicine cabinet at the school.

The March meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Vernon Harry, and the topic will be based on "Historical Research".

The program, based on 'health and home economics' was in charge of Mrs. Percy MacMullen; and the roll call on 'how to comply with Canada's food rules, was most gratifying. Good food was served and old fashioned oatmeal porridge is still on the breakfast menu in some homes.

SICK ROOM MANNERS

The co-convener, Mrs. Harry Vandevoort read an informative message on "Manners in the Sick Room", and listed ten good rules for a hospital visitor. This discouraged too lengthy visits to the sick patients. Little Carol Vandevoort passed out free leaflets on health for the group to read at home.

Mrs. Philip Conley contributed a piano selection; a poster made by Miss Cheryl Utman, on the theme, 'Nutrition was displayed and will be used in a prominent place at various public gatherings.

On October 31st, 1960, West Hastings District sponsored a 'workshop' at Wallbridge, under the leadership of Miss Frances Hucks, who is working in the nutrition section of the Home Service Extension Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, entitled, "Eat to Live". There were two sessions, and the ladies enjoyed their own box lunches at noon.

MORNING SESSION RESUME

Mrs. Ernest Carr gave a resume of the morning session. It was pointed out that there are many dangers from drinking raw milk, such as tuberculosis; septic sore throat, and intestinal upsets. There are many ways to pasteurize milk which were outlined.

Canada's food rules are based on the value of milk, fruit, vegetables, cereals and bread; meat and fish in the diet; liver, eggs and cheese are important also for vitamin 'D'.

Mrs. Carr conducted a few special quizz problems on this subject of good eating which had been staged at the workshop.

AFTERNOON SESSION HIGHLIGHTS

Mrs. MacMullen gave the highlights of the afternoon session. In the discussion, "How to choose your snacks wisely.' it was pointed out that apples can be eaten raw between meals. In order to improve your figure, older folk should cut down on second helpings.

The posters that were shown at the workshop emphasized that one should eat a little of everything as the system requires a good variety. Good meals must be planned. By a determined effort health standards can be raised and druggist and doctor bills lowered.

The potato is most necessary for good eating, good health and economy as it has good food value. Potatoes are not fattening, it is the butter or gravy that you put on them.

Miss Hucks was anxious that this new crop of homemakers be given important information re good food. Canada has an abundance of food and the problem is in distributing it evenly.

PLAN BENEFICIAL MEETINGS

Institutes are asked to plan meetings in 1961-62 that will be of most benefit to your own branch. There are 14 subjects in the workshop. When the convener sends in her report to the district annual she should report what has been accomplished in her branch since November 1, 1960.

There are several splendid books dealing with salads, supper dishes, potatoes, proper combining methods and tested recipes. Ten of these booklets and leaflets were passed around so that everyone would know what was available free at the local Department of Agriculture office.

The president closed the meeting, after which the hostess and lunch committee served light refreshments and the group enjoyed a social half hour.

Mrs. John Kane voiced appreciative thanks for hospitality, for the program and for the lunch.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Mrs. T. C. The doctor says my husband can return to his job.

Mr. L. W. — Suppose he gets another heart attack?

• • •

Mrs. T. E. — A few months ago my husband had a coronary attack. He's been under treatment, followed the doctor's orders carefully, and is looking forward to returning to his job as a timekeeper in a baking plant.

To pave the way, I called on Mr. W., who's the personnel manager. He's a bit hesitant and says he has to talk over the advisability of re-hiring my husband with a few people first.

I know it would be a terrible blow to Todd not to get his job back. The doctor has impressed him with the importance of continuing his work, which is sedentary and not too great a strain. O course, if he'd been a coal-heaver he'd have to train for something else. But we're sure he can give full satisfaction again at the same desk as before.

These weeks have made him smarter about taking care of himself, too, so there'll be no more absences, we hope.

• • •

Mr. L. W. — I wish I could just say, "Of course. Let Todd start Monday," to Mrs. E. But it's not as simple as that.

I have to clear matters with the union and the insurance company first. We'll have to study the medical picture, and be pretty certain about Todd's future health, and his regular attendance.

Up to now we haven't employed any known cardiacs. Most of the positions here are too strenuous. And may of them involve the safety of others, with which we can't take any chances. A sudden heart attack of a machine-operator could cause a serious accident.

We've been approached before by the local heart association's placement centre to reserve a few opening for heart patients. But the officials here haven't decided on a company policy about it.

Todd's case, however, is different. He's one of our own and we'll make an individual ruling about him.

• • •

The Council — Fortunately for Mr. and Mrs. E., reports and statistics pile up to bolster the arguments for employing cardiac patients in jobs which do not demand unusual physical exertion. Here are a few fresh facts for Mr. W. to present to the men he must consult on the question.

When Todd's doctor told him he could return to work, the physician was outlining what is becoming s.o.p. (standard operational procedure) for members of the Coronary Club. And of all the patients who take regular jobs, it has been found that seven out of 10 go back to their original one and make eminently good at it!

While the rewards of this trend are obvious from the emotional and morale angles, there are hard-cash returns, too, for all concerned. Todd's union, for example, might rather have him earning a salary than drawing upon union welfare fubds. Similarly, the insurance companies and the employer who must tote up compensation costs. And, most important, the cardiac worker has proven himself a more productive worker than the average!

A study was made of 2,000 cardiacs placed in positions in New York, to see whether they caused disability payments, under the Workmen's Compensation laws, to go up. Over a period of several years it was found that this group made not one single claim!

How to explain the excellent attendance, safety, and production records of the cardiac? Well, for one thing he's a new man! He's propelled by the surge of gratitule and exhilaration welling up inside him at being alive. Now he appreciates things more. And he's careful both on the job and off.

Mr. W. can rest assured that work, for Todd, will not precipitate another attack. In fact work, say the doctors, does not produce heart disease which comes, rather, from a pre-existing arteriosclerosis. Actually there's less chance of an attack for Todd than for the hundreds of "well" employees who think they're in top shape and overstrain.

Yes, Mrs. E., the news on hearts is heartening!

BRODIE
Easy-to-make HOMEMADE PANCAKES

2 cups sifted Brodie XXX Self-Raising Flour
1 egg
1 tablespoon sugar
1⅓ cups milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening or butter

SIFT and measure flour. Beat egg with sugar and milk. Add flour all at once. Mix just until all flour is moistened. Batter will be lumpy. Stir in melted shortening. Pour batter onto moderately hot griddle, greasing for first pancake only. When bubbles appear, turn pancakes and cook until golden brown. Serve immediately with butter and syrup.

YIELD: 1 dozen.

SAVOURY PIZZA

Sauce:
2 2-oz. cans flat anchovies
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups sliced mushrooms (2 8-oz. cans)
½ teaspoon oregano
Dash of pepper
2 cups tomato sauce (2 7-oz. cans)

Topping:
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
Melted butter
Grated parmesan cheese

Dough:
2 cups sifted Brodie XXX Self-raising Flour
¼ cup shortening
⅔ cup milk

DRAIN anchovies and measure 2 tablespoons oil into a skillet. Add onion, garlic and mushrooms. Cook slowly, stirring occasionally, about 5 minutes. Stir in oregano and pepper. Blend in tomato sauce. Save out 12 anchovies for garnish. With scissors cut remaining anchovies into 1-inch pieces. Stir into tomato mixture. Bring to a boil and allow to simmer 15 to 20 minutes.

PREPARE dough: Cut or rub shortening into flour (half pea size). Add milk and mix well. Divide dough into four equal parts. Roll out each portion to 7-inch circle; lift up the edge of the dough. Set on an ungreased baking sheet. Brush with butter. Sprinkle with ⅓ of cheddar cheese. Pour tomato sauce over cheese. Sprinkle remaining cheddar cheese; then sprinkle parmesan cheese. Garnish with anchovies.

BAKE in hot oven (425°F.) 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350°F., moderate, and bake 15 minutes longer.

YIELD: 4 servings.

You'll get Better Results, Here's Why–

There's a big difference in results because there's a wonderful difference in the flour. What is a self-raising flour? Simply this. BRODIE XXX SELF-RAISING FLOUR is a finely milled high quality enriched flour with baking powder and salt already added and thoroughly pre-blended. Now you can enjoy all the extra convenience, and dependability of self-raising flour. Try the recipes on the right and see why BRODIE XXX SELF-RAISING FLOUR is the flour with the wonderful difference.

BRODIE XXX SELF-RAISING FLOUR gives you these three big advantages:

1. Accurate measurements . . . you sift only once.
2. Even blending . . . no chance for 'hot spots' with too much baking powder or 'flat spots' with too little.
3. Perfect leavening . . . Brodie's exclusive baking powder is heat-controlled so your batter cannot rise prematurely.

Konrad Adenauer, World's Oldest Government Chief, Is Facing a Crucial Year

BONN, Germany (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, with a lot of history behind him as the world's oldest government chief, faces a crucial year.

Next fall West Germans elect a new Bundestag (lower house of parliament) and the Socialists hope to win control and replace Adenauer with young West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt.

But Der Alte, as Germans fondly call their unbending old man, isn't worried about Brandt. "As far as the elections are concerned," he said with a rare smile during an interview, "I am in good spirits. I am sure that there won't be any essential changes."

Contrary to predictions by some diplomatic circles, Adenauer does not feel the Russians will produce a new Berlin crisis this spring. "I believe that Khrushchev will first give the new administration in Washington a certain period of time. He is smart enough to know that a new administration must have some time to break in."

A member of the chancellor's staff broke in to say: "People are going to talk about crises until we get one — until Mr. Khrushchev feels challenged to produce one."

The chancellor has good reason to be tired of crises. At 85, he is in his 12th year as leader of West Germany, a bustling, energetic, nation—split from the eastern half of Germany by the Iron Curtain and victim of some of the sharpest tensions of the cold war. Not the least of these is West Berlin, 120 miles inside the Iron Curtain border.

The Berlin problem and any of the other numerous East-West differences can be settled only by controlled disarmament, Adenauer maintains.

"Without controlled disarmamen: there will be no peace and without a real peace all the nations will continue to arm themselves. This armament race is going to be a grave danger to the welfare of the entire world. Peace must finally come, the fear must be lifted from humanity; fear of the future and the fear of a terrible war."

"When one has started with effective controllel disarmament, the entire world political situation will experience such an easing of tensions that one can then solve the other problems."

In his own way the German chancellor has always encouraged a union or community of European states.

Once he remarked: "The unity of Europe was the dream of a few. It became the hope of many. Today it is a necessity for us all."

Asked how he sizes up the chances for a United States of Europe now, he replied:

"It will come. But one must have patience.

"It has never been thought that the European states should give up their independence entirely. But such a union must grow and must develop itself. I am full of confidence and full of hope."

As for meeting Khrushchev before a new summit conference, he says: "Nonsense, it wouldn't accomplish anything."

Another trip much talked about but now apparently indefinitely postponed would have taken Adenauer to the United States in February for a meeting with the new president.

When Kennedy was elected, the chancellor was pictured as being uneasy about the new administration's future foreign policy. But he now seems to have become reassured and gives this view of future world developments:

"World politics will be determined largely by the United States. Naturally, the new president and the new administration in the United States are going to think differently on certain matters that the old administration and the former president. But nevertheless, I am convinced that the basic policies will continue."

With this assumption in mind, Adenauer feels there is a chance—even if only a slim one—that a way can be found to move closer toward world peace.

In the 12 years he has been in office, Adenauer has not changed his habits a bit. He still rises around six every morning and breakfasts an hour later while he scans the morning newspapers and the overnight cables.

He works at home on Saturdays and Sundays. During the little free time he has, Adenauer likes to putter in his garden and tend his roses, to read or listen to classical music.

Two years ago, Adenauer announced he would retire and would seek the ceremonial office of president of West Germany. But a hassle over his successor ensued and he changed his mind.

Since then he has refused to answer any questions about retirement.

Adenauer, as one current story goes, was rocking his five-year-old grandson on his knee and asked the boy what he planned to be when he grew up. "Chancellor," the boy replied.

Adenauer looked at the youngster and said, "You better think of something else, our constitution provides for only one chancellor."

U.S. May Not Need 'Crash' Plan in Missile Production

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The new John Kennedy administration seems to be shifting to the view that United States military strength is adequate and there isn't any need of a "crash" program in missile production.

This is a reversal of the Democrats' position during the presidential election campaign last fall when former president Eisenhower was accused of putting dollar considerations over security and allowing the United States to fall behind Russia in long-range missile production.

The argument that the United States has just as many long-range missiles as Russia now is being voiced in Defence Secretary Robert McNamara's own office, much to the chagrin of some Democratic senators who had urged a big drive in missile output.

Republican candidate Richard Nixon, supported by Eisenhower, countered that the Democratic charges were nonsense and that in over-all deterrent power, the United States was supreme.

McNamara's preliminary investigation of America's relative military strength has led him to the tentative conclusion that Eisenhower may have been right—that in over - all "destruction" power, the United States is ahead of Russia and is likely to remain that way.

What is behind the change in pace?

There seems to be every indication that the American financial situation is a key factor. As Kennedy took office, he was confronted by the immediate need of shoring up American gold reserves and of finding ways of restoring world confidence in the dollar. Balancing the budget is one way of doing his.

In the end Kennedy may have to agree with Eisenhower who, departed from his office with these words: "The 'bomber gap' of several years ago was always a fiction and the 'missile gap' shows every sign of being the same."

"Look, Dad." Paul pointed t the paper on which he'd been figuring. "Four years ago I was twice as old as Linda.

His father looked. "So what?" he asked. "Nothing very odd about that."

"Maybe not," said the boy. "But now I'm only half again as old as she is."

Well! How old was she?

Union Manager Fined $200 For Counselling

KITCHENER (CP) — Union business manager Charles Anderson of Kitchener was fined $200 in court here Tuesday after being convicted of counselling and inciting bricklayers to damage property during a strike.

Anderson and his lawyer, M. M. Walters of Kitchener, said at the close of the two-day hearing they plan to appeal the decision. The change, thought to be the first laid in Canada, has no legal precedent.

Evidence was that Anderson, business manager of the local Building Trades Council, said at a bricklayers' union meeting Dec. 6 the cause of the striking electricians could be helped by bending some conduits, blocking pipes and wire-cutting.

Mr. Walters claimed in his summary that the charge was part of a "diabolical plot to discredit organized labor." He said local contractors consider Anderson a thorn in their side and that they were attempting to do by law what they could not do at the bargain table, to "abuse, undermine and blacken the name of the construction trades in Kitchener."

JUDGE INTERRUPTS

He was introduced by Judge David Charlton and Crown Attorney Harold Daufmann and apologided after alleging that George Durocher, chief negotiator for the contractors, was behind a plot to "get at . . . his arch enemy."

Anderson said earlier in the witness box that to the best of his ability he remembered telling the bricklayers that there had been similar accusations of mischief in strikes in other areas, "even though in normal times these accidents happen."

He said union officials warned him before the meeting that three foremen who had previously been known to carry information to employers would be present and that as a result he was careful what he said.

Judge Charlton said in his summary that union officials had been evasive while giving evidence, perhaps from loyalty to Anderson, while six Crown witnesses, bricklayers employed by the same firm, appeared experienced and reliable men.

Denies Saying Seamen's Union Behind Beatings

MONTREAL (CP) — The Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) at a meeting today is to look into reports that a former patrolman for the union has told the Canadian Labor Congress he can implicate the union in beatings.

An SIU spokesman said Michael Sheehan has denied telling anyone he can involve the SIU in beatings of its foes, and denied turning over any documents to CLC.

Sheehan said he would be at the meeting to explain, the SIU said. The meeting is one of the union's regular twice-monthly membership gatherings.

Sheehan was not available for comment. The CLC has not commented.

Toronto reports said Tuesday Sheehan broke with the SIU last month and told the CLC about roughhouse tactics ordered by the union.

The union said Sheehan had been "discontented and a trouble-maker" for some time, and that he resigned as a patrolman Jan. 25. He did not resign his union membership.

A patroman acts as representative for union headquarters in dealing with crews and shipping companies.

The SIU was expelled from the CLC last April for raiding the National Association of Marine Engineers, which has since merged with the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

(The published reports that the Canadian Labor Congress is investigating claims of union beatings and intimidation reached the floor of the Commons Tuesday.

(Douglas Fisher (CCF—Port Arthur) asked whether the government has under study any information of alleged intimidation or beatings "related to the activities of Hal Banks or the SIU in the transportation field."

SAVED BY SNOW

NEW YORK (AP)—Nereida Rodriquez is one New Yorker grateful for last weekend's snow storm. Nereida, 16, fell seven storeys from a kitchen window of her home Tuesday — and landed in a four-foot snow drift. She suffered a possible spine fracture, possible rib fractures and a cut on her right leg.

Abortive Revolt Against Portugal's Salazar Regime Brings Fear to Angola City

By official count, 27 persons were killed in the uprising that followed closely the seizure of Portugal's luxury liner Santa Maria by foes of Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

(A direct dispatch from Luanda which came through Portuguese censorship Tuesday night quoted police officials as saying a total of 31 persons were killed during the weekend.)

Secret police moved quickly to stamp out the embers of revolt in Angola and to keep the news from the outside world.

Cable and telephone communications were almost completely sealed off.

The secret police have imposed almost total censorship. Luanda post office officials, who control the telegraph office, do not conceal their amusement when foreign correspondents present cables for transmission.

Some dispatches are being smuggled out of Luanda by road and air. Pilots of non-Portuguese airlines flying into Luanda are bringing out dispatches to Johannesburg and Leopoldville. Occasionally businessmen travelling by road to the Congo frontier carry dispatches.

In the hours immediately following the revolt and the shooting in the native quarter, there were no outward signs of panic in Luanda.

Angola radio made no mention of disturbances. Townsfolk continued their normal pursuits while secret police rounded up prospective troublemakers.

The city's 250,000 whites, Negroes and mulattos—for years under strict Portuguese colonial rule—were even afriad to talk among themselves about the uprising.

Few citizens in the colony on Africa's west coast appeared interested in visiting the scenes of the weekend shootings or of gathering around the jail where rioters killed seven in an attempt to free prisoners.

Houses near the jail showed signs of a battle. Windows were shattered and bullet holes pockmarked the brick and concrete walls.

In the drive leading up to the jail, there were traces of blood. The blood-spattered wooden entrance to the jail remained unwashed.

While reporters watched, several onlookers were arrested, apparently simply for having come to the scene. They offered no resistance.

Demand for Canadianization Growing, Report Shows

OTTAWA (CP)—A "remarkable readiness' on the part of Canadians to fear and mistrust United States penetration of the Canadian economy is noted in a report released Tuesday.

It goes hand in hand with a readiness to believe that U.S. business, "whether consciously or not," is reshaping the Canadian economy to its own image and redirecting Canadian economic development.

Consequently, the "demand for Canadianization is growing," says the report prepared for the Canadian - American committee, a research group composed of representatives of business, labor, agriculture and the professions of both countries.

The 80-page report is based on a study of policies and practices of United States subsidiares in Canada and was written by John Lindeman, Washington economic consultant, and Professor Donald Armstrong of McGill University's school of commerce.

The authors say there is an inadequate awareness on the part of American businessmen of the intensity of Canadian nationalism.

On the other hand criticism of U.S. business enterprises by Canadians — "including some in high places" — is in some respects unreasonable, they hold. "Often it involves sweeping generalizations based on the alleged actions of a few companies."

The report suggests that the problem has its roots in absentee ownership and control. "Absentee ownership is never popular, even when it exists within a given country. . . . But when the absentee owners live in another country and when the total proportion of the resources they own or control is as large as the present control of Canadian industries by Americans, the consequent resentment and disquiet is bound to become greater and more serious."

In many cases U.S. management "could pay more attention to Canadian aspirations while still meeting its responsibilities to the stockholder."

At a press conference marking the release of the report R. M. Fowler, Canadian co-chairman of the committee, said there is a "very real danger" that American investment will be frightened away by the growing volume of criticism in Canada of U.S. business. There were other areas of the world ready to compete with Canada for the American investment dollar.

Water Shortage Has Effect On Forests and Wildlife

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Southern Ontario's water shortage, which has been plaguing farmers for several months, may have effects on forests and wildlife as well.

Douglas Clark, chief of the fish and wildlife section of the department of lands and forests, said many swamp areas which are dry have a killing effect on muskrat.

"When they can't swim under the ice, they come out on top and wander around," he said. "Unless they can find water again, they only last a short time."

He said it won't be known how the low water levels affected fish until the ice melts.

"There are some shallow inlets where there may be a die-off because thick ice reduces the oxygen supply," he said.

T. E. Mackey, chief of the department's forest protection service said there could be a great fire danger if not enough snow falls.

"The frost has gone deep into the ground because there isn't enough snow," he said. "There might be a rapid runoff in the spring."

Such a runoff would prevent water from penetrating into the ground, he said.

Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission officials said below normal storage conditions have prevailed since the fall of 1960, but power supplies have not been affected.

A. K. Watt, supervisor of the Ontario Water Resources Commission's ground water branch said the only hope for relief is a slow thaw or heavy rainfall in the spring.

Premier Frost Pays Tribute To Indians

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost paid tribute in the legislature Tuesday to the 30,000 Indians in Ontario and the provincial advisory committee on Indian affairs.

Present in the assembly were Canada's only Indian senator, James Gladstone of Alberta, a Blackfoot Indian, and Chief Elliot Moses of the Ohsweken reservation at Brantford, a Delaware Indian.

The advisory committee was seated in the public gallery.

Earlier, at a meeting between the advisory committee and the department of welfare, Senator Gladstone said he is in favor of scrapping the Indian Act.

He said after a recent trip through Saskatchewan and Alberta he came to the conclusion the federal act is not working. Many Indians feel the federal act helps the Indian affairs branch more than it protects the rights of Indians, he added.

JAIL NEWSPAPER MEN

COLOGNE, Germany (AP)—Four Communist newspaper men Tuesday were given prison sentences totalling 51 months on charges of plotting against the West German state. They published a weekly newspaper for the Communist party, outlawed in West Germany.

Crump, Taylor Asked to Join New Council

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker is gathering topnotch Canadian industrial leaders into membership of the National Productivity Council, an informed source says.

Each not only will contribute his own executive talents, but will be expected to lend the facilities of his companies and associated interests to support the council's work.

The 25-man body, authorized by Parliament before Christmas, is to include representatives of labor, agriculture, government and consumers in addition to the industrial figures. The council's purpose is to spark improvement in the competitive position of Canadian products on both domestic and foreign markets.

Typical of the men being invited to serve are three who, among them, have management interests in 57 domestic and foreign firms, foundations, universities and influential clubs.

HAVE WIDE INTERESTS

They are:

N. R. Crump, president of the CPR, with side interests in mining and smelting, investment and trust companies, and the School of Business Administration at the University of Western Ontario.

G. C. Metcalf, president of Loblaw Companies Limited and president and managing director of George Weston Limited, representing Garfield Weston interests in Canada. He also has interests in other grocery concerns, in the candy and confectionery field, and in packaging.

E. P. Taylor, president of Argus Corporation, with management responsibilities in five breweries, and in chain grocery stores, forestry, paper and chemical firms, banks, insurance and trust companies.

3 Masked Men Meet Staff At the Door

OTTAWA (CP) — Three masked men who spent most of the night inside the Sacred Heart Caisse Populaire (credit union) met the staff at the door Tuesday and robbed the parish bank of $20,000.

Detectives said it was a "cleverly contrived" robbery.

The men apparently had a key to the front door of the building on downtown Laurier Avenue and spent the night drinking pop and milk and smoking cigarets in the manager's office.

Teller Serge Belanger, 18, and assistant manager Joseph Maisoneuve, 58, were the first to arrive. They unlocked the door and were met by two men wearing Hallowe'en masks and a third masked by a flour bag in which eye-holes had been cut.

CARRIED A GUN

One bandit held a sawed-off shotgun on the two while his companions tied them to chairs and gagged them with adhesive tape. Five other staff members arrived and were greeted the same way.

Manager Paul Pellerin was forced to open two safes. The cash and part of a valuable coin collection stored by the bank were stuffed into the manager's valise.

Bank officials said a key which was lost last summer may have been used by the trio to gain entry.

It was the second robbery at the credit union bank in less than three years. A $15,000 holdup in 1958 resulted in the arrest of two men who were sentenced to penitentiary. The money was recovered.

CHURCH CONTESTS WILL

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—The Episcopal (Anglican) Church has filed a suit here contesting the will of one of its longtime parishioners who bequeathed $260,000 to a Roman Catholic nursing home. The petition filed Tuesday asserts that Mrs. Sylvia Ann Morgan, an Episcopalian for most of her active 93 years, "was not of sound mind" when she made out a new will after her conversion to catholicism and shortly before her death last Dec. 20. She didn't leave the Episcopal Church a dime, the petition said.

If King's Bid for Odhams Press Goes Through He Will Be Biggest Publisher

LONDON (CP) — If Cecil Harmsworth King's bid for Odhams Press goes through, most people on Fleet Street will be prepared to accept King as the world's biggest newspaper publisher.

Much depends on the terms of reference—whether biggest refers to circulation, number of individual papers or money power.

Some weeks ago, Lord Beaverbrook was quoted as saying that his group sells more newspapers than any other in Britain. King is understood to have replied that Lord Beaverbrook does not sell more than 36,000,000 a week, and that he, King, sells 37,000,000.

If the Odhams deal is completed, King's Daily Mirror group will take over The Daily Herald, selling nearly 1,500,000 copies a day, and The People, a Sunday paper with a circulation of 5,468,000. Also involved would be the enormous Odhams magazine empire.

But there are suggestions that King, if successful in his bid for Odhams, might dispose of The Daily Herald and possibly of The People.

All complications aside, Fleet Street sources say it looks as though acquisition of Odhams would give King control of the world's largest mass-communications system, counting newspapers and magazines.

Other major figures in the British newspaper field include two Canadians, Beaverbrook and Roy Thomson; Lord Rothermere, a cousin of King; and those in control of Odhams Press.

The so-called "independents" of Fleet Street, with smaller circulations but considerable influence, include Lord Camrose's Daily Telegraph and Sunday Telegraph; The Observer, a Sunday newspaper; The Times; and The Guardian.

The Mirror group, with a profit last year of £,400,000, publishes The Daily Mirror, a brash and breezy morning tabloid with a circulation of 4,649,000.

The group has extensive newsprint and television interests. It also runs newspapers in West Africa and the West Indies. It has relinquished control of newspaper properties in Australia.

Lord Beaverbrook, 81, still takes an active interest in the day-to-day operation of his papers, including The Daily Express, which runs second to The Daily Mirror with a daily sale of 4,270,000. The group's profit last year was £2,000,000.

Lord Rothermere's properties include The Daily Mail, circulation 2,825,000, The Evening News and Sunday Dispatch. Unlike his father, the first Lord Rothermere, who sought to play a political role behind the scenes, the present lord appears to run his papers principally as a money - making concern. The company's profit last year was £3,400,000.

Thomson runs or controls some 90 newspapers, counting his interests in Canada and the United States. Before King bid for Odhams, Thomson had proposed a merger of most of his interests with Odhams.

Most of Fleet Street's press lords—and commoners—lean to the right in politics. King, however, styles himself as an independent Liberal, and Sir Christopher Chancellor, boss of Odhams, is regarded as left of centre.

Small Packing Plants May Disappear

TORONTO (CP) — William P. Watson, Ontario livestock commissioner, predicted Tuesday that many of Ontario's 1,000 small meat packing plants will disappear within two years.

He told the Meat Packers' Council of Canada the plants would not be able to meet standards of sanitation and types of buildings. The 1,000 plants supply about 20 per cent of the meat sold in the province.

Slaughtering in the small plants was not done under inspection, he said. Each must be brought up to standard or go out of business.

He said efforts were being made to introduce inspection of all meat sold in the province, but the step would be costly.

Retiring President James O. Simpson of Barrie said the onus had been placed on the Canadian meat industry to produce a superior product since the lifting of the embargo on United States pork.

He urged the producers, processors and consumers to strive for better understanding of each other's problems.

The council named J. Douglas Small of Kitchener as president. Vice - presidents include A. T. Beresford, Kitchener.

BLANC RECOVERING

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Comedian Mel Blanc, injured in an auto collision Jan. 24, is resting comfortably and is in satisfactory condition at UCLA medical centre. Blanc, 51—the voice of Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig and other cartoon film characters—suffered head injuries and multiple fractures of the pelvis.

Silent Bob McGregor, Dean Of House, Tells Real Age

After at least 35 years of reticence on the topic, he confessed to 74 years. Born in 1886, he'll be 75 March 1.

Ever since he entered the Commons in 1926 as Conservative member for the Toronto-area constituency of York South, the terse biography he provided for the Parliamentary Guide made no reference to his age.

The Hon. Robert H. McGregor since his elevation to the Privy Council late last year, he is known among fellow MPs as "silent Bob" because he rarely speaks in the Commons.

"If a good many honorable members made fewer speeches in this House, they would be here longer," he said once last year.

However, he is active in Commons committee work and is reported to be outspoken in the privacy of party caucus meetings.

Of his own election successes there is no doubt. He has contested nine federal elections and won them all — two in York South and seven in York East which he has represented continuously since 1935.

At 74, Mr. McGregor is the second oldest member of the Commons. The oldest is J. M. Macdonnell, Conservative member for Toronto Greenwood who is 76.

Mr. McGregor ranks as dean for continuous service although he has a rival in Hon. Earl Rowe (PC — Dufferin-Simcoe) who was first elected in 1925 but was out of the Commons for a little more than 12 months in 1936-37 when he was leader of the Ontario Conservative party.

A successful contractor, Mr. McGregor made the admission about his age in a chat about a bit of personal history he believes unique in Canadian parliamentary annalls. He is one of four students from a one-room Toronto-area school who all became Conservative members of Parliament and sat together in the Commons—one is Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The first to enter the House was the late Joseph Harris who represented Toronto Danforth from 1921 until his death in 1952, aged 64. Mr. McGregor was the second, in 1923. George Tustin, 71, of Napanee, joined them in 1935 as MP for Prince Edward-Lennox. All three were at Plain Roads School in East York at the same time.

Mr. Diefenbaker, 65, who entered the House in 1940, was a later student at the sam school when his father, William T. Diefenbaker, was the teacher.

POLICE CARTOONIST — Harold Mollon, 31, a full-time cartoonist with the Hamilton police force, uses his talents in safety talks to school children, composite drawings of wanted criminals, sketches of shoplifting devices and in crime-prevention cartoons. His drawings have become a familiar feature on television and in a weekly newspaper since he joined the Hamilton force in 1951. (CP Photo).

Hamilton Police Force Hires Full-Time Cartoonist

Three times weekly his cartoons, injected with humor but carrying a message or a warning, are shown on television. A weekly newspaper feature called Police Pointers uses them and businessmen receive them in the mail.

Mr. Mollon joined the force in 1951 and spent two years pounding the beat. He had spent a term studying art at Hamilton Technical Institute and had taken correspondence courses. He kept his hand in by lettering doors of police cruisers.

His artistic ability was put to fulltime use when he was assigned to the safety division. Carrying his easel and crayons, he made the rounds of schools, illustrating his safety talks to children.

"If my message doesn't get across to them I know I've made it too complicated."

DREW CRIMINALS

Last March Mr. Mollon became identification officer and his talent was put to use in such fields as police maps and composite drawings of wanted criminals.

But Chief Leonard Lawrence wasn't satisfied that Mr. Mollon was being properly exploited. He set up an easel in his crime prevention bureau and gave it to the artist.

In December Mr. Mollon was busy instructing staffs of large department stores in techniques of shoplifters.

"Our cartoons showed every type of shoplifting device from booster boxes to booster bloomers," he says.

The purpose of his job, he adds, is to pick out the type of crime that is causing the most trouble and show the public what can be done to combat it.

"At one point we were having trouble with thefts of car accessories. I drew a cartoon that showed a man standing by his car. The car was jacked up and wheels were gone. His wife was saying to him: 'Go to sleep, sez smarty. Do you still think those were only cats I heard last night?'"

Beneath the cartoon a message warns that suspicious sounds are not always cats and that police would rather check 100 unfounded reports than miss a chance to nab a prowler.

50 Prime Pelts Will Be Shown In Europe

TORONTO (CP) — The province has purchased more than 50 prime pelts to display in Europe, Lands and Forests Minister Spooner said Monday.

He told the legislature that the furs, purchased at the Ontario Trappers' Association auction at North Bay during the weekend, would be sent to the federal department of trade and commerce to show major fur centres in Europe the high quality of Ontario furs.

Mr. Spooner was describing the auction, which earned trappers a record $132,510 for about 18,000 pelts. Three more sales are slated for March, April and May and total sales are expected to reach $500,000.

The Ontario display includes beaver, fisher, mink, marten, otter, lynx, red fox and weasel.

There are about 12,000 registered trappers in Ontario.

Sitting in the public gallery while Mr. Spooner spoke were Gilbert Grawbarger of Restoule, Ont., president of the Trappers' Association, and two Indian trappers, John Michael Hunter of Winisk and George Councillor of Fort Frances.

Wallbridge

WALLBRIDGE — The Wallbridge LOBA, No. 1168, catered at Scott's Sales Barn, on Tuesday and had a real busy time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Acker of Belleville, were recent callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Spencer.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Langabeer, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pound and children, Dale, Cheryl and Sandra, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dovey were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs Frank Harris.

Wallbridge W.A. held its potluck dinner on Wednesday with a good attendance. The teachers and pupils enjoyed a hot dinner. Proceeds were $23.40.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris attended the 35th wedding anniversary celebration of Mr. and Mrs. John Taylor of Hillier at the home of their daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Pound. The evening was spent in games, after which Mr. Harvey Putman showed the slides of his trip to Africa. A large number of relatives and friends were present. After the program refreshments were served and a beautiful anniversary cake centred the table. Mr. Harry H. Pound was chairman and spoke in high esteem of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, and others spoke briefly. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were presented with a beautiful chair, for which they thanked all for their kindness.

Church service was well attended on Sunday afternoon. Next Sunday is vacant.

Farmers are low in water, as many wells and cisterns are dry and it is necessary to haul water for their cattle.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Garrison attended the funeral of Mrs. Sam Townsend on Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Acker of Brantford, called on Mr. and Mrs. Ed Spencer on Monday.

Doctors Jump Ahead of Nature With Made-to-Measure Bones

Broken human bones will soon be mended simply, quickly, and painlessly by plastic adhesives. This spectacular jump ahead of nature has been made by doctors working in the surgical research unit of the Sydney Hospital. All they need now is the perfect plastic, "which is the perfect plastic, "which should not be long in coming". The plastic method has been tried out on, among others, a 77-year-old woman who had a fractured upper arm which refused to unite. The woman was ready for discharge without pain, sling or splint seven days after the operation, and had full use of her arm.

By OLIVER HOGUE

SYDNEY, Australia: It will not be long now before human bones are being mended simply, quickly, and painlessly by plastic adhesives.

Doctors at the surgical research unit of Sydney Hospital, Prince of Wales Division, have perfected a stream-lined method of surgery to replace the of earlier, cumbersome method that was too drawn-out in the operating theatre. All they need now is the perfect plastic.

Research doctors are co-operating with plastic manufacturers to achieve this, and, according to the medical superintendent of the Prince of Wales Division, Dr. R. F. Kaye-Webster, "it should not be too long before we have the perfect plastic.

"Without doubt this is the treatment of the future, and within a comparatively short time the bonding of fractured bones by plastic adhesives will be universal".

Dr. Kaye-Webster went on: "You may remember that in 1958 it was announced that a Sydney doctor had made a discovery of world-wide importance. He used a plastic substance that knitted broken bones in sheep within hours.

"To some extent this plastic had replaced welding in industry for the bonding of metals and other surfaces, but had never been applied to surgery.

TESTED ON HUMANS

"Shortly afterwards it was announced that the method had been tried on two humans — a 77-year-old woman who had a fractured upper arm which refused to unite, and a 25-year-old man who had both bones of his right leg broken.

"The woman was ready for discharge without pain, sling or splint, seven days after the operation, and had full use of her arm. "The man's broken bones had been plated and were reunited after nine months. Within several days of the new operation he was able to put his full weight on the leg and walk three paces. Without the operation he would probably have lost the leg eventually."

"What has happened since and how many humans have been treated?" I asked Dr. Kaye-Webster.

He replied, "We have done the operation on 30 humans with varying degrees of success.

'Many of these were chosen because they were elderly, with fractures that had not united over many years.

"We found that the methods we were using were too cumbersome and so we restored the whole project to the research department, in short, we went back to the animals to find a less tedious approach and better plastic.

"As I've said, we have now got down to the stream-lined method and we need only the perfect plastic, which should not be long in coming".

Dr. Kaye-Webster said other research projects were going ahead into brain, coronary, liver, and gall bladder diseases.

"By his experimental surgery on about 50 sheep a Sydney surgeon perfected his technique for replacing diseased aortas (main blood vessels) with nylon fabric", he said.

"There are now quite a number of people in Sydney with articicial aortas who otherwise would have had to go overseas for the operation.

"Our work here is limited only by finance. We need a pathological laboratory and more modern theatre equipment.

'Apart from research, the great value of the unit is the magnificent training it gives resident med illifoaceifrscn resident medical officers in surgery".

Dr. Kaye-Webster said he was just about to close the unit in the middle of 1957 because it was so badly in debt.

"Through Randwick Rotary Club a committee of wholesale meat traders paid our debt and ever since has provided us free with all the sheep and fodder we need", he said.

AIDED BY ROTARY

"Randwick Rotary Club in the year ended June, 1959, raised $30,000 for us.

"Half of this was spent for research equipment in the cancer unit and half for the purchase of scientific equipment for the experimental surgery unit. After this our work was able to go ahead by leaps and bounds.

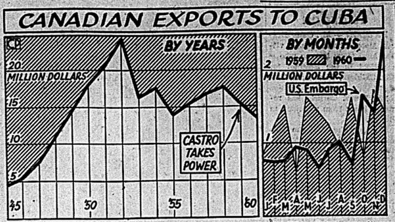
"We are very grateful also to the Waterside Workers' Federation and the P. and O. — Orient Line and other kind persons for donations".

Dr. Kaye-Webster said that at an earlier stage the only thing that saved the surgical unit fro mfailure was the fact that the professor of pathology at Sydney University kindly undertook to do some of his work on vascular diseases at the centre.

Dr. Kaye-Webster said an "image interpreter" had been ordered from overseas. This was type of X-ray machine that would photograph and throw on a television screen various functions inside the human body.

For example, you could see blood circulation and what was going on in the heart and bigger blood vessels.

"I only hope we have the funds to pay for it — just under $30,000', he added.



TOTAL SALES DECLINE — Canadian exports to Cuba last December rose sharply but total sales for 1960 were the lowest in 12 years.

Graphs show trends in domestic exports to the Caribbean island from 1945 to 1960 and monthly sales during the last two years.

After Fidel Castro took power January 1, 1959, Canadian exports went into a decline. The 1958 level was $17,595,000. In 1959 the figure was $15,222,179 and last year it was $13,037,869, lowest since the $10,987,000 in 1948.

A United States embargo of almost all exports to Cuba went into effect last Oct. 20. Canadian exports in November fell to $1,437,000 from $1,715,000 in the same month a year earlier. But in December they rose to $2,454,000 compared with $1,411,000 in December, 1959. (CP Newsmap.)

FINED FOR BOOTLEGGING

OSHAWA (CP) — An unemployed father of six was fined $100 and costs Monday after testifying he sold liquor in his home to keep up house payments when his benefits ran out. Benoit Roy, 34, sold liquor to a plain clothes policeman Jan. 27. Police seized 210 pints of beer and a quantity of liquor and wine.

Many Pilots To Lose Jobs

TORONTO (CP)—Trans-Canada Air Lines announced Monday 104 pilots and flight engineers will lose their jobs this year when the airline's new turbo-prop airplanes are in operation.

TCA has ordered 23 Vickers Vanguards, each capable of carrying 96 passengers. The first of the big turbo - prop planes was introduced into Trans-Canada service Feb. 1.

Nearly all the pilots and engineers are expected to find jobs in Europe. A TCA spokesman said 14 already have been hired by Ireland's Aer Lingus while British European Airways is interviewing men for 50 jobs now open. BEA is expected to have 100 vacancies before winter.

The spokesman said the men will be furloughed during the next six months and the airline will do everything possible to find jobs for them.

The majority of men to lose jobs—78—are based at Montreal; 17 are based in Toronto, five at Winnipeg and four at Vancouver.

TCA has about 840 flight-deck personnel.

MADOC

C of C Elects Committee Members

MADOC — The Chamber of Commerce held its regular meeting in Blue's dining hall on Wednesday evening with the president, Verse McMurray, in charge and E. T. Nayler as installing officer for 1961.

Guests present were the Reeves of Sidney, Elzevir, Huntingdon and Madoc townships; members of Madoc village council; past warden Earl Sager and warden Harleigh Hamilton.

At an executive meeting earlier held in council chambers, it was decided to notify all hotel and motel operators of the forthcoming International Plowing Match, asking them to notify the committees of the match of the accommodation that they will have available at that time.

It was announced that the speakers for the next dinner meeting would be Mr. Roy Sills and Phil Flagler, of CJBQ and that the March meeting would be under the direction of the Lands and Forests committee.

The following were appointed chairmen of the various committees: retail merchants — Kel Kincaid; agriculture — Wilfred Forestell: tourist publicity — James Keller; industrial — Gordon Pigden; membership and attendance — Tom Ross, Jack Stewart; civic officers — Tom Burnside. All chairmen were given power to add to their committees.

est thought of instituting moratorium proceedings," said Mr. Frost.

Debating transport department estimates, Mr. Frost termed "silly" a suggestion by Mr. Wintermeyer that improved railway commuter service be encouraged so it would be unnecessary to build expensive roads.

Transport Minister Rowntree complained "what about my estimates?" when the debate sidetracked into subsidization for various transport systems.

Kenneth Bryden (CCF — Toronto Woodbine) wanted the capital cost of Toronto's subway subsidized, and Education Minister Robarts wanted a subsidy for the transit system in his home city of London.

The transport estimates were $5,163,000—$500,000 higher than last year.

Mr. Frost said if subsidies were given for subway construction they would have to be given for other transportation systems, particularly bus lines.

RADAR FOR BUSES?

On the issue of school buses, Mr. Wintermeyer suggested a study be made of a radar device for bus roofs that is said to be capable of spotting a train.

The committee on private bills slashed a Toronto bill to shreds going through six of 11 sections, passing one, amending three and kiling one—Toronto council's favorite banning trailers from the city.

Leo Troy (L—Nipissing) said a trailer ban would be discrimination against the industry.

One amended section gives the city the right to rent parking space on streets where two-thirds of the municipal electors agree by petition.

The only uncontested section of the bill was for authorization of a 1960 grant of $2,000 for the families of five immigrant workers killed in a tunnel accident.

Rawdon

RAWDON — Mr. Omer Dracup, Margaret and Richard visited Miss Mary Dracup who is a patient in the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, on Saturday.

Mr. Ernest Carlisle has returned home from a holiday in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McMullen and daughter, Muriel, spent the weekend in Toronto and attended the funeral of her brother, Mr. Thomas Leslie Brownson, on Saturday morning, February 4th.

Rawdon circuit A.O.T.S. Club convened Thursday evening at Wellman's Orange Hall. The guest speaker was Mr. Taylor Franklin, Bellevilel. The entertainment was provided by Messrs. Sherwood Reid; Burton Wrightman, and Major Fraser.

A chimney fire at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Reid, 4th concession, burned a large hole in the single roof. It was most fortunate that the home was saved with the assistance of neighbors.

William R. Mcadam held a special meeting at Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Church hall and during the evening the men in attendance were shown films dealing with up to date wood cutting operations.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen were supper guests on Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sid Demorest, of Marmora.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Wrightman, Havelock, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. M. Wrightman.

Wellman's W.I. completed the Senior Training Course on "Window Draperies".

Mrs. S. Leonard, Stirling, spent list week with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Couch and Lyle.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Keating, Marmora, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sharp and sons.

Union to Launch New Round Of Negotiations

OTTAWA (CP) —The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers CLC was authorized Tuesday by its locals to launch a new round of negotiations with the CNR to overhaul and streamline outdated working rules and seniority rosters.

It will mean the first full-scale revamping of the brotherhood's working agreements with the CNR in 15 years, involving such employees as expressmen, freight handlers, truck drivers, clerks, shop laborers, stores workers and others.

About 20,000 CNR workers will be directly involved. The brotherhood wants to protect changes aimed at increasing present employees in the face of major organizational changes on the CNR — efficiency and business.

Most dramatic change is the possible integration of express, cartage and freight handling departments — a step that will cut across existing departmental contracts between the railway and union.

HOW YOUR LIVER BILE HELPS BREAK DOWN FATS
IN THE DIGESTIVE TRACT

Laboratory tests have now proved that liver bile emulsifies fats . . . actually breaks them down. It is an established fact that when liver bile is added to fatty solids, the fats are broken down and form a smooth, easy-flowing mix.

In your digestive tract, liver bile helps break down fats the same way. Many of the foods you eat reach the digestive tract as undigested fatty solids. Your golden liver bile helps break down these fats . . . for easier and more complete digestion.

Carter's Little Liver Pills' exclusive formula of vegetable ingredients relieves irregularity gently and effectively. At the same time, it actually improves the flow of liver bile needed to break down fats in your digestive tract.

So when you feel sluggish, headachy, nervous and need a laxative, take Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Hees Asks Labor Management To Copy Europe

TORONTO (CP)—Labor and management must copy Europe and get together to put Canada back into a competitive position in the world market, Trade Minister Hees said Tuesday.

He told the Canadian Manufacturers Association that the federal government has gone as far as it can towards helping to sell Canadian products abroad. Now a labor-management drive was needed to bring about better designs, higher quality and lower costs to beat the competition in foreign markets.

Mr. Hees said Canada's main problem in the export market today is that "we had it so soft for so long after the war, when war-devastated countries bought our goods at our price."

"We got the idea that this sort of thing could go on forever. We've become like the champion boxer who thinks he can't be beaten and who lets himself get out of condition.

Mr. Hees said the countries of Europe have become "lean and hungry" in the world trading market and are taking market opportunities from Canada.

Businessmen should take the initiative, inviting union leaders to sit down with management and study ways of better production at lower cost. A "mutual trust and understanding" was vital to bring about results.

Text of his address was issued to the press before delivery.

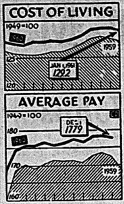
6th Sidney

6TH SIDNEY — Mr. and Mrs. Edison Sine entertained several friends Friday evening, who were: Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sine and children, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Dafoe and children, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Dafoe, Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Sine and Brian, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Phillips and Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Dafoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Sine and Brian were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don Lucas, Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wright, Ricky and Susan, Stirling, were Sunday supper guests of Mrs. Morley Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe, Mr. and Mrs. Carman Frost, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Faul were Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Avery Martyn.



FRACTIONAL DECLINE — Canada's cost-of-living index eased slightly to 129.2 at Jan. 1 from 129.6 a month earlier. It was the first decline since it dipped one-tenth of a point to 127.5 at July 1 before rising to a record 129.6 at Nov. 1.

Accident Rate Exaggerated Says Premier

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost Tuesday night charged a Liberal meber of the legislature with exaggerating Ontario's traffic accident rate.

"The accident rate is getting worse and worse every day," said Vernon Singer (L—Toronto York Centre), suggesting more spot vehicle checks by police.

The death rate has diminished and the accident ratio has fallen off, Mr. Frost said.

"You said the incidence of accidents is getting worse. That is not true . . . We don't gain anything by saying to our people that the situation is getting worse."

Mr. Singer caused a flurry when he said the only jurisdiction to reduce the traffic accident rate is Connecticut, which increased its law enforcement.

"Nothing could satisfy you," shouted Mr. Frost. "You're trying to bring in the law of the jungle."

Bonarlaw

BONARLAW — The sincere sympathy of the community is extended to the family of the late Clarence Jeffery, whose sudden death occurred February 4th, at Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. Chas. McInroy was taken to Belleville General Hospital, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Burkitt, called on Mr. L. R. Green who is undergoing treatment in Belleville General Hospital.

Thieves broke into W. J. Barlow's general store early Saturday morning and made off with considerable merchandise, food and meat. Mr. Art Neal saw the open door when he came to meet the 3 o'clock train and roused up Mr. Barlow.

DEFICIT DROPS — A five-per-cent increase in Canada's export sales during 1960 helped cut the country's trade deficit for the year to $100,500,000, the smallest since 1954.

The deficit — excess of merchandise imports over exports — was cut to slightly more than one-quarter of the 1959 deficit of $368,600,000.

Czech Scientist Given 5 Years For Espionage

HAIFA, Israel (Reuters)—Czech-born scientist Kurt Sitte, recognized authority of cosmic radiation Tuesday was jailed for five years on charges of spying for an unnamed East European power.

Sitte, head of the Israeli Technology Institute's physics department was arrested last June by security police. His trial on seven counts of passing information to a foreign power started in November. The press and public were barred from the hearings.

The 51-year-old physicist, imprisoned in Buchenwald concentration camp by the Nazis during the war, taught at universities in Britain and the United States before coming here in 1954.

Before his arrest, Sitte was said to be working on methods of protecting space travellers from cosmic radiation, research undertaken under a grant from the U.S. Air Force.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Is this the year of the demotion of the Mighty Canadiens and new housing conditions for the Stanley Cup.

Are the Habitants in serious trouble and are the Toronto Maple Leafs as rough and tough as they appear to be? A lot of their supporters think they are.

Last weekend the Habitants looked anything but a championship squad. The saucy Hawks from Chicago knocked them out of first place Saturday night, and on Sunday the impudent Red Wings clobbered them 7-2, the last time anybody defeated them by five goals since the Rangers mauled them 8-3 last season.

They have won only one of their last seven starts and are three points behind the high-flying Leafs, despite the fact (shush, no publicity, please) their Big M has been held tight by opposing players.

It is the first time in four years the Canadiens have been out of the top slot since late in the season.

And whatever has happened to Charlie Hodge. The near-sensation has been slipping of late and anti-Canadien fans are bleating it is because Doug Harvey has been on the injury sidelines.

Jacques Plante, the knitting custodian of the Habs who was sent down to the Eastern Professional League at his own request, didn't cause any furore in that circuit. In fact "Jake the Snake" proved a lot better pulling in the shekels at the box office than he did keeping pucks out of the net.

Plante or no Plante and Hodge or no Hodge, the fact cannot be denied that the loss of Harvey back of the blueline had some effect on Canadiens as a whole. It is passing strange, too, because in former years the loss of one or two key players temporarily did not affect the Habs too much, at least never causing them to lose their grip on the league perch.

Meanwhile the Leafs have a three-point hold on the top rung and they intend hanging on to it come hell or high water. Their fans hereabouts are on Cloud 72, digging in their spurs and pulling leather for all they're worth.

They stop their Zulu war dances long enough to point out that the Canadiens were at full strength with the exceptpion of Harvey in that 7-2 debacle in Detroit last Sunday.

Tell them the Habs are merely in a slump and will roar back to form—and they'll laugh you out of your hacienda. They like that Detroit report of last Sunday's Hab defeat which stated: "There was little fire in the Canadiens. Their attack lacked authority. Their defence was hesitant. They were beaten to the puck and beaten to the check. Summarily they were a liability to themselves."

Plante and Harvey will be with the Canadiens in Boston Thursday night. It is not known if they will play with the club.

A Montreal sportswriter says: "A lot will depend on how soon the veteran defenceman can return to action. He seems to be the one man who can collect the team on the ice and give it direction. When he isn't there the team has a tendency to become disorganized and even to fall apart."

"What's more than likely is another report that Plante will replace Hodge in the nets. The latter hung on a lot longer than was expected. He hasn't been getting as good protection of late as he received when he first replaced Plante, but it's also true that opposing teams seem to have discovered little Charlie is weak on high shots aimed at the corners of the net and those are the shots that have been beating him in recent games."

All of which may be true, but these Leafs are a tenacious crew. They've got their teeth in that top spot and it's going to take a lot of Canadiens to shake 'em loose. The upcoming Stanley Cup series should be the roughest and toughest since the English nobleman donated the mug away back when.

Gideon at Quarter

Larks To Favor Youth

MONTREAL (CP) — Perry Moss, coach and general manager of the Montreal Alouettes, said Tuesday the club will take "a new approach" in 1961.

Interviewed before leaving for Winnipeg to attend three-day Canadian Football League meetings, Moss said the club's overall plans call for a revision of last year's tactics.

"We will field the youngest club to represent Montreal in years," he said. "Last year we produced a strong offensive club but were weak defensively.

"Unless someone comes along to beat him out, we'll have Wes Gideon at quarterback. He doesn't pass as well as (Sam) Etcheverry but he runs better. We will miss Hal Patterson but a switch in our offense could take care of the gap. I think (Billy) Shipp, (Bill) Hudson and (Doug) McNichol can be replaced."

Etcheverry, after being traded to Hamilton Tiger-Cats, has signed a disputed contract with St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. Patterson, also traded has signed with Hamilton.

Shipp and McNichol both have business interests in Toronto and want to be traded to the Argonauts. Hudson quit to play football in the U.S. and Alouettes said they will not stand in his way.

MEETS TITLEHOLDER

MONTREAL (CP) —Canadian featherweight champion Davie Hilton of Edmundston, N.B., ventures into the big-time March 9 when he meets British Empire title holder Terry Spinks in London England.

Harry Sheppard, Hilton's manager, said Tuesday he has received a wire from the London promoter confirming the 10-round non-title match.

Slipping Canadiens Recall M. Plante

Harvey May Play Thursday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jacques Plante, who made the National Hockey League's all-star teams for five years, comes back to the NHL Thursday night to see if he can make the Montreal Canadiens.

Montreal recalled the man in the plastic mask, hoping that putting him in the nets will do their lagging team as much good as using Charlie Hodge did.

Plante goes into the game against Boston with a so-so record of three wins, a tie and four losses in the eight games he played with Montreal Royals of the Eastern Professional Hockey League to work himself back into shape. He was scored on 24 times.

The injured knee that started him on his way to the minors after five straight years as winner of the Vezina Trophy still bothers him, he says, but he wants to play and thinks he can. The move back upstairs kept alive his hope for a record six-straight Vezina Trophy, the award that goes to the goaler playing the most games for the least scored-on team.

But Canadiens made it abundantly clear that if he wants to keep the job, he'll have to do better than Hodge did, and in his 30-game stay Hodge was sensational.

"We'll see how Plante goes for three of four games," said Montreal general manager Frank Selke. "If he's all right, then he can stay in the nets. If not, we still have Hodge."

Hodge kept Montreal right up in the thick of the Vezina Trophy race and his personal average of 2.53 goals-against per game is the best in the NHL. Plante allowed 3.28 goals a game during his 21 games with Montreal early in the season, reducing the Montreal team average to 2.84.

Selke emphasized that the whole Canadiens team, not Hodge alone, is responsible for the weekend slump that dropped Montreal to second place, three points behind the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"The entire team has gone sour," he said. "It would have taken a superhuman effort for anyone to do better than Hodge has done."

Doug Harvey, the backbone of Montreal's defence, is also due back Thursday night after a lay-off since Christmas with a shoulder separation and a cracked ankle bone.

The news was less cheering in other quarters.

Toronto Maple Leafs, who play New York tonight, will probably be missing team captain George Armstrong. Armstrong badly bruised his shoulder in Toronto's 1-1 tie with Chicago Sunday.

Junior Macs Meet Picton Here Tonight

Belleville McFarlands will wind up their OHA Eastern Junior "B" hockey league schedule here tonight when they play host to their bitter rivals from Little Spain, the Picton Merchants.

Game time is 8.30 and if past performances are any indication, this one will likely provide plenty of action, one way or another.

The game will serve as a warmup for the Macs who have been doomed to a third-place finish when the schedule winds up this weekend. Belleville can finish in a points tie with Whitby but the red-hot Hillcrests, winners of something like eight straight, will get the official nod for second place because of a greater number of wins.

The league standing at the present time shows Peterborough with 29 points, Whitby with 28, Belleville 26 and Kingston 19. All four clubs have one game left to play. Kingston is at Whitby and Peterborough at Picton this Saturday night. A Whitby win and an upset by Picton would lift Whitby right into the top spot, giving them a choice of opponents in the first round of the playoffs.

Playoff dates will be settled at a meeting here Sunday afternoon.

Team officials all around the loop now consider Whitby as the team to beat in the playoffs. They have a big, hard-hitting club with plenty of scoring punch and strong goal-keeping. The team has been growing stronger for some time now and in its recent win streak, defeated Belleville 3-1 and Peterborough 3-0. Hillcrests is the only team that has beaten Peterborough in schedule play this year, turning the trick twice.

Following is the complete team standing to date, and the remaining scheduled games.

He Kept It That Way

"This Is My Life"

LONDON (AP) — A soccer star who insisted on keeping his private life to himself stopped a British Broadcasting Corporation television show before it could get started.

Danny Blanchflower, captain of Tottenham Hotspurs, refused at the last minute Monday night to take part in the TV program This Is Your Life.

The BBC had brought two of Blanchflower's cousins from the United States to help reconstruct the star's life story.

A 15-year-old boy who was the Northern Ireland team's mascot in the 1958 World Cup games had come from Sweden.

Blanchflower's parents from Northern Ireland were there along with other relatives and friends and the whole Tottenham team.

Everyone knew what was going to happen except Blanchflower. Even his wife kept it a secret from him.

Blanchflower was taken to the studio on the pretext of recording a talk about soccer. TV cameras and the audience for This Is Your Life were waiting in an adjoining room.

The emcee, Eamonn Andrews, was going to lead him into the next room and break the news to him.

With seconds to go, Blanchflower caught on.

"No," he said—and stalked out.

"My private life is my own. I don't need to give any reason. It's a matter of principle," he said.

The BBC hastily put on a recorded program in the series—one it had been saving for an emergency.

Stops Bowdry in Ninth

Moore 'Spectre's' Johnson's Crown

By WHITNEY MARTIN

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Harold Johnson of Philadelphia is the National Boxing Association's new world light-heavyweight champion, but he still isn't happy.

The shadow of a plump, goateed fellow with an impish grin hovers over the scene. And until Johnson can handle it he admits the crown has a hollow ring.

"I don't feel like I'm the champ yet," he said Tuesday night after stopping 23-year-old Jesse Bowdry of St. Louis in the ninth round of a their scheduled 15-round title affair. "When I beat the old man (Archie Moore) I'll get that feeling."

Moore knocked out Johnson in the 14th round in Johnson's only other shot at the title. The NBA grabbed the crown from Moore when he took an indifferent attitude toward defending it. Archie is still recognized as king of the 175-pounders in Europe and in the non-NBA states of New York and Massachusetts.

Johnson, 32, put Bowdry on the canvas three times in a classic variety of poses. After the third knockdown referee Cy Gottfried decided the rubber-legged youth was in no condition to continue.

With two seconds to go in the eighth, a right-left combination dumped him in a jacknife pose. Johnon fired a solid blow to ninth. It was the beginning of the end. It came in 45 seconds of the round.

Johnson and Bowdry each got 25 per cent of the net gate. There was no television or radio.

Red Wings Paste Petes

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Fourth-place Hamilton Red Wings beat fifth-place Peterborough Petes 6-2 in a speedy Ontario Hockey Association junior A fray here Tuesday night before 1,610 fans.

It was 0-0 in the first period and 2-1 going into the third for Petes.

Petes drew three of the six penalties. A fight in the third period resulted in majors to Claude Larose and Bob Dillabough.

Wings fired in five unanswered tallies in the third as Petes faded in fast play.

Gate Question Thorny

West Readies Grid Guns

WINNIPEG (CP)—The thorny question of gate equalization is expected to provide most of the fireworks here today as the Western Interprovincial Football Union holds its annual meeting.

The WIFU clubs gather here to hammer out intra-league problems and also to load their verbal guns for the annual meeting of the Canadian Football League — the national professional football body—which follows Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The WIFU gate equalization plan helps the poorer clubs by giving them some of the extra gravy enjoyed by the richer teams. At the moment, it may be the only way to keep Saskatchewan Roughriders operating after several rough seasons at the cash register.

Under the plan, teams with net gate revenues above the league average pay into the fund a percentage of the amount by which they exceed the average. On the other hand, teams whose gate revenues fall below the league average receive from the pool a percentage of the amount by which they are short of the average.

WOULD INCREASE RATE

Up to this year, the percentage rate used has been 25 per cent. At a league meeting held in Vancouver last November, the league voted 4 to 1 to increase the rate to 40 per cent.

The rate increase, proposed by Saskatchewan, has to receive final approval by the annual meeting. British Columbia Lions, who voted strongly against the proposal at Vancouver, have indicated they plan to continue their opposition.

The Lions have the fattest gates in the league. They argue they'll be stuck with the biggest bill—they estimate $60,000 — in in the equalization setup.

The Riders, doormats in the league for the last two seasons, lost $75,000 last year.

Royals Edge Soo-Birds 4-3, Kingston Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals, in the midst of another goaltender shuffle, turned in a strong third period Tuesday night to defeat Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds 4-3 and move to within three points of vacating the basement in the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

The Royals gave good protection to Claude Pronovost in his first appearance since Jacques Plante was flown back to the parent Montreal Canadiens of the National League. Plante had a long workout with the Royals after an NHL layoff because of injuries, during which Charlie Hodge was called up from the Royals and appeared to be threatening Plante's job.

In the night's other game, Kingston Frontenacs came up with one of their best performances of the season and hammered the league-leading Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 6-2.

The Frontenacs moved six points up on fifth-place Sudbury Wolves, who now have only a one-game lead on the Royals.

Aces, Indians Play 2-2 Tie

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Aces and Springfield Indians played to a 2-2 overtime tie in an American Hockey League game played here Tuesday night.

A crowd of 4,752 saw the Quebeeers flash a complete reversal of form in holding the league-leaders in check and threatening through most of the 70 minutes.

It was a cleanly played game in which only five minor penalties were called. None figured in the scoring.

Prelude to World Tournament

Swedes Warble Familiar Overture

STOCKHOLM (CP) — A four-game exhibition tour of Sweden by Trail Smoke Eaters has left Swedish hockey circles in an uproar as a result of injuries suffered by four members of Sweden's entry in the world championship tournament in Switzerland next month.

Swedish newspapers have condemned the Canadian team's style of play as "brutal" and some critics of the Smoke Eaters have been demanded that Sweden break off hockey relations with Canada.

Two of the Swedish players apparently were injured so badly in play against the Canadians that they will miss the world tournament. The two others will lose several weeks of training.

But Canadian officials in Europe with Trail, Canada's world representative in the tournament, were fast to counter the Swedish charges.

SAY EXAGGERATED

Swedish hockey officials and the press are "attempting to make a mountain out of a molehill," is the way Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, described the situation in a telephone call to The Toronto Globe and Mail Tuesday from Tampere, Finland, where the Smoke Eaters play an exhibition game against a Swedish team today.

Singled out in the controversy was Trail defenceman Darryl Sly, whom the Swedes have charged with attacking a Swedish player, Lennart Johanson, in a game at Vavie Monday which the Canadians won 4-1. A medical examination of the Swedish player showed he suffered no serious injury.

Herman Carlsson, a board member of the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation, said Tuesday night there probably will be no legal action against Sly as a result of the alleged attack.

"In my opinion it is up to the teams to make decisions in cases like this one and this will probably be our (the federation's) line this time."

DENY POLICE ANGLE

One Stockholm newspaper claimed police were considering an indictment of wilful assault and battery against the "worst fighters" on the Canadian squad. But police sources denied this.

The complaint apparently is that the Smoke Eaters dished out bodychecks the way they normally do at home. The Swedes aren't used to this type of play.

More moderate critics noted that the Swedish players themselves were partly to blame for the injuries. The Swedes concentrated entirely on the puck and often fail to keep their heads up to avoid collisions.

The controversy even resulted in East German comment criticizing the Canadians.

In a Berlin-datelined story the official East German news agency ADN said:

"Sweden is embittered over the roughness of the Trail Smoke Eaters . . . the anger of the very fair Swedish hosts against this tyle of sport which goes with the 'American way of life' is understandably great and the words of the critics are hard."

KEPT HEAD DOWN

Roxburgh, in his telephone interview with The Globe and Mail, declared:

"Johansson ran into Sly with his head down. Their coach ran out on the ice, all excited. Johansson didn't want a stretcher but they made him get on one and carried him off."

Shortly after the game, Roxburgh said, Johansson was seen walking around a hotel with a sandwich and a bottle of beer.

"We have a clean - playing bunch of boys. The Swedish players are not taught to keep their heads up. I'll arrange for a Swedish team to visit Canada and they'll learn how to play the game. When our players are in collision with the opposition, they get up and continue play. But the Swedes lie on the ice."

The Canadians beat the Swedes three times in the four games in Sweden. They defeated a Norwegian team at Oslo in the first game of their European tour. After today's exhibition in Finland, the Smoke Eaters head for Moscow for a three - game series beginning Saturday.

Tennis Plan Blasted

NEW YORK (AP)—Promoter Jack Kramer Tuesday blasted the latest plan of the United States Lawn Tennis Association for open tournaments as a stalling move.

"Their proposals won't settle a thing," said Kramer, the man who must put the final okay on whether the pros want to play in the same tournaments as amateurs.

The USLTA has decided to recommend to the International Lawn Tennis Federation that each country be permitted to sanction an open tournament at its discretion.

Any country opposing open tournaments could forbid its players to enter the tournaments.

"I haven't heard from anyone," said Kramer, "but the way I get it, they want the pros to play one tournament, the amateurs another and the four top men in each to play for the championship. That's like running three tournaments in one.

"Why not run three opens in three different places so that three different areas would benefit"

Kramer, whose touring pro troupe makes a stop in Madison Square Garden here tonight, said he is aware many people in amateur tennis distrust him.

"But one thing I'm sure of—the people who are against hypocrisy in tennis are with me."

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival

"PSYCHOLOGY SCORES GOALS TOO."

Lynn Patrick, General Manager of the Boston Bruins, has had a varied career in hockey as a player, coach and manager. As a result, his opinions have particular value and authority since he knows the game from every angle. One of his most interesting opinions concerns the physchological aspects of hockey — an area not yet explored in much detail by the average coach. Patrick has said, "Many goals are scored due to the natural letdowns by the players during key moments of a game, after a penalty has been successfully killed off, for example".

Human nature being what it is, it is very easy for a player or a team as a whole to unconsciously have an effort letdown during different play situations. One of the best ways to protect against this possibility is to be aware of the times when such letdowns are likely to occur. The individual player should be alert for such situations to keep his own play at peak effort and the coach should be careful to keep on top of the team as a whole.

Sample situations during which a letdown in atttention and effort often occur are: during the last 10-15 seconds of killing off a penalty — when the job seems to be done; directly after the penalized player gets back on the ice; after a goal scoring opportunity has been missed — there is a disappointment sag; after the goal that puts you ahead by two (the three to one situation, for instance); after the opposition has had a lucky break to score a goal or prevent one.

It should be remembered that in a close game the team whose players sustain the highest effort and morale regardless of the situation will usually win out. Remember, winning hockey games is not all skating, shooting and checking —the mental factor counts too. IMPOSE BOYCOTTS

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—Economic Affairs Minister Nicolaas Diederichs said Tuesday nine countries, six of them fellow Commonwealth members, have imposed boycotts on South African trade in protest against its racial policies. Answering questions in Parliament, Diederichs aid the countries were Antigua, Barbados, Ethiopia, Ghana, Dutch Guiana, India, Jamaica, Malaya and Sudan.

Blue Bombers Favor Player Association

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fullback Jerry James of Winnipeg Blue Bombers said Tuesday he and his teammates are in favor of a player association similar to one formed by Ottawa Roughriders of the Big Four Union.

The Rider players announced Tuesday that they had formed an association to handle liaison between the players and the team executive. While not negotiating individual contract terms, the association will present players' positions on such matters as pay for exhibition and Grey Cup games, public appearances and training camp conditions.

"That sounds like a good idea," James said in commenting on the Ottawa plan. "The Winnipeg players have discussed the possible formation of an association and most of them are for it.

"But nothing concrete has been done about it."

He said the Bomber players also have been studying the possibility of establishing a pension plan. Again, nothing formal has developed so far.

Football commissioner G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg said he had no comment on the Ottawa players association.

In Toronto Tuesday, halfback Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts said the Argos have not discussed such a plan.

Senior Hockey

GALT (CP) — Galt Terriers, cooled momentarily by the league leading Windsor Bulldogs Saturday, exploded with a rash of goals here Tuesday night to claim an 8-2 senior OHA hockey win over Stratford Indians.

The win, the 12th in 14 games, shunted them into sole possession of second place ahead of the idle Chatham Maroons. Terriers trail the leading Bulldogs by seven points, however.

JENSEN SIGNS

BOSTON (AP)— Boston Red Sox Tuesday announced receipt of the signed contract of outfielder Jackie Jensen, 34. No salary terms were disclosed, but it was generally believed the husky slugger would receive about $40,000.

Crow-Calling the Modern Way

You have heard about them of course — the electronic game callers. At first they were tried in the duck and goose blinds. They proved to be far too efficient. With our limited supply of wildfowl, these devies which play amplified records of duck and goose talk pulled birds into the decoys in unheard of numbers.

With all possible dispatch, Fish and Wildlife outlawed these electronic callers. Now you can play those records in the duck marshes if you want to but you must leave your gun at home. Duck shooting and electronic callers have been divorced permanently.

But there are other things to shoot and to call besides ducks and geese. The Electronic Game Calls, Inc., have made records of the actual live calls of many things — pheasants, squealing rabbits (to attract foxes), bugling elk, wild turkey, deer and, last but not least crows. All of these calls can be used legally during the shooting season.

I was curious about the effectiveness of these electronic callers. A friend of mine, Harry Wright of Baltimore, had told me about them. He was at a skeet shoot, he said, and when the break came at noon one of the competitors suggested that they go crow shooting. Harry went along to see what would happen.

His friend parked the car alongside a country road, took an electronic caller and his gun and shells from the trunk, and walked across the field to a small woods patch. There he set up the apparatus, told Harry to hide in the brush, and set the thing going. No crows were in sight at the time.

PLENTY OF CROWS

Within a matter of minutes the crows began to show up. They came from all directions. For the next hour the two men shot crows until their gun barrels were hot. Then they went back to the skeet shoot.

For a great many years I have been a dedicated crow shooter. In company with several others we have studied crows and shot them. There is much to learn about the sport. If our game birds had half the sense that a crow has, wing shooting would be a dull and profitless piece of business.

On the shelves of my work room are not less that a dozen crow calls of various makes. Some are good; others fair; and a few quite useless. But learning to use a crow call is not easy. It takes practic and a knowledge of crows and their habits. The idea of simplifying crow-calling to the point of complete efficiency was distictly appealing.

So we — my sone and I, sent away for a game caller. It and a protracted spell of zero weather arrived simultaneously. Not until Christmas week did temperatures moderate enough to make outdoor activities at least partically comfortable. With the first moderate day in progress, we set out to see for ourselves what an electronic game caller would do for us.

We drove the familiar roads of our "crow country", said country now being under a layer of 14 inches of snow. The fields were covered, precluding feeding. No crows were in sight. At last, with but little hope of accomplishing anything, we set up our caller along a hedgerow, not 50 feet from the road. I sat in the car while Dick set up the caller. Within a minute or two there were half a dozen crows circling over his head within easy gun range. Where they came from I can't say, but there they were. We tried the thing in a couple of other places with the same results. Then we went home.

MORE ELABORATE

The next trial was more elaborate. Not only did we take the caller; also, we took along a stuffed owl and a dozen moulded crow decoys. We built a blind of brush, set out the owl prominently above a low tree, and placed the decoys at strategic points. Then we turned on the caller, full blast.

There were no crows in sight when we set things up. However, once the caller was started they began to show up. They came, not only from the immediate area but literally for miles. Flocks came to us from such a distance that when I first saw them they were but black pin-points in the sky.

All were excited when they saw the owl, and they circled and swooped to join the decoys in their noisy protest. At one time we had not less than 150 crows circling directly over our heads. How many we shot I'm sure I can't say, and still they kept on coming.

Admittedly, the device places an unfair handicap on the birds. I can't feel too sorry about that. Crows are vermin and once you see one rob a bird's nest, taking a featherless fledgling to be dismembered while still alive, you stop feeling sorry for them. And when you come right down to it, any method which will fool those black devils is fair in my book. The electronic caller does exactly that. Don't buy one if you wish to conserve on shotgun shells.

Noranda Borealis Sends

Northern Keon Light

NORANDA, Que. (CP)—This mining district, tucked away in western Quebec, has sent its first player to the National Hockey League and, under the guidance of a mite of a goaltender who once heard the plaudits of the big time, is grooming others for future stardom.

Dave Keon, Toronto Maple Leafs centre who probably will be this season's NHL rookie of the year, is Noranda's first home-brew NHL player although adopted sons such as Murph Chamberlain and Kilby MacDonald made the grade in earlier years.

Keon came up through unsponsored ranks in a community whose Mr. Hockey is Wilf Cude, Welsh-born goaltending star of pre-war years who was selected as goaltender for the NHL's second all-star team in 1935-36 and 1936-37 while in the nets for Montreal Canadiens.

SCOUTS FOR DETROIT

He might have been a first-team all-star except for the fact he played in the halcyon days of Turk Broda, Tiny Thompson, Mike Karakas, Dave Kerr, Lorne Chabot, Alex Connell, George Hainsworth, Charlie Gardiner and the likes.

Cude, raised in Western Canada but a longtime resident of this district, is a scout for Detroit Red Wings and coach of local hockey teams. There is no local league, for the twin Rouyn-Noranda region boasts just one juvenile and one midget team, but Cude arranges exhibition games with teams from Kirkland Lake, Porcupine and New Liskeard in Ontario and other towns in this district near the Ontario-Quebec border.

Keon is the most successful graduate from these ranks but another bright prospect is Hubert (Pit) Martin, a 16-year-old speedster with Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league. Martin is a student at McMaster University in Hamilton.

MORE TO COME

Another prospective star of tomorrow is Wayne Connolly of Rouyn, top OHA Junior A scorer last season while with Peterborough and now with Montreal Royals of the Eastern Professional League. Still at home, but already scouted by three NHL teams, are Jerry Merchant and Jimmy Keon, Dave's 15-year-old brother.

Cude, now 50, was born in Barrie, Wales, and moved to Winnipeg as a boy, playing his first hockey there. He was with Melville, Sask., Millionaires in 1929 and became professional next year with Pittsburgh Pirates, moving to Philadelphia the same year when the franchise was transferred.

When the Philadelphia franchise expired, Cude became the NHL's spare goaltender and played with Detroit in the 1935-36 season before joining Canadiens.

Bruce Kidd Faces Test

He will meet Al Lawrence, John Macy, Jim Beatty and Max Truex in the invitational two - mile at the Los Angeles Times meet. He hasn't even seen any of these men run.

WANTS MINIMUM RAISED

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy Tuesday sent to Congress — with a plea for "prompt consideration"—a bill to boost the $1 U.S. minimum wage to $1.25 an hour and give 4,300,000 more workers the protection of a wage floor. The higher minimum, Kennedy said, would be achieved by a series of annual rises "to which employers can readily adjust."

Special Dramatic Programs Provide Excellent TV Fare

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — This dull and imitated television season has been notable to date for the paucity and shoddy quality of its dramatic offerings.

But Tuesday night things perked up considerably. There were two special dramatic programs, and each was excellent entertainment.

For this double-helping, many thanks to NBC. First there was Time Remembered, a 90-minute adaptation of a Jean Anouilh play. Then there was an hour-long playlet called A String of Beads, based loosely on a Somerset Maugham short story.

Time Remembered was wild, sophisticated, whimsical and based on a thoroughly macabre subject. The plot concerns the efforts of the Duchess of Port au Broc to shock her son out of his long playing grief over the unfortunate death of his love.

The lady, a famous ballerina had swept Prince Albert off his feet, only to die three days later by accidentally strangling herself while making a particularly dramatic gesture with a scarf.

A String of Beads was merely the story of a secretary who bought a $120 string of cultured pearls in an extravagant gesture and then discovered she had acquired by mistake a string worth $60,000.

The resulting situation — she wanted to keep the jewels — forced her to decide what she really wanted from life. Of course, it wasn't the beads at all, but the poor but bright young law student.

Enthusiasm Is Booming In England as the Women Go on a Health Club Kick

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Britons, it appears, are on a health club kick. Not since the invention of the umbrella have they shown such enthusiasm for a new fad.

In the last few months, six clubs have sprung up in London, 17 more are on the way, and one Canadian-British firm alone intends to have 50 operating in Britain in the next three years.

One of the London clubs had 1,000 eager women members before its doors opened, and an official says it will be only a matter of months before the full quota of 15,000 is reached. Another club expects to have 5,000 members before spring and it's on the basis of this reception that expansions are being planned.

"There appear to be tremendous possibilities here," says Arnold Steele, 38-year-old Vancouver financier who formed Town and Country Health Clubs on a 50-50 basis with the Rank organization. This is the firm that plans to open 50 clubs in Britain.

SLIM DOWN IN STYLE

Its first, in fashionable Knightsbridge, was opened a month ago and cost more than £50,000.

It clearly fits into the location. With plush wall-to-wall carpets, full - length mirrors, gleaming exercising equipment, glistening chandeliers and soft music, it offers English women a previously - unknown stylish slimming system.

About a mile away, on Oxford Street, an even bigger club is wooing the ladies by the thousands. This one, billed as the biggest women's health club in the world, cost £75,000 and was established by the Harver Corporation of Canada, an American-owned firm incorporated in Canada for taxation purposes.

Director Jim Brock, an American who operated health clubs in Western Canada for several years, predicts that the firm will have seven clinics going in Britain within the next few years.

"Women are the same the world over," he concludes. "They'll go to the ends of the earth for face or figure—thank God."

So far, all the clubs are for women, but work has started on some for men.

The enthusiasm being shown for these posh establishments seems to explode the notion that Britons regard comfort as unhealthy. A Sunday Express reporter, however, seems to think that British men will offer some resistance.

NOT HARDY ENOUGH

"I wanted to tell them that the men of Britain, reared in a long and deathless tradition of cold baths and competitive sports, take their exercise the hard way. There must be fresh air and stinging rain. Mud, too, if possible.

"That chromium-plated rowing machines and cocktail atmosphere with soft music would mean nothing less than total surrender to the men who like to break the ice before they push the boat out. . .

Officials of the clubs don't share this view. Most spent about a year in London beforehand studying living habits, outlooks, spending habits and general attitudes. They were confident of success before launching the projects.

Manager Riley Keith of the Town and Country Club—he's a native of California who operated clubs in Vancouver for five years—says it was probably a coincidence that various firms all moved in on London at the same time.

"Everyone realized, of course, that there was a great need for such places in London."

BRIGHT YOUNG MEN

Steele, with his headquarters in the huge Rank Building, says he can't answer for other organizations. "All I know is that I was the first to come over."

He became involved in the health club business in Vancouver when his finance company acquired an interest in clubs operating there.

Like Steele, all the organizers behind the clubs are young men in their 30s whom The Observer described as "bright young Canadians or Americans, sharp as knives and keen as cash-tills."

What sort of clientele do the British clubs get? The answer, say all club officials, is every type.

Working girls apparently form the biggest group, then there are housewives, a few titled ladies, several movie stars and a smattering of North Americans who belonged to similar clubs back home.

Yearly membership fees range from £20 to £55, slightly lower than they would be in Canada.

Canadian actor William Shatner has signed for a role in the movie Judgment at Nuremberg, going before the cameras Feb. 15.

Bay of Quinte Basketball

Belleville Crawford Metals of the Bay of Quinte Basketball League, scored a 71-65 victory over Peterborough New Grand Jets in an exhibition hoop tilt played at Moira Secondary School last night.

The Quinte crew, hitting for 15 of 22 foul shots compared to seven of 12 for the Jets, pulled into a 38-31 lead at half time and kept pace with the visitors in the second half.

It was the second meeting between the two clubs, Peterborough having won the first one by a slim 65-64 score. Belleville was reinforced by Bob Burleigh of Trenton Wilsons for last night's game.

Teddy Batchelor, top scorer in the Quinte loop, sparked his club's victory with a 22-point performance. Bert Faulkner struck for 16 and Bill Green had 14.

Crawford Metals (71): Rogers 2, Bennett 7, Batchelor 22, Walmsley 4, Faulkner 16, Green 14, B. Burleigh 6.

Peterborough Jets (65): Amer 20, Foster 11, Galvin 4, Stewart 7, Thompson, Fuerer 6, Fitzgibbon 10, Board 7.

Nothing Could Have Saved Seven Children

WINDSOR MILLS, Que. (CP) — "Nothing could have saved them," said farmer Marc St. Laurent, who los his seven children in a fire Sunday which the Windsor Mills fire departmtnt would not fight until three hours after it started.

"At the moment I saw the flames break out, it was already too late," he said in an interview Tuesday. "If there was anything that could have been done to save my children, I would have been in position to do it long before the firemen arrived. It was impossible."

A coroner's inquest into the deaths is to open here Thursday.

Theophile Bolduc, mayor of Windsor, said he did not believe anyone could be blamed in the disaster. Windsor Mills had only a single fire truck. The St. Laurent farm was outside town limits, about four miles from the fire station.

Town Councillor Leon Desaulniers refused to send the fire truck to the farm on grounds that it would have left the town itself without protection. The truck was finally sent after a parish priest telephoned to say many children had been burned to death and help was needed to recover the bodies.

Mayor Bolduc said he is consulting with officials of nearby parishes and towns about the possibility of a joint appeal to the provincial government for a grant to buy a second fire truck for Windsor Mills, one that could be used outside town limits.

Toby Robins Takes Part at Stratford

STRATFORD — Toby Robins, one of Canada's most popular television personalities and stage actresses, has been signed for the role of Rosaline in Michael Langham's production of "Love's Labor's Lost". The comedy, one of three Shakespearean plays to be presented at the 1961 Stratford Festival, will have its first performance on June 21 and for the balance of the summer will be seen in repretory with "Coriolanus" and "Henry VIII". Later in the season, this trio of plays will be joined by Donald Lamont Jack's new Canadian comedy, "The Canvas Barricade", first contemporary play to be presented on the Festival theatre stage.

This will be Miss Robins' second appearance at the Stratford Festival. In 1954 she was seen as Mariana in "Measure for Measure". That, however, was during the days of the tent theatre. This will be her first performance on the stage of the permanent theatre, except for a one-evening appearance last year as star of the revue, "Spring Thaw".

Known from coast as the pretty and vivacious permanent panelist of the CBC's popular quiz show, "Front Page Challenge", Miss Robins has an equally-envied reputation as an actress. On the small home screen she was seen a few weeks ago as the beautiful heroine of "Ring Around the Moon", most recent in a series of television appearances that includes such plays as "Teach Me How to Cry", "The Hostage", and "The Aspern Papers".

Her record on the stage is just as impressive. She has been seen as the addled heroine of "Visit to a Small Planet" and as the jaded neurotic in "Two For the Seesaw", opposite George McCowan, at Toronto's Crest theatre. She has also seen duty in "School For Scandal", "Dream Girl" and "The Rose Tattoo". Once she "flew" as Peter Pan.

Married to William Freedman, Toronto stage producer and motion picture exhibitor, Toby Robins is the mother of two children, who will be spending the summer in Stratford with her.

Fly in Whisky of Little Concern to Hugh Griffith

By BOB THOMAS

PAPEETE (AP) — The skies had opened and rain was falling in a grey curtain that obscured the reef outside the harbor.

In a waterfront bar the juke box was playing Yes, Sir, That's My Baby. Chattering above the brassy music were saronged native girls, beachcombers, tourists from Australia and members of the Mutiny on the Bounty troupe, who have nicknamed the place Stage 8.

Among the latter group was Hugh Griffith, the Welshman who won an Oscar last year as the best supporting actor for his role as the sheik in Ben-Hur. He calmly picked a fly out of his beer.

"I was in India and Burma for four years during the war," he said. "In the first year, I would receive a whisky and tell the waiter, 'Take this back; there's a fly in it.' In the second year, I would remove the fly with my finger. In the third year, I would merely drink the whisky, fly and all."

WAITS FOR END

It was noon, and Griffith had been at the bar since 7:30, waiting to see if the downpour would stop so the film company could shoot. It didn't, and Griffith continued watching the passing show with his wife.

"Fascinating," he commented. "There is nothing to do, really, except sit here and watch. You start with coffee and then you switch to beer. You watch and you see fantastic people."

I had been wanting to interview Griffith ever since he won the academy award last spring. It has been difficult, since he had been making Exodus in Cyprus and Counterfeit Traitor in Germany.

TALKS OF CAREER

He talked about his career. Born in north Wales and proud of it, he started as a bank clerk but did acting by night. He won a gold medal at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts but could scarcely cash in on it before the war started.

"I was in the army 6½ years," he said. "That's a big chunk out of one's life. It's hard to get your incentive back."

He did well in British films and plays after the war and was playing Tony Perkins' father in Look Homeward, Angel when the Ben-Hur chance arose. Unknown to him, producer Sam Zimbalist and director William Wyler were in the front row one night. They came backstage, tested him In a Cellar in New York the next day and he walked off with the part, and the picture.

Timmy Hunter Cast Performs for Blind

Tommy Hunter and the cast of his CBC radio show will perform in aid of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind during White Cane Week, to be held Feb. 5 to Feb. 11.

At the request of the CNIB, the CBC artists will perform for members of Toronto's blind community, Thursday, Feb. 9, at the CNIB auditorium in Toronto. The show will be taped for broadcast on the Trans-Canada network on Friday, Feb. 10, at 1:15 p.m. EST.

Tommy's guest will be vocalist Joyce Hahn. Other members of the cast taking part in the concert are The Rhythm Pals, fiddler Wally Tragott, guitarist Al Harris and announcer Bill Bessey. The program will feature a selection of current popular tunes and songs from Broadway shows.

AT THE PARK — What's That? — Something has frightened Leo Gorcey and Hunts Hall, starred in their latest Bowery Boys comedy for Allied Artists, "Bowery to Bagdad", opening Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd", in Technicolor co-starring Charles Laughton. Extra added the 3 Stooges in "Up in Daisies Penthouse".

YES INDEED, FOLKS THINK A LOT OF OLD JIM CARTER 'ROUND HERE... HE SERVED WITH A CALGARY UNIT OF THE CANADIAN MOUNTED RIFLES IN WORLD WAR I... DECORATED FOR BRAVERY TOO!
SINCE THAT NO GOOD OLIVER FIRED HIM HE'S JUST MANAGED TO KEEP GOING, DOING ODD JOBS... GOT A LOT OF SPUNK!
JIM'S NO COWARD, HE WON'T TALK BECAUSE HE'S PROTECTING SOMEONE ELSE.
WHEN I MARRIED YOUR FATHER I TRIED TO BE A MOTHER TO YOU, OLIVER... WHEN YOU WERE A BOY I TRIED TO TEACH YOU RIGHT FROM WRONG. YOU HAVE SHOWN ME HOW BADLY I FAILED.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Thursday, February 9, 1961.

General Tendencies: A smile today will dissolve all opposition and win for you the success and happiness that all the volley of objective words and phrases that you can think of will just be so much water under the bridge. Avoid signing any important documents or making changes. Be aware of other's troubles. Aid them.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Personal problems could keep you quite depressed today, if you permit. Contact instead those persons who are progressive and smiling so that you better your own lot in life and be happy, too. Dress very nicely and be charming with all.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Make it a point to impress others with your true devotion and that you will do all in your power to help them where help is most needed. Steer clear of that depressive associate who could ruin your happy state of mind at this time.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) The ideal day to step out of dull doldrum existence and be off to some charming spot with a good friend who can open your eyes to more lucrative and happy outlets that will bring you happiness. Avoid tangling with the law or irate higher-up.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) If you carry through efficiently in present set-up, you can have a far greater income soon. Don't go off on any tangents. Steer clear of that too-sharp individual who would deter you from working. P.M. fine for romantic leanings.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) The day is fine for going to some worthwhile place where you can improve your appearance or health or simply to have a good time. Steer clear of that higher-up who would apply pressure in order to purloin some of your holdings.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate upon assisting closest of kin with their problems today so that they know real happiness. Give small gifts that will be truly appreciated. Avoid that associate who wants to waste your time and get on your nerves.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you early handle only the most important jobs at work, you can then get out for some needed shopping or making calls that are vital. P.M. get off to the pleasures that will relax and make you happy.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more serious in practical affairs today. Strive for a greater income, more harmony with key persons in your life, get better clothing, etc. P.M. fine for entertainment, but be sure you are not extravagant.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get an early start to the shops or making calls, meetings, pleasurable activities, etc. This can be both a happy and productive day and evening. See your dearest friends and join with them in some mutually happy pursuit in P.M.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) It would be advisable to sit down to some family conference and exchange ideas for a happier and more prosperous future. Iron out any present differences. Take care while out driving or walking and guard your words well.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) An ideal day to confer with family, friends, business associates, et als so that you come to a far better understanding for the future and can make new plans cautiously that will be mutually beneficial. Put friendship before money.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) It would be wise to consult with higher-ups today instead of going ahead on your own book, since you lack the experience and know-how. Follow through with suggestions even though you were not the one to think them up. Expand.

If your child is born today . . he, or she, will be so charming that everyone will early want to spoil your beautiful youngster. So, be sure you give your offspring a fine education and teach perseverance, or this life may be ruined by always leaning on others, accepting gifts and possibly following the primrose path. The chart is fine for any work before the public, particularly in dramatics and music.

EVACUATE HAMLETS

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—The army evacuated about 500 inhabitants Monday from hamlets in the path of lava flowing from Calubco Volcano in Llanquihue province, 1,200 miles to the south of Santiago. The volcano began erupting six days ago, spewing stone, smoke and fire. The lava flow has engulfed a number of homes and spread over cultivated farmland.

Pilot Remanded On 3 Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Grant Campbell Davidson, 34, of Toronto, a Trans-Canada Air Lines co-pilot, was remanded Tuesday until Feb. 21 on three charges of breaking air regulations in his private plane.

Davidson, who flies DC-8 jets for TCA, was charged with performing aerobatics likely to endanger other aircraft in his own plane last July.

He was also charged with executing aerobatics with a passenger aboard while not holding an instructor's licence and with flying past an airfield at less than 2,000 feet.

Ross Burt, chief instructor for the Brampton Flying Club, said he saw Davidson's Piper Cub executing loops at an altitude of 1,200 feet.

In a statement, Davidson said he was showing TCA DC-8 Captain George Nicol how to loop. Nicol said Davidson took extreme caution before performing the loops.

Davidson said he checked carefully to insure no other aircraft were nearby and he reported the incident to air authorities later.

Defence counsel Stuart McKeown said Davidson, who has 7,000 hours flying experience, had exercised prudence and care. Magistrate R. I. Blain remanded Davidson for judgment.

GM TO CLOSE ONE DAY

OSHAWA (CP)—General Motors of Canada Limited announced Monday its passenger car line will shut down for one day Friday to allow adjustment of current inventory. About 5,000 workers will be affected by the shutdown, the second this year. Malcolm Smith, president of Local 222, United Auto Workers of America (CLC) said the union will probably press for a guaranteed 40-hour work week if the intermittent layoffs continue.

Big Increase In Hospital Plan Costs Predicted

Monthly Premium Rates Likely to Be Boosted

TORONTO (CP)—By 1963 the provincial government's share of the cost of Ontario's hospital insurance plan will be up more than $100,000,000 from the figure in the last fiscal year, Premier Frost said Wednesday.

Details of the plan's costs were presented to the legislature's committee on health and welfare during a three - hour meeting which Mr. Frost described as an "information" session.

"This study is to show you the magnitude of the problem . . . we should know we are faced with," he said.

The premier didn't indicate whether the needed extra money will come out of general revenue or an increase in monthly premium rates, prompting opposition members to suggest the announcement was intended as a feeler of public reaction to the need for the funds.

Premiums at present are $2.10 a month for a single person and $4.20 for a family.

COSTS ZOOM UPWARD

Total operating costs of the plan in the 1959-60 fiscal year were $213,000,000, of which Ontario paid $140,200,000 through tax revenues and premiums. By 1963-64 the plan is expected to cost an estimated $388,700,000, of which Ontario would pay about $252,700,000.

"This has to be looked at in relation to other problems," the premier said. "We will have to provide accommodation for 500,000 new school children in the next five years. Where we are going to find the money is the $64,000 question."

Officials of the Ontario Hospital Insurance Commission placed charts and posters around the committee room to illustrate the plan's extent.

A total of 5,350,000 persons—91.5 per cent of the province's population—paid premiums at the plan's inception Jan. 1, 1959. As of Dec. 31, 1960, a total of 5,832,000 were insured—or 94.9 per cent of the population.

GIVES CURRENT COST

George Gathercole, deputy minister of economics, said the plan in the current fiscal year will cost an estimated $252,400,000, of which Ontario will pay $165,300,000 through taxes and premiums.

Federal contributions of $72,800,000 in 1959-60 are expected to rise to $136,000,000 by 1963-64.

Health Minister Dymond told the committee Canada's biggest current medical problem is treatment of the mentally ill and retarded. But he said one bright side as to cost is the treatment of tuberculosis patients.

"The need for beds for these patients is steadily decreasing," he said. "Almost every tuberculosis sanatorium has converted some of its accommodation to some other type of hospital use."

TB patient maintenance costs in the sanatoria fell from $6,140,000 in 1959-60 to an estimated $5,299,000 in the current fiscal year.

Laos Regime May Take in Leftist Foes

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) The right-wing government of this civil war-torn Indochina kingdom will discuss in a few days the possibility of a new coalition regime including opposing leftist elements, it was announced today.

King Savang Vatthana will preside at the special cabinet meeting to consider including representatives of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao movement—now fighting rightist forces—in the government, Information Minister Bouavan Norasing told a press conference.

He said formation of the coalition government would automatically involve the resignation of the present administration of rightist Premier Prince Boun Oum.

Boun set up his government after right-wing forces seized the administrative capital of Vientiane in December, toppling the regime of neutralist Premier Souvanna Phouma, which is backed by the Pathet Lao. Souvanna now is in exile in neighboring Cambodia.

Submits Brief On RCAF Competition

MONTREAL (CP)—The Shipping Federation of Canada said Wednesday it has submitted a brief to the federal government on behalf of its passenger steamship member companies about competition from air transport operations of the RCAF.

A federation statement said its brief contended that substitution of RCAF transportation for available steamship facilities on the Atlantic was outside the operational sphere of the RCAF.

It said also that RCAF transport would seriously affect steamship companies.

Marilyn Monroe Being Treated By Psychiatrist

NEW YORK (AP) — Screen star Marilyn Monroe is under treatment for "an illness of undetermined origin," New York Hospital said Wednesday night. Her condition is reported as satisfactory.

Miss Monroe divorced playwright Arthur Miller in Mexico two weeks ago.

Aylmer Base Will Be Closed

OTTAWA (CP)—The training unit at the RCAF station in Aylmer, Ont., will be disbanded next fall, Defence Minister Harkness said Wednesday.

He gave the date in a written Commons reply to Paul Martin (L—Essex East).

Synopsis — Colder air is pushing southward across Northern Ontario accompanied by a band of clouds and some snowflurries. The cooler air will move into Central Ontario tonight and by late Friday all but the southwestern sections of the province will be in the cooler mass.

L. T. MERCHANT IN SECOND TERM AS AMBASSADOR

Named by Kennedy To Canada Post

WASHINGTON (CP) — Livingston T. Merchant, nominated by President John Kennedy for a second term as United States ambassador to Canada, says border problems between the two countries are "inevitable."

"Two countries living side by side with so many points of contact and inter-relationships inevitably will have problems," the tall, slender career diplomat said in an interview.

"But the situation should be manageable as long as we keep solving some of the old problems while the new ones come up.

"Three years ago, when I last was ambassador to Canada, I thought it would take a decade to complete a mutually acceptable treaty for the development of the Columbia River. We now have a treaty. It took less time than I thought."

INVITES DIEFENBAKER

Nomination of the 57-year-old former undersecretary of state for the Canadian post was made by Kennedy Wednesday night, a few hours after he formally announced that he has invited Prime Minister Diefenbaker for White House talks Jan. 20.

Diefenbaker will be guest at a White House luncheon.

"I think it is most important that harmonious relations exist between two old friends," Kennedy said at a press conference Wednesday.

The two have met once before, a few years ago, when Kennedy was a senator. The state department, in amplifying Kennedy's remarks, said there will be no fixed agenda for the talks which may range from world problems to the bilateral problems that confront the two neighbors.

Diefenbaker initiated a request for an early meeting with Kennedy. The Commonwealth prime ministers gather in London for their annual session March 8 and the Canadian leader wanted to be able to carry Kennedy's views to the conference table.

FACE MANY PROBLEMS

Informants here suggest the two leaders undoubtedly will want to talk about the prospects of peace, relations with Russia, the possibilities of another summit meeting, the future of disarmament negotiations and world economic problems.

Merchant, who spent 30 months in Canada as ambassador during 1956-58 and has kept an interested eye on Canadian-American affairs since then, said he will remain in Washington for the White House talks.

"I'm delighted with the nomination," said Merchant. "I wouldn't exchange the travels I've had in Canada with any I made elsewhere."

Though there has been some editorial comment in United States newspapers suggesting that Canada-U.S. relations have deteriorated, Merchant said he wouldn't characterize the situation that way.

"There is a very natural and important relationship of interdependence between our two countries. In the United States, there's a tremendous reservoir of friendship and goodwill for Canada and I believe the same is true for the United States in Canada."

Find Methyl Alcohol Deaths Result Language Confusion

DELHI (CP)—Two Hungarian immigrants died after drinking methyl alcohol because, lacking English, they could not read the poison label on the bottle, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday.

The jury decided that Kathleen Csirkey, 32, and Joseph Deutche, 42, a boarder in her home, died of methyl alcohol poisoning.

They were told that Lazslo Ekk, subsequently found hanged in his home, apparently bought the poisonous alcohol for drinking through a confusion of language.

"Everything indicates the deaths were caused by the language barrier," said Inspector Louis Needham of provincial police criminal investigation branch.

He said none of the three persons who died could read English, and Deutche could not speak the language. The poison label on the fatal bottle meant nothing to them.

The inspector said he believed Ekk meant pure alcohol when he asked for "clean alcohol" at a drug store.

Mrs. Jenny Blakely, drug store clerk, said Ekk indicated he wanted alcohol for cleaning when he appeared at the store the day before the New Year's Eve party.

Mrs. Blakely said she suggested non-poisonous rubbing alcohol to Ekk by rubbing the back of her hand, but he replied negatively. She gave him methyl alcohol, labelled it as such and put a poison label on the bottle.

Inspector Needham said Ekk told police in a statement before he was found hanged that Deutche asked him to buy the alcohol. The inspector said it appeared that in Hungary persons may obtain a permit to buy pure alcohol to mix their own drinks.

Inspector Needham said Ekk told police he had six to eight drinks of the mixture of alcohol and peppermint flavoring. Ekk said Deutche had six to eight drinks and Miss Csirkey three or four.

Dr. F. W. Luney, pathologist, indicated Ekk may have survived the poison because some persons are more susceptible to methyl alcohol than others.

Before the jury retired Crown attorney W. Tisdale suggested there would be no trouble in recognizing poisons, regardless of language, if a skull and crossbones marked every bottle containing poison.

WANT PROPOSED INCREASES MADE RETROACTIVE

Say Vets Promised Increase Year Ago

OTTAWA (CP) — A demand that the government make its proposed increases in veterans' disability pensions, retroactive to last year was voiced in the Commons Wednesday.

It came from William M. Benidickson (L — Kenora - Rainy River) who, himself an RCAF veteran, claimed that the government had promised two years ago to provide the increases in 1960.

The one-year delay has been costly for disabled former servicemen, Mr. Benidickson said. The government should make up for this loss by retroactivity that would be of "utmost benefit" to veterans.

This was one of the new direct criticisms of the government resolution preceding introduction of the actual bill, which will contain details of a proposal that so far has been sketched only in a general way—in accordance with parliamentary tradition.

The resolution has been before the Commons on three sitting occasions and 34 MPs—most of them veterans, and 22 of them from the government ranks—have risen to debate the issue.

Almost all have praised the proposed increases. The few criticisms offered have generally followed the line taken in briefs submitted to the cabinet by the Canadian Legion, and deal more with administration of the pension act than the act itself.

New Congressional Inquiry Into Missile Gap in Making

WASHINGTON (AP)—A fresh congressional weapons inquiry was in the making today as Republicans assailed as political President Kennedy's statement he isn't ready to say if there is a missile gap.

Responding to a demand by Senator Prescott Bush (Rep. Conn.), chairman Richard Russell (Dem. Ga.) said the Senate armed services committee will call service chiefs of staff before it about Feb. 20 for questioning on the issue.

Senate Republican leader Everett Dirksen of Illinois called on Defence Secretary Robert McNamara to "tell the truth" about a Pentagon briefing of reporters which led to published reports there is no gap between American and Russian missile strength.

Senator Styles Bridges (Rep. N.H.) challenged as a "shifting of position to avoid the facts" Kennedy's repudiation of these reports at a press conference Wednesday.

Dirksen said in an interview he is writing McNamara asking if a press briefing was held and whether the secretary wants to say that reporters were wrong in quoting a Pentagon spokesman as saying there was no missile gap.

"When you deal with missiles as President Kennedy did and make them the burden of your campaign and the centre of the security section of your platform, you excite the apprehensions of the people," Dirksen said.

"If President Eisenhower was right in saying there is no missile gap, then the Democrats don't owe him an apology, but they owe one to the American people."

Bridges, who heads the Senate Republican policy committee, said in a statement that during the election campaign Kennedy had contended there was a growing gap. Bridges noted that a Pentagon spokesman —who Kennedy conceded was McNamara—had said Monday there was no such gap.

Mr. Kennedy, apparently, has felt the need to squelch the candor of the Pentagon in order to avoid discrediting the recent campaign tactics of the Democratic party," Bridges said. "Is this shifting of position to avoid the facts to be a hallmark of the new administration?"

RedSputnik Passes Over Edinburgh Just as Russians Said It Would

EDINBURGH (AP) —Russia's giant new sputnik passed over Edinburgh early today just as the Russians said it would.

Scientists at the Edinburgh Royal Observatory spotted the seven-ton satellite after the Soviet government had sent them a telegram telling them when to watch for it. It was Moscow's first information in the sputnik's course since the announcement Saturday that it was circling the earth.

"We caught a glimpse of it, but the bad weather prevented us from tracking it," an observatory spokesman said.

The spokesman said the sputnik was seen with the naked eye and had the appearance of a second magnitude star as it swung over the city shortly before dawn. Overcast prevented the observatory photographing it, he added.

Bennett McInnes of the observatory said about six scientists sighted the satellite with their naked eyes from the roof of the observatory building.

"We were able to see it for about 10 seconds," he said.

"We do not intend informing the Russians of our observations as it seems obvious from the information they supplied us yesterday that they have pretty accurate data on its movement in orbit."

There has been speculation in the West that a man may be aboard, though the Russians have made no mention of any passengers or even the type of instruments it carries.

No Western radio listening posts have picked up transmissions positively identifiable as coming from the sputnik, although several listeners have heard broadcasts they thought might have come from it.

Four-Month Strike to Continue Because Sunday Work Demanded

ORILLIA (CP) — Employees of Chemical Developments of Canada Limited at nearby Longford Mills voted Wednesday night to reject a proposed settlement of their strike, now in its 113th day.

The settlement proposal, reached in Toronto Tuesday by the management and officers of Local 632, International Chemical Workers Union (CLC) following labor department mediation, included a provision for Sunday work—the issue that led to the strike.

Union representative Alfred Simpson said the vote was 24-20 with four abstentions and one member absent.

Mr. Simpson said he had advised the workers that Q. A. Hutton, industrial relations chief of Chemical Developments' parent Dominion Tar and Chemical Company Limited, said Wednesday during the Toronto talks the company would move elsewhere if the seven-day week wasn't accepted.

Chemical Development is the largest detergent-base manufacturer in Canada. It has maintained continuous production is necessary to meet demand.

The union's opposition to Sunday work has been endorsed by the Orillia Ministerial Association and an editorial in The Observer, official publication of the United Church of Canada.

Details Of First British A-Sub Stolen For Reds

RN Witness Identifies Pages of Secret Book

LONDON (AP)—A court witness said today details of Britain's first nuclear submarine were among the Royal Navy secrets stolen by five persons accused of spying for Russia.

The five—three men and two women—were ordered to stand trial on espionage charges. They were refused bail and committed for trial at the Old Bailey central criminal court.

Symonds was shown photographs alleged by detectives to have been found in the possession of Gordon Lonsdale, one of the defendants, when he was arrested Jan. 7.

The officer said the photographs were of pages of a secret book giving particulars—many of them highly secret—of British war vessels, including the nuclear sub Dreadnought.

The magistrate adjourned the hearing for luncheon after Symonds' testimony and announced that the afternoon session would be held behind closed doors.

DISPLAYS EQUIPMENT

The agent, identified only as "Mr. L," demonstrated photographic apparatus he said was suitable for making microdots, a favorite Russian method of transmitting information secretly. Each microdot is a tiny bit of film no larger than a printed period. When properly magnified it blossoms out into a photograph of an entire page of typewriting or of a book.

"Mr. L" said he found the microdot apparatus at the homes of three of the defendants—Gordon A. Lonsdale, 37, Peter Kroger, 50, and Kroger's wife Helen, 47.

The other defendants are Harry F. Houghton, 55, and Ethel Gee, 45.

The Crown says they furnished the secrets to Lonsdale, who took them to the Krogers for transmission to Moscow.

Houghton and Miss Gee, who announced after their arrest Jan. 7 that they are engaged to be married, were permitted to sit next to each other in the dock. They seemed more interested in each other than in "Mr. L's" testimony.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Wednesday, Feb. 8

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced that the next federal-provincial fiscal conference of premiers will be held in Ottawa Feb. 23-24.

Finance Minister Fleming implied that the Commons opposition is holding up government designation of areas eligible for new industrial tax benefits—bringing forth a stream of objections from the Liberal front benches.

Introduction of a bill raising disabled veterans' pensions was delayed again as debate stalled at the resolution stage of the measure.

Will Conduct Inquiry Into British Press

LONDON (Reuters) — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan announced today he had decided to order a royal commission of inquiry into the British press.

Macmillan told the House of Commons the commission would "examine the economic and financial factors affecting the production and sale of newspapers, magazines and other periodicals in the United Kingdom."

Macmillan's decision follows a campaign by the Labor opposition party and others against monopolistic tendencies in the British press.

Recent months have seen the death of four national newspapers.

YOUTH CHARGED WITH GAS THEFT

Provincial Police have charged David Benn, 19, 176 Burnham St., with the theft of gasoline following his arrest early this morning. He is charged with the theft of gasoline from the J. W. Hamilton Construction Company of Thurlow township.

TAKEN TO HOSPITAL FOR CHECK-UP AFTER ACCIDENT

Gerald Thrasher, 33, of 15 Railway Terrace, was taken to Belleville General Hospital this morning for a check-up after being injured in a two-car collision on North Front Street, opposite the Grant Funeral Home.

Police said that Mr. Thrasher was northbound when he turned out to pass a parked garbage truck and met an oncoming vehicle head-on. The second car was driven by Delbert Foley, 39 Orchard Drive, Belleville.

Frozen Pipes Responsible For Fire

DESERONTO — Thawing frozen pipes with a blowtorch almost cost one homeowner his house last Thursday morning. With the temperature well below zero, Arnold Knight, Thomas St. West, took the torch to the basement to thaw the pipes before leaving for work. After he had gone Mrs. Knight smelled spoke and thought for a time that the stoves were smoking. Finally when the smoke became bad she went to the basement to investigate. When she entered she was greeted by a roomful of flame and immediately called the fire department who were forced to use a booster line to quell the flames. The fire had started under the floor and was making good progress when stopped. Damage from smoke was not too heavy, but there was a slight loss to some of the contents of the basement.

GASOLINE PRICE DROPS

MOSCOW (AP)—The price of top quality gasoline (98 octane) in the Soviet Union has been cut almost 40 per cent. The new price is one ruble two kopecks, compared with one ruble 58 kopecks before Feb. 1, or about $1.12 a gallon instead of about $1.68 at the government exchange rate.

Wealth of Facts on City Contained in Annual Report Assessment Commissioner

The volume possibly isn't intended that way but the annual report of the assessment commissioner for Belleville contains a wealth of facts about the history of the city.

For instance the report notes that the official incorporation as a village took place back in 1834—total area 613 acres.

The first annexation from Thurlow township occurred in 1849 when Belleville was more than doubled in area with the acquisition of 888 acres.

The next year Belleville officially became a town but was still a part of Hastings County until 1860 when it became a separated town.

Then in 1874 Belleville annexed another 225 acres from Thurlow, bringing its total acreage to 1,704.

In 1878 Belleville became a city with A. Robertson as the first mayor. Mr. Robertson served as chief magistrate for two years, being followed by R. S. Paterson, H. Lingham and J. W. Dunnet, all of whom served for two years. Mr. H. McIninch was the first Belleville mayor to serve for a single term—in 1886.

TWO SERVED 4 YEARS

And speaking of Belleville mayors, only two of the city's chief magistrates have served for more than three years.

From 1897 through 1900 J. W. Johnson served four consecutive years as mayor, while in 1932-3-4-5 the late George O. Tice headed Belleville city council.

Only four Belleville mayors have served three years, while the present council head, Mayor A. McLean Haig has the distinction of being the first local mayor to do a comeback after being out of council for a number of years.

Mayor Haig served as chief magistrate in 1952-3 and is now serving the second year of a repeat term.

After becoming a city back in 1878 Belleville apparently saw slow growth as there was no further annexation until 1949 when 140 acres in Sidney and 316 acres in Thurlow were annexed.

The city's big jump areawise was taken in 1959 when 868 acres in Sidney and 2,910 acres in Thurlow were annexed bringing the land area total to 5,937 acres. Belleville's population is now over 29,000.

HAD MISSION HERE

But to get back to early history.

The first white residents at what is now Belleville was back in 1665 when two monks are said to have had a mission here.

The first influx of United Empire Loyalists came more than a century later — in 1784 — while the first store was opened by a William Bell in 178[illegible]. The first industry, a dam and lumber mill, was built in 1790 and the first brick house was built in 1794 by J. W. Meyers after whom Belleville was briefly named.

The first lawyer, a Mr. Hagerman, set up practice in 1794 by special act, while the first bridge on what is now Bridge Street, was built in 1804.

The first village council in 1836 was headed by J. B. Flint. The first clerk was G. Benjamin and the first tax collector W. Dafoe. A. E. B. Sole looked after the assessing and surveying.

The first GTR train from Toronto to Montreal passed through Belleville in 1856 and two years later the first ferry to Prince Edward county was in operation.

And the first jail and courthouse was erected in 1838 and the first municipal building was built in 1873.

But then these buildings are not so old. In fact the jail and the city hall are still standing and are still in constant use, and Hastings county opened its new courthouse just last month.

St. Joseph's C.W.L. Sponsors Delightful Valentine Tea

A dainty Valentine tea was held yesterday afternoon by St. Joseph's C.W.L. in the Knights of Columbus Hall, with a splendid number of patrons and friends taking advantage of the sunny weather to meet with friends, and to lay in a supply of delicious homecooking.

Receiving the guests at the entrance to the tea room were Mrs. V. Muldoon and Mrs. F. Maund.

The tea table was especially attractive with its white damask linen adorned with red cupids bearing arrows and hearts, and its centrepiece of lovely red and white pom-pom 'mums mingled with glistening sprays of British Columbia huckleberry. Tall, ornate silver tri-branched candelabra with red candles, serviettes with tiny heart borders, and the shining silver tea services made an ideal Valentine motif.

The numerous guest tables, with their white cloths and pretty centrepieces of artistically arranged plates of delicate little cakes, and tiny sandwiches, divided from each other by an oasis of red and white flowers on lacey white doilies, were Meccas for friends to get-together over the "cup that cheers, but not inebriates."

Those who served included Mesdames R. A. Koenders, L. Barlow, E. Gray, C. Murphy, R. Hatfield, T. Clancy, C. Ford, F. Woodhouse, P. Kelly, J. Belanger and the Misses Mary E. Johnson, Gail Kelly, Patricia Fahey and Kathie Maund.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. H. Carr-Braint and Mrs. J. Hanley; Mrs. O'Callaghan and Mrs. W. J. Duminia; Mrs. P. Mercier and Mrs. T. Black.

The hostesses were Mrs. E. Hilbig and Mrs. C. F. Nichols.

The table of homecooking was especially inviting with its red, fluted holders of homemade candy, luscious cakes, tarts, cookies, pies, tea buns, loaf cakes drenched in shredded coconut; a mouth-watering layer cake in heart-shape with peaks of boiled icing, was topped by a cluster of white 'mums and seated on a base of red hearts; butterscotch squares, and tiny cup cakes in colors of pastel green, pink and chocolate brown; date squares and coffee cake, with loaves of fragrant homemade bread, were but a few of the confections offered. Mrs. J. Briand was the convener, assisted by Mesdames G. Pilon, J. Pilon, V. Dore, J. Brian Jr., A. Grignon and R. Levesque.

Another table was filled with religious articles, including bracelet pearl rosaries, medals, novenas, pearl Crucifixes, Holy Water bottles, and font; little shrines, statues of the Saints, the Blessed Virgin, cutwork gilt frames of the Saints, rosary cases and Prayer Books. These were in charge of Mrs. M. Panting.

Much praise goes to the convener, Mrs. F. Maund, and to the co-convener, Mrs. W. Meagher, and their assistants, Mrs. H. Bone, Mrs. E. Hardy, Mrs. Roy Johnson and Mrs. E. Porier for a successful tea.

The attendance prize was won by ticket No. 51. Phone 8-6269 for further information.

Good Curling Seen Second Day of Spiel

One will not see any better curling than that exhibited at the Quinte Curling Club when the annual men's bonspiel really got under way on Wednesday. A large gallery followed the play of the several rinks and they were treated some splendid shots by experienced curlers.

As a result of the games Frank Nutson's rink of Unionville and Ernie McEvoy's rink of Trenton RCAF will be back on Saturday as three-game winners while Al Parkhill's rink of Oshawa, composed of former Belleville residents and A. Kelly's rink of Trenton RCAF will return as two-game winners. A rink, entered under the name of Bill Gault and skipped during the day by several members, succeeded in winning the one-game high. Sixteen rinks were in play in the two draws and some real good rinks went by the wayside after the firing was over.

The Nutson rink of Unionville entered by Frank Nutson and skipped by Bob Morrow, one of the best young skips in the province today, with Nutson playing vice and with two young curlers on the front end gave the gallery a lesson in "takeout" play. The rink started firing in the first game and were still blazing away when the last rock was fired. The rink defeated Dr. McCorquodale of the local club in the first game 9-6, took Al Parkhill of Oshawa in the second 8-6 and finished off the day by defeating Claude Tice 8-6. This game was hard fought and a big three for the winners in the ninth made the difference. Tice failed to make the "draw" into the cluster being a trifle heavy. The local rink was not outcurled excepting on that particular end.

As usual the cheese table with the product supplied gratis by the Cheese Producers, was a busy place. A splendid old cheese was presented to the club and the curlers did ample justice to the fine food. The club turned the catering over to Pete's Lunch and the boys supplied the inner m an itwhhbet plied the inner man with the best of food and served in a most capable manner. The full course meals were delicious, especially the roast beef, smothered in rich gravy. For dessert, baskets of apples were scattered around the clubhouse and these were delightful.

Sixteen new rinks were in play today. The results of the draw were:

Police Dept. Here Offers Course in Safe Driving

Want to brush up on your driving technique and take a refresher course on the rules of the road?

If so, the welcome mat is out at the Belleville City Police Traffic Clinic which holds safe driving courses for both new and old drivers.

The safe driving course takes two weeks — two and a half hours on successive Thursday evenings.

Young persons getting their first drivers' licences are expected to take the safe driving course, but older drivers are also invited to take the course and brush up on their driving technique. Groups of people wishing to take the course are especially welcomed.

Head Inspector Of All Classes For Retarded

More than fifty people were present at the February public meeting of the Belleville Association for Retarded Children, held Tuesday evening at the school for Retarded Children.

Association president Alvin Parkhurst presided and committee reports were received. Twenty-one pupils are enrolled at the school, reported Mrs. A. Ward, education committee chairman. The Department of Public Health is carrying on an immunization program at the school. Visits by some of the pupils to the optometrist are being sponsored by the Kinsmen Club.

Mrs. Audrey Parkhurst reported that the children thoroughly enjoy their weekly swim in the Albert College pool as part of the recreational program.

Mrs. R. Coulombe keeps the adult retarded group together by parties held every month and bowling games enjoyed on Monday afternoons at the Bowl-o-Drome.

A home care committee has been formed by Mrs. L. Johnston for parents of retarded pre-school children. Public health nurses and the VON have been contacted to help this committee and parents with any problems. Mrs. Johnston also reported on her visit to the Research Conference held at Queen's University, Kingston, January 28th Many doctors made reports on research being carried on now in cell division and in multiple births as causes for mental retardation.

The association voiced thanks to the Soroptimist Club for the donation of a new vacuum cleaner and a floor polisher and to the Northern Electric Company for a $100 donation.

SCHOOL INSPECTED

Mr. L. A. Kells, Superintendent of Public Schools, introduced the speaker Mrs. A. M. Stocker, Inspector, Auxiliary Services, Ontario Department of Eucation. Mrs. Stocker inspects all classes for retarded children in Ontario and renders valuable advice about educational programs set up by local associations.

While in Belleville she met with the teachers of the School for Retarded Children, members of the Education committee of the association and with Mr. Kells. They discussed the teaching program being carried on and the administration of the school. Mrs. Stocker congratulated the association on having three very capable teachers who all have had experience working with retarded children and on having such a beautiful, pleasant school.

Retarded children love to belong and come to school, as the high attendance record shows.

Seventeen hundred retarded children in 66 schools in Ontario are being trained to become useful citizens in the community and the home.

After the meeting the visitors moved to the classrooms to view the work done by the children and to talk with the teachers. Notebooks were on desks, handicraft work and paintings were on display.

The downstairs classrooms have all been decorated by members of the Lions Club and the association. The school will again be on display at the official opening of the school by the Lions Club, April 8th.

Obituaries

GEORGE ROWBOTHAM

Following a lengthy illness, George Rowbotham, 66 Emily Street, died Wednesday in the Belleville General Hospital. He was in his 75th year.

Born in Stratford, London, England, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Rowbotham and had lived in Belleville for the past 55 years.

Coming to Belleville in 1905 Mr. Rowbotham first worked for the Walton Sash and Door factory until 1914 when he became an employee of the Canadian National Railways as carman, retiring in 1955.

He was a member of Christ Church and also of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America.

He is survived by his wife, the former Florence Bellis (Turner); four sons, George of Peterborough; Arthur of California; Alfred and Stanley of Belleville, and four daughters, Mrs. John (Catherine) Cornell, Toronto; Mrs. G. Farley (Hilda) Sharpe, Ottawa; Mrs. Garfield (Dorothy) Anderson and Mrs. John (Margaret) Ronsky, both of Belleville.

Four sons, Ernest, Thomas, Frank and Victor who died in 1958, are deceased.

ROBERT F. WOOD
R.R. 1, Hillier

PICTON — The death occurred very suddenly on Saturday, February 4, 1961, at his home, R.R. 1, Hillier, of Robert Frederick Wood. He had been at work the previous day and suffered a heart attack in the early hours of the morning.

Born on December 14, 1902, in Toronto, he was the son of Robert Albert Wood and his wife, Margaret MacArthy. He had resided in Hillier district for the past thirty years and enjoyed the esteem of a large circle of friends. He was a member of the United Church.

Surviving are his father, Robert A. Wood, in Toronto; his wife, the former Carmelita Alexander; a son, Robert A. Wood, Windsor; a daughter, Sharon Ann, at home; six brothers, Dick and Walter in Detroit, William, Frank and John in Toronto, Charles in Niagara Falls, Ont.; a sister, Mrs. Bruce Dockery (Irene), Toronto; also two grandchildren, Bruce and Nancy Wood.

He was predeceased by his mother, a son, Walter, and a daughter, Shirley.

Service at the Ainsworth Funeral Home, Wellington, Monday afternoon, February 6, was conducted by the Rev. Alfred Poulter. Entombment was in Wellington vault. Floral tributes included those from RCAF Trenton and W. Neilson Ltd., Toronto.

Relatives and friends from Marlbank, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Plainfield, Belleville and Trenton were among those attending the funeral.

MRS. MANSON HOWE

PICTON — An esteemed resident of Sophiasburg township in the person of Mrs. Manson Howe passed away suddenly at her Big Island home, Feb 1. Though she had not enjoyed the best of health for some time, she had been active about the home the day prior to her death.

Born near Corbyville, Hastings County, Mrs. Howe was formerly Nora Estella Foxton, daughter of William Foxton and his wife, Jane Yerex. She was in her 82nd year. Her early life was spent in Thurlow township. Following her marriage to Adam Marvin she resided at Allisonville. Later, she married Manson Howe and for many years, lived at Demorestville and Big Island.

Mrs. Howe was a member of the United Church and as long as health permitted was active in the Woman's Association and the Women's Missionary Society. A good neighbor and friend, she will be greatly missed.

Surviving are a son, Howard Marvin of Big Island and a sister Mrs. Arthur Carman, Green Point.

Rev. Walter Kingerley conducted the service at the Funeral Home of G. M. Hicks and son, Picton on Friday. There were lovely floral tributes. Relatives and friends from Belleville Brighton and Warkworth were among the large number attending. Entombment Glenwood vault. The bearers were William Caughey, Leo Thompson, W. R. Thompson, Manyard Clark, Borden Wager, Ross Sprague.

MASONIC MEMORIAL SERVICE

The brethren of Stirling Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 69 G.R.C., and sister lodges, are requested to assemble at the John R. Bush Funeral Home, 80 Highland Ave., Belleville, this Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m., for the purpose of attending a Masonic Memorial Service for our late brother, Seymour Hamilton.

By order of the Worshipful Master, Ivan Caldwell.

VOLNEY RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

IN MEMORIAM

COLDEN. — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Ethel May Colden, who passed away, February 9th, 1944.

The years may wipe out many things,
But this they wipe out never;
The memory of the happy days,
When we were all together.

—Always remembered by Art, Doris, Alan and Brenda.

McFARLANE. — In loving memory of a dear husband, William (Saul) McFarlane, who passed away on February 9th, 1958.

Oh happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memories still;
But death has left a loneliness,
The world can never fill.

—Ever remembered by Ethel.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express sincere thanks to all my relatives and friends for their many gifts and good wishes while I was a patient in the Belleville General Hospital. I also want to thank the ministers, doctors, nurses and the staff on First Floor West at the hospital for their kind and generous attention. All these many acts of kindness helped to make my stay at the hospital more pleasant.

—Mrs. Harry Sloan.

Obituary

SEYMOUR W. HAMILTON

In failing health for some time, Seymour Wilson Hamilton, 66 Gordon Street, died in Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday. He was in his 90th year.

Born in the 8th concession of Sidney township where he farmed during his active years, Mr. Hamilton was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton. He had lived in Belleville for the past 16 years.

He was a member of Holloway United Church and belonged to Stirling Lodge, A.F. and A.M.

He is survived only by one nephew, Clayton Hamilton, of Foxboro. His wife, the former Laura Hough, died January 31st.

Grade School Pupils Given Swim Awards

Thirty public grade school pupils received their swimming proficiency certificates for the successful completion of the learn-to-swim program for grade school students yesterday evening at the local YMCA. The program, sponsored by the YMCA, is a part of the Quinte Water Safety Council campaign to ensure that every child entering high school from the city's schools will be able to swim.

The program is held twice a week for three months duration in the splash bath of the local "Y" under the direction of the "Y" staff. Each year any non-swimmer in grade eight gets first chance at the course, followed by non-swimmers in grades seven and six, providing time and space allow for additional instruction.

Since the course got underway almost two years ago over 200 local boys and girls have learned to swim and earned their certificates. Although this is a considerable number the "Y" and the Water Safety Council hope to do even more by expanding their program to include swimming instruction for non-swimmers to grade school children in the surrounding area about the city.

Nearly every public school in the city was represented by at least one student.

Claims VON Not Being Treated Fairly

TRENTON — At last night's annual meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses, Sam Mowbray said the Trenton branch had had a deficit of $2,000 over a three-year period, due partly to a misunderstanding on the part of the town in reference to a grant from the provincial government. This grant was given by the government to supplement the municipality's contribution toward VON nursing services.

Last year, the town gave about $1,800 toward this part of the VON's expenses, $900 of which it will recover from the provincial government.

Mr. Mowbray said that the government had not meant to help the town to the extent of $900 in this manner and that the $900 should be given to the local branch.

"Some years ago," said Mr. Mowbray, "the local branch was in a fairly good financial situation. The town had been giving us an annual grant of $3,500. We voluntarily cut this grant to $3,000, with a gentleman's agreement that should the branch need the extra $500, the grant would be increased. The branch is not being treated as it should be treated. We are giving better service and we are getting less money. At this rate, with a deficit of $2,000 over three years, we may not be in business in a year or so."

Dr. Burr traced the work of the order from its inception late in the 19th century, when nurses across Canada made about 7,000 visits a year, to the present day when more than one million visits are made annually.

He said that the Canadian Cancer Society, with which he is connected, was glad to call upon the services of the V.O.N. in its work.

Dr. Burr outlined the work of the cancer society emphasizing its volunteer work.

He said there was a growing belief that smoking contributed to lung cancer, but that the same doctors who were convinced of this sit around the conference table smoking cigarets. He said that a reduction in smoking would decrease the cancer incidence.

Dr. Burr urged the women present to have regular annual check-ups. He said that cancer in women is curable to a great degree if caught in time.

Dr. Burr was introduced by Dr. W. A. L. McDonald and thanked by Dr. J. V. Byrne.

Clare Finkle Heads Trenton VON Branch

TRENTON — At last night's annual meeting of the Trenton branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses, Clare Finkle was elected president for 1961. The honorary president of the branch is Senator W. A. Fraser and the immediate past president is Ralph Weaver. Robert Barlow will serve as first vice-president; George Greer, second vice-president; treasurer, D. Jagges; secretary, Mrs. M. Gray.

Chairman of the car committee is Donald McPherson, who also sits on the board of governors; publicity, Mrs. O. W. Larry; supply, Mrs. K. Culbert; medical advisory board, Dr. W. S. Bailey and Dr. E. W. Dow.

The nurse in charge is Miss Joan Moyer, who will be assisted by Mrs. R. H. Turtle and Mrs. G. McInnes.

The meeting was attended by more than 100 branch members.

Miss Dorothy Connor and Miss Grace Connor of Belleville V.O.N. branch, were special guests. Councillor N. J. McNair, representing Mayor D. James MacDonald, brought civic greetings.

Retiring president Ralph Weaver thanked all those who had assisted with the work of the branch in 1960.

Skids on Street, Car Runs Amok, Lands in Store

TRENTON — Damage was estimated at $600 Wednesday night when a car hit two parked vehicles and crashed into the front of Al's Tire Shop on Dundas St., East.

Police said a car driven by Richard Harley, 27, RCAF Station Camp Borden, skidded on wet pavement, struck a parked car owned by Melbourne Leland, 14 Ferry St., causing $40 damage, then struck another car and dragged it 34 feet. Harley's vehicle then jumped the curb, crossed the sidewalk and crashed into the front of the tire shop, strewing plate glass and wood from the front of the store.

The front end of the Harley car was heavily damaged and there was also some rear end damage. Estimated damage to Harley's car was $400, while that to the store was estimated at $200.

Teachers Tour Air Station, Enjoy Flight

TRENTON — About 70 teachers from Breadner Public School in Middleton Park, their wives and husbands, were guests Wednesday of Air Transport Command.

The air officer commanding Air Transport Command, Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter, welcomed the supervising principal, C.A. Brown, his teaching staff and other visitors upon their arrival at the overseas terminal at the air station.

After refreshments were served, sightseeing flights were conducted in a North Star, a helicopter and an Otter aircraft around the countryside.

Air Commodore Carpenter, Group Capt. D. J. Williams, commanding officer of RCAF Station Trenton, Group Capt. T. A. Spruston, commanding officer of 6 Repair Depot and Wing Cmdr. J. D. Swerdfager, commanding officer of the Trades Standards Establishment, addressed the group in the overseas terminal.

Following the addresses, a tour of the station was made after which the group went to the Air Transport Operations Centre where a briefing on the activities of the command was given.

The Hidden Problem

Some Congressmen believe that other industrialized nations in the free world, notably West Germany, Japan, England and France, should assume a share of the responsibility of providing economic help for backward nations.

Whether or not U.S. foreign aid is reduced, President Kennedy plans to require that such aid be used for the purchase of goods in America.

This is not the first time this policy has been urged. In the past there have been two major valid objections—the restriction limits the benefits of such foreign aid grants, which in the past helped not only the country which nominally received them, but also the country where it spent the grants; and, secondly, because the prices of many U.S.-made goods are higher than those of similar goods produced elsewhere, it reduces the value of the grants to the countries which receive them. Today, though, with the U.S. facing a financial problem in the flow of gold abroad, one cannot blame Kennedy for desiring that gifts to poorer lands should not serve to enhance this difficulty.

The paradox is that while the undeveloped countries cannot produce enough for their own needs, the highly industrialized nations can produce more than they can sell, at home or abroad. It seems that the only way in which they can keep their economic machinery operating at anything near capacity is either to give away a portion of the goods this machinery produces, or else to destroy a portion of this production. In Roosevelt's time, this was done by the actual burning of consumer goods; of late years a like effect has been obtained by heavy expenditures on defence.

Some time the developed countries are going to have to come to grips with the real problem—what is the matter with our financial machinery and in what way can it be altered so that there can be created an effective demand for all the goods we are physically able to produce?

Unless an answer is found to that question, increasing the ability to produce of the underdeveloped nations would inevitably end in multiplying the surplus of goods for which no markets can be found and increasing the number of unemployed workers many hundred-fold.

"Ersatz" Evolves

Poland has rejected West German proposals for "normalizing," whatever that may be, West German-Polish relations.

It has termed the proposals "ersatz." This is not meant as a compliment. Possibly, though, a large proportion of today's newspaper readers will not readily grasp that fact, except by inference.

Knowing practically no German, except cuss words, we are not sure of the precise translation of "ersatz," but in the sense once familiar to us it meant a shoddy substitute for the real thing. How we laughed at Hitler's "ersatz" rubber and gasoline—and how quickly we learned that these substitutes, which we would now term synthetics, were no laughing matter! In the past two decades we have built a world filled with "ersatz" products, most of which are satisfactory substitutes for the natural products they have replaced, and many of which are superior

Instead of trying to revive the old meaning of the word, with its connotation of shoddiness, the Poles had better find another word to describe proposals of which they disapprove.

"Ersatz," if it has not actually acquired an aura of glamor, has certainly attained the status of respectability.

"Spirit of Justice?"

Egypt, which means Nasser, has released James Zarb, a Briton serving a 10-year prison term for spying.

The Cairo newspaper Al Ahram says the release was made in recognition of the "spirit of justice" shown by British historian Arnold Toynbee in criticism of Israel's alleged slaughter of Arab civilians, in a debate at Montreal.

Without in any way either questioning or supporting Toynbee's views, we must say that we find it difficult to understand Nasser's spirit of justice, whereby the freedom or imprisonment of an alleged spy depends upon what chances to be said by a fellow countryman, whom he has probably never met, and possibly never heard of.

Visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third or fourth generation is bad enough, but when our fate depends upon whatever views a fellow-countryman may chance to voice in some city half way around the world, life gets terribly complicated.

Strictly Personal

Slow Progress By Conflicting Major Changes

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

Genuine progress is so slow because it calls for two changes at the same time: change in the behavior of human beings, and change in the structure of society; and those who work for the first ignore the second, while those who work for the second ignore the first.

These modern ranch-type houses in which the front door opens directly into the living-room violate one of the basic principles of a good house: that some reception space be available for entering guests to arrange and compose themselves.

Young people, who are full of vague wishes for their future, ought to ponder Goethe's sage advice that "It is important to know as much as possible about what you want most of all, because sooner or later you are so likely to get it."

One of the ironies of our educational system, and perhaps of others, is that the higher one goes in the hierachy, the less intelligence is found. Teachers are commonly brighter than principals, and principals sharper than superintendents.

Corporations these days are concerned with "projecting an image," which means having the public think well of them. May I suggest that the old-fashioned method of turning out a good product is still the surest way of projecting an image?

All writers should heed the words of the late editor, Herbert Bayard Swope, when asked his formula for success. "I cannot give you a formula for success," he said, "but I can give you a sure-fire formula for failure — try to please everyone."

The old legal adage that "Justice delayed is justice denied" has never been exemplified with greater force than in our contemporary courts where over-crowded calendars and infinite continuances are the despair of plaintiffs with limited funds, time and patience.

Caps are the trickiest item of male attire. A man who wears one never really knows if he looks like a country squire or a city hoodlum.

An "ideal" is necessary when we hold it, but "Utopian" when an adversary does.

Royal Navy Weak-Kneed

Toronto Telegram

The Royal Navy's decision to leave six colored crew members behind when the aircraft carrier Victorious visits South Africa has stirred a furore in the United Kingdom. Well it should.

This is an example of the shameful accommodations that will have to be made time and again if South Africa remains in the Commonwealth.

The Admiralty spokesman said the nine men were being left behind in their own interest to "prevent any possibility of their being treated badly in South Africa." Poopycock! If men of the Royal Navy cannot expect fair treatment in South Africa regardless of color, why should the Victorious call there at all?

The Admiralty spokesman protested vigorously that there was no policy of discrimination on grounds of color in the Royal Navy but in the eyes of colored people the world over, the Navy has allowed Prime Minister Verwoerd to project apartheid onto one of its great ships.

Such weak-kneed acquiescence in South Africa racism besmirches the great fighting tradition of the Royal Navy. It is intolerable.

Canadians are healthy consumers of butter with a per capita consumption of 34 pounds in 1939, the total of creamery and dairy butter which 'disappeared' in Canada that year being 362,100,000 pounds, which was about 97.6 per cent of the total production. Domestic disappearance of cheese was less than 40 million pounds in 1939 and represented only about 32.3 per cent of the total make. The per capita consumption of cheese in Canada ranged about the average for year after year, namely 3.53 pounds.

Definite proof that old man Winter is about licked and that Spring is again in the offing, was seen by ex-Alderman B. F. TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THINGS YOU LONG FOR

Most of the things we long for most lose their attraction as they come near to our grasp.

And much that we have hoped for during a long period, gradually is absorbed by the interests of life itself, as we find out new things and learn — to forget!

So that it is well not to let disappointments linger too long.

But there should never come a period in your life when you are without longings. They are as essential to a happy experience as exercise is to a healthy body.

Do not brood over losses.

What is gone, is gone. That is the first fact to face in such an emergency. The next fact to face really becomes a condition — what are you going to do about it?

Another thing. As we grow in age and experience, our viewpoints change. The things we longed for in youth — and missed — we rarely long for in maturity. But it is because of these very longings that we are blessed with happier longings after youth has been served.

The boy who wanted to be a doctor turns out to be a lawyer or a jet pilot. And his longing then takes the direction of his interests.

But it is with the longings of the spirit that we are most concerned. Because it is through them that character is best developed.

seems to you a dire necessity of duty. You feel bound and cramped. Your spirit rises in revolt and falls in humble submission. But your soul fairly leaps in growth!

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SELF-ESTEEM

Recently I helped interview a man who hoped to join our organization. He seemed well qualified, and his record indicated that he had unusual ability. Apparently he thought so himself. He alluded to his past achievements, mentioned various people who thought well of him, and explained how much better he would do certain jobs than they were now being done. He made an impression of all of us — but an impression not of how good he was, but of how good he thought he was. We did not hire him.

The road between an inferiority complex and strong self-conceit is hard one for many people to follow. We all need to have self-respect. If we are to have the courage and strength to face our daily tasks and do them well, we need to believe in ourselves and trust that we are capable of doing them well. And it often helps others to have confidence in us if we have an air of quiet confidence in ourselves.

But it is one thing to know that we are able, and another to shout the fact at those around us. Our good qualities are amplified when others praise them; they are diminished when we praise them ourselves. It is better to let others find out how great we are than tell them ourselves. In the long run, they will find out — if it is true.

Letters To The Editor

Denies High Wages Cause of Slump

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Your correspondent of February 6, T. M. Montgomery, states not the Federal Government but high wages are the cause of unemployment.

I suggest the Federal Government has the authority and power to regulate Canadian currency and taxes, in the interests and need of the Canadian people. Then why a boom and bust with its unemployment, mortgage foreclosures, bankruptcy and insurance policy lapses?

Further in Mr. Starr's recent speech to the Toronto Board of Trade, he confirmed what labor economists have been saying all along that wage rates can't be blamed for the high prices, and he explained why.

Farmers, union workers, unemployed, and all people in financial distress will not receive their place in the community of man until they learn by whom and how they are being deprived.

GEORGE A. ELLIOTT,
28 Meyers Street.

Bus Service Poor Say Hillcrest Folk

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

We have been reading the letters sent to the editor and decided to add our beef, too. This one concerns our so-called bus service in Hillcrest. The service has been extended a whole block out here. It's a big help to the people at that end of Hillcrest, who only had a block to walk to catch a bus, even on the old route. But the people on the north end of Hillcrest have been completely ignored. Last week, with the weather any place between 10 to 14 below zero, our children had to walk a mile and a half to the schools in the city.

We sent a petition for better service, asking that it be extended as far as the school. That way it would be central for everyone. But we were told "that as time progresses we hope we can direct our buses to cover the population as the need arises.

With the present zoning by-law and the water situation out here, we doubt if the need will ever arise, to satisfy the transit commission. We help pay for the bus service. Why don't we have the use of it? Now we also pay taxi fare or walk. As for the water situation, here in the north end of Hillcrest we have no pollution of water. Maybe that's because very few of us have water.

Residents of the North End of Hillcrest.

Thinks Donors Should Be Paid for Blood

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

In answer to your editorial re blood donor shortage, may I give a few reasons why the donors are not much in a hurry to go?

1—The donor wastes his time and some may risk their health in giving blood, without any compensation for it.

2—The hospital charges plenty to the patient for the free blood they get and if the donor is not able to pay he will get no service no matter how much blood he has donated. (This happened in Bancroft about a year ago.)

3—Some two years ago I had an accident and needed emergency treatment. When I arrived at the hospital ward they let me stand there for a long, long time until they had all the answers as to my ability to pay for the treatment.

4—The hospital nurses, doctors and employees have good, steady well-paying jobs. Should they not be the first ones to donate blood?

5—If rich people use the blood bank and pay well for it, should a poor unemployed donor not get something for it?

Divorce Law Said Cruel

Brantford Expositor

At Kitchener a woman whose husband is reported to have been in a hospital for mental patients for 25 years has been convicted of bigamy. She told the court that a lawyer advised her she was free to remarry. This, no doubt, will be looked into further, but the case shows once more the inadequate and downright cruel limitations at present imposed by our divorce law. It should be amended.

To Your Good Health

Wife's Snoring Endangers Marriage After 43 Years

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Are sleeping pills harmful? Or will they make one healthy? My wife wants me to use them so I won't hear her snore. I think it's safer just to move into the next room. She objects.

"I don't want to make her unhappy, and I don't want to get the pill habit and I don't want to be found dead of an overdose, and as far as I am concerned, one is an overdose.

"I brought them, but I am afraid of them. Isn't there something that is safe to give to a person that snores? The pills I bought were on a doctor's prescription.

One sentence to unravel your problems about sleeping pills? Or is it about snoring?

The only one-sentence answer I can think of to save your 43-year marriage is: Earmuffs, if you can find some soundproof ones.

Now, my friend, I'm not really kidding as much as I may try to make out. Neither sleeping pills nor snoring are things to accept lightly. Let's take the easier problem first.

Sleeping pills, you know as well as I do, don't make one healthy. They are sedatives. They depress the senses, to make (or let) you go to sleep. Sleeping pills (or sedatives, as I prefer to call them, since sedatives are useful in amounts less than may be required for sleep) are valuable medication. They can make you healthy only indirectly. When a person needs rest yet can't sleep, a sedative can be the most useful drug in the world.

I don't think one sleeping pill is too many. But I agree that the sleeping pill habit is something to be avoided. The way to avoid it is to use sedatives only when absolutely necessary.

Nobody who, in proper need, sticks to one a night or, under specific medical instructions, perhaps two pills, will be found dead of an overdose. I think maybe you are unduly alarmed, but I won't object, because I hope everybody keeps healthy respect for these pills.

On the other side, I'm not too fond of the idea of giving anybody sleeping pills because of somebody else's affliction. In this case, snoring. I'm not at all sure that I can accept that principle unless, perchance, you are hypersensitive fellow who can't stand the dropping of a pin or the tick of a clock. Personally, I think anybody is entitled to a mild, well-modulated snore. But of course a good loud roar-snore can wake anybody up from a sound sleep.

For snoring, I have no panaceas, but a few suggestions: For some people, learning not to sleep on the back does it. For others, a chin strap or device to keep the mouth from popping open is the answer. For some, lying on one side or the other mutes the snores. Sometimes a polyp or other growth needs removing. For some I don't know any answer.

For the listener, I sometimes tentatively suggest ear plugs, hoping they'll work. Ear muffs might work, maybe. But moving to another room seems logical.

Ideally, after 43 years of marriage, a husband should learn to be deaf at night, if his wife snores; but to be acute of hearing by day, so there's never cause for a phrase like, "You never heard a word I said."

Unfortunately it's sometimes a hard trick to learn.

* * *

"Dear Dr. Molner: I am told that a mild cup of sage tea with honey in it at bedtime will help me sleep at night. Would this be harmful in any way? — Mrs. S. D. P."

I can't see any harm in it. I hope it works for you.

John, Jane Top Name List

St. Thomas Times-Journal

Each year, J. W. Leaver, of Ruisleys, Middlesex, England, sends to the London Times a list of the ten most frequently selected Christian names given to children whose birth or adoption was announced in that paper. The figures for 1960, which may interest our readers, are given as follows with the figures in parentheses indicating the places occupied in the list for 1959:

Boys — John (1) 185; James (3); 144; David (2) 134; Charles (4) 120; Richard (5) 100; Mark (7) and William (11) 99; Christopher (14) and Nicholas (8) 95; Michael (6) 94.

Girls — Jane (1) 185; Ann or Anne (3) 146; Mary (2) 137; Elizabeth (4) 119; Sarah (5) 115; Caroline (6) 80; Margaret (9) 71; Louise (8) 68; Susan (7) 65; Clare (11) 51.

Andrew and Simon were in the top ten last year but came eleventh and thirteenth places this year, having been displaced by William and Christopher. Also not in the list of the first ten in 1960 were Adam, Francis and Paul; ten showed an increase in popularity while Peter declined.

Among the girls, Clare narrowly beat Catherine (tenth in 1959) to regain her place on "the team." Emma, Georgina, Helen and Victoria obtained higher totals than in the previous year, but Fiona, Lucy and Patricia lost favor.

These facts may have little particular significance, but are interesting in that they do show the popularity of certain names among those parents who are upper crust Times adherents.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

In the less enlightened era that has passed, you could always get somebody to come to your rescue when the plumbing burst or the baby swallowed a pin or you found to your horror that there was no bread in the house.

The grocer, in those days, lived over the premises. All you had to do was go and rap on the side door. Plumbers were private individuals, not incorporated companies, and they lived in natural expectation of being called out at all hours of the night. And doctors, in those days, had not even heard of an answering service. Unless he was out on a call, a doctor was at home, not at a hockey game or a movie or attending some festivity of his profession. And if he was out on a call and the baby swallowed a pin, you merely had to go where he was. His wife knew.

Neither doctors nor grocers nor plumbers had any illusions about their human rights. When they embraced their profession or calling, they surrendered to it. A day and a night had twenty-four hours in it. And they were on call the whole twenty-four, and lived over the premises.

Little by little, we are drawing apart from one another. The time may come when we will not expect much of anybody. We will all be incorporated.

Presiding Grand Officers Of 4 Branches of York Rite Assist in Conferring Degree (Contributed by Allan Dempsey

An occasion unique in that for the first time in Masonic history, the presiding grand officers of the four branches of the York Rite took leading roles in degree-conferring ritual, took place in the Masonic Temple here recently.

The event marked another milestone in the history of the Cryptic Rite branch of York Rite Masonry. Under the supervision of Wor. Bro. A. W. Haggar, Commander Noah of Bay of Quinte Lodge No. 11, moored to Zabud Council No. 15, Royal and Select Masters of Ontario, the degree of a Royal Ark Mariner was conferred on a class of six candidates, five of whom are members of Ottawa Council No. 16.

Included was Thrice Illustrious Master Clarence M. Pitts, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, A.F. and A.M. of Canada Province of Ontario.

The presiding grand officers taking part in the colorful ceremony were presided over by Most Wor. Bro. Norman F. H. Bright, Ottawa, as Grand Commander Noah; Right Wor. Bro. Joseph W. Carson, London, Ont., Grand Master of Sovereign Great Priory of Canada, Knights Templar as Senior Warden "J" and Wor. Bro. Bruce H. Smith, Belleville, the Grand First Principal of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Canada, province of Ontario, as Junior Warden "S".

OTHERS ASSISTED

Among those assisting were Rt. Wor. Bro. Eugene W. Harrison, Grand Inspector General (Eastern); Rt. Wor. Bro. W. Bramwell Humphreys, Past Grand Conductor of Council and Knight of the York Cross of Honor; Very Wor. Bro. Morley H. Hancock, Past Grand Steward of Grand Council and Past Grand Standard Bearer of Sovereign Great Priory; Wor. Bro. Wm. P. Youdale, Past Grand Steward of Grand Chapter and Past Grand Provincial Prior of Sovereign Great Priory; Wor. Bro. E. John Chard Past Principal of Keystone Chapter; and the regular officers of the Lodge as well as Wor., Bro. Reginald Lewis of Lake Ontario Lodge No. 5, Toronto, Grand Lecturer of Grand Chapter.

BIBLE PRESENTED

After the installation of Bro. Harry W. Burns as Commander Noah, and Bro. Clarence McLeod Pitts as Honorary Past Commander Noah, Wor. Bro. Bruce H. Smith presented a beautiful white Bible suitably imprinted in gold on the cover with the fly-leaf carrying the details of the presentation to Bay of Quinte Lodge. This was followed by a unique ceremony in which the Bible was dedicated in a solemn and most impressive manner by Most Wor. Bro. R. W. E. McFadden of Macassa Bay Lodge, No. 9, Brantford, Past Grand Commander Noah and Grand Scribe of the Grand Master's Royal Ark Council of Ontario, Past DDGM of Brant District, Past Grand Superintendent of Wilson District, Past Provincial Grand Prior of Sovereign Great Priory and Past Prior of the York Cross of Honor.

The Bible was then signed in solemn ceremony by the four Grand Officers of York Rite Masonry with a copy of the presentation page, a duplicate of the signatures and a photograph of the Bible being given to both the donor and the principal candidate.

Wor. Bro. Burns informed Grand Commander Noah Bright and Rt. Wor. Bro. Carson that they had been made members of the lodge and asked them to sign the by-laws. This gives Bay of Quinte Lodge, No. 11, Royal Ark Mariners the distinction of being the only constituent Masonic body to have the four Presiding Grand Officers of the York Rite as members.

Before the Lodge was closed by the newly-installed Commander Noah and his officers. Past Commander Noah A. W. Haggar was presented with a Past Commander Noah's jewel and Past Commander Noah Clarence McLeod Pitts was presented with a Commander Noah's apron and a Past Commander Noah's jewel by the lodge.

MANY VISITORS

Visitors for the evening included Wor. Bro. W. Barlow of Cryptic Lodge No. 1, London, the Grand Master's Standar Bearer of Sovereign Great Priory; Bro. Earl McKeever, Lake Ontario Lodge No. 5, Past Grand Registrar of Grand Lodge and Past First Principal of Victoria Chapter, Port Hope; Bro. George Finnie of Lake Ontario Lodge No. 5, Past D.D.G.M. of Ontario District, and Past Grand Standard Bearer of Sovereign Great Priory, both of Port Hope, as well as several Bay of Quinte Lodge Mariners hailing from Ottawa Council No. 16.

At the close of the lodge, photographs were taken to commemorate this historic and outstanding event in the annals of Masonry, after which a delightful banquet was enjoyed by the members and their guests. The tables were laid out in true Royal Ark Mariner Lodge form with potted Olive trees being the only decoration and a color scheme of green and white. Special table napkins printed in green on a white background and commemorating the details of the occasion were highly prized as souvenirs by those present,

At the conclusion of the degree work, the following Lodge Officers were duly installed and invested in Bay of Quinte Lodge No. 11, Royal Ark Mariners moored to Zabud Council No. 15 of the Royal and Select Masters of Ontario.

34 Churches and Properties In City, Report Shows

Few persons in the city know the location of each and fewer still could name them but there are no less than 34 churches and church properties in the city of Belleville.

This is noted as general information in the annual report of the city assessment department made available at city hall this week.

United Church members, Anglican and Roman Catholic, in that order, are the most numerous in the city.

According to the report, which is not a religious census, but information extracted from the assessment roll according to the statement of the owner or tenants as given to the assessor, there are 8,792 United Church members and adherents in the city. There are 7,164 Anglicans and 5,566 Roman Catholics.

At the bottom of the list insofar as numbers are concerned are Mormons who number just seven, while Seventh Day Adventists total 14.

In addition to the members and adherents attending the 21 denominations listed, another 15 persons have their religious beliefs listed as "miscellaneous".

320 Attend Official Opening Of Parkdale Baptist Church

The official opening of the Parkdale Baptist Church took place on Sunday afternoon, with 320 people present. About 70 had to sit in the lower auditorium and listen to the proceedings over the P.A. system. Visitors were present from Toronto, Cobourg, Trenton, Picton, Havelock, by deputation, and many other places, individually.

GREETINGS

Greetings were brought by His Worship Mayor McLean Haig, and Mr. Lee Grills, MP. The mayor expressed greetings on behalf of the citizens of Belleville, stating that the backing of the churches is important to successful municipal life. Their influence is crucial to the promotion of the kind of morality and order that enables a community to have good government.

Mr. Grills brought greetings on behalf of the constituents of Hastings, and stated that he was impressed to see so many young people present in the meeting. He said that several years ago he had the occasion to be in a church service behind the Iron Curtain, that the church was not full and that almost all of those present were older people. He was happy to see the interest of young people in the church and remarked that this was a healthy sign for Canada.

GUEST SPEAKER

The Rev. Leander Roblin, of Kitchener, was the feature speaker, making reference to two important points on which the church and its value depend; the first was "an infallible Christ." Any church that denies the deity and perfection of Jesus Christ denies the heart of its message and has nothing to offer the people that come to it for help. The other was "an infallible Bible," adding that any church that denies the infallibility of the Bible denies the authority and certainty of Christianity.

"It can no longer speak with assurance to those to whom it ministers. We must have a perfect Bible, and we must believe in its authority if we are to be of any value to the people to whom we minister."

Sunday was the opening day for the new church which was begun last September. The materials for the superstructure did not arrive until the last week of November. Since then, the members and friends have volunteered their help and have completed construction and furnishing of the building. The church is 32 feet by 56 feet and seats 150 in the pews but 250 were in the main auditorium for the Sunday afternoon meeting.

The facilities include on the main floor, study, office, nursery and washrooms, and in the basement, furnace room, kitchen, three large Sunday School departmental rooms. The chancel area includes pulpit area, baptismal tank, choir section and a Hammond Spinet organ.

The cost of the building was approximately $25,000. The building was under the direction of Church Enterprises of Simcoe, Ontario and is the first church in the Dominion using the pre-engineered package which is the exclusive feature of the Church Enterprises of Canada. This is what makes the building so economical and has made it possible to erect a building which would cost over $40,000 if built by conventional methods, for just around $25,000. Because it is the first building of its kind in Canada, many building committees of congregations considering building have come from miles away to view the new Parkdale Baptist Church, and consider the plan for their own use.

Be Simple and Be Specific To Write Readable Report

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D. with HARRY KARNS

(Article 9)

Your outline is the skeleton of your written report.

In the last chapter we talked about how to build the skeleton and hinge it together. Now let's talk about how to put the flesh on the bones.

If you have performed all the other steps faithfully and well, this should be one of the easiest of all.

It is simply a matter of adding details, of expanding on the ideas which you have outlined.

When you undertake this expansion project, it is best to forget about "style" and write as naturally and simply as you can. Write as swiftly as you can but with the idea of making your first copy a finished product.

Remember as you write that words are tools to be used for conveying ideas. If they do not convey your meaning, you have failed in the use of your tools. The greatest writers write sentences and words that are easily understood. They do not try to be "literary".

It is good to have a large vocabulary so you can understand everything you read, but when you write, do not try to show off your big words.

A high school graduate of today recognizes about 50,000 words but actually uses about 10,000. A college graduate recognizes about 70,000 but actually uses about 15,000. John Milton used only 11,00 and Homer 9,000.

THE RIGHT WORD

Here are some suggestions that will help you select the words that will do the best job for you:

1. Choose the familiar word rather than the unfamiliar.

2. Use concrete terms rather than their vague cousins. When you mean "black", say "black" —not "dark". When you mean "tulip", say "tulip", — not 'flower". Don't say rodent if you mean rat, elderly if you mean 86, money if you mean $5, weapon if you mean carbine of officer if you mean brigadier general.

This rule is not intended to be rigid, for naturally there are many instances in which the abstract term is used because there is no specific reference. But by and large it is a sound rule of writing to prefer the concrete to the abstract.

After you have written your first copy of your paper, put it aside overnight.

Now read it again. As you read, check it for soundness of thought. You may discover, after letting it rest overnight, that certain points need to be made clearer. Others may make more sense if shifted to different positions in the paper. Still others may seem invalid or unnecessary. Make the corrections.

Read the paper a second time, correcting the grammar, the spelling and the punctuation.

If it is at all possible, try to get a preliminary criticism of the paper from your teacher.

Take the paper home again and rewrite it to include any helpful hints he may have offered.

When you feel that you have done everything possible to produce an effective paper, you are ready to make a final "clean" copy.

PLAY IT SAFE

Neatness is important. This is a child of your brain. Wash his face and hands and dress him in his best.

Try to produce an errorless copy, written in a clear script or on a typewriter, if required by your teacher.

Leave ample margins.

In the absence of other advice from the teacher, put the title of the paper and your name on the first page. Or put them on a separate title page in front of everything else.

Neatness will help you get a better grade. When the teacher gets such a paper, he has a good feeling toward it before he reads a single word. It is easy to read, and he will be able to pay attention to its meaning.

This word of caution, however: Do not try to substitute neatness for content. If a paper is genuinely good, it will survive a messy appearance; a neat but empty paper will have rough going.

Play it safe and follow the steps necessary to make your paper both neat and sound.

Those steps, in summary, are:

1. Understand your topic.

2. List the possible sources of material.

3. Gather a substantial amount of useful material.

4. Outline your paper.

5. Expand the outline, trying to produce a finished paper.

6. Use clear, simple words and sentences.

7. Put the paper away overnight, then read it again for soundness of thought.

8. Read a second time to correct grammar, spelling and punctuation.

9. Try to get a preliminary criticism from your teacher.

10. Make final changes.

11. Produce a neat final copy.

S.A. Work Told To Tabernacle W. Auxiliary

The regular monthly meeting of Tabernacle United Church W.A. was held in the ladies' parlor last Thursday.

Due to the absence of Mrs. P. Kerr, the vice-president, Mrs. Morley Graham, opened the meeting.

Several thank you notes were read from those who were remembered by W.A. at Christmas time.

Mrs. Rose had charge of devotional, lesson was read from 2 Peter 1, the topic was, "What can we give to help those around us?"

"Peter had no money but he gave a prayer. Sincere reverent prayer helps all causes.

"We can give our time and talents. We can give thankful appreciation, encouragement and praise. None of the Christian graces is more beautiful than a spirit of thankfulness.

"How often we could spend a few moments of our time to help someone in need. Let us not bury our talents but use them in God's service".

Mrs. Goraline introduced the guest speaker, Major Carter, of Salvation Army, who spoke of organization of army: William Booth felt that there were many people in the east end of London, England, who had no contact with the churches. He decided to help those in that part of the city who needed help so the Salvation Army was organized. They held services and brought in the poor and the outcast and many lives were transformed by the power of God.

From England the Salvation Army spread to Canada and other countries till now it is a world-wide organization".

Major Carter said that one of the services the army performs in Belleville is a gospel service in the jail every Sunday morning. The army personnel pay visits to prisoners and their families. One of the services the army performs in the province is to help young men who have been in trouble with the law to start over again in the right way.

For this service, there is a farm at Concord, near Toronto, where these first offenders are given a second chance. It is surprising how much good is accomplished in this service.

HARBOR LIGHT CORPS

Then there is the Harbor Light Corps in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, where alcoholics and many others in trouble have been led to the mercy seat where they have met God and gone out to serve and help their fellow travellers.

At the conclusion of the meeting, a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments served by group one.

MORE SUSCEPTIBLE

St. Columba P.W. Hears Talk On St. Columba

An informative and enlightening historical account of the life and works of the great missionary, Saint Columba, was heard at this month's meeting of the Presbyterian Women's Guild at St. Columba Presbyterian Church, Farley Avenue.

The guest speaker at the above meeting was Mrs. R. D. MacLean, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

"Saint Columba was born in Ireland at Garton in the year 521. Entering the church, he rose to a position of conspicuous eminence and influence. However, he became involved in some of the controversies of that turbulent time and decided to leave Ireland. The hand of Providence directed his departure for Columba was later to become "The Apostle of the Northern Picts."

"Columba, with twelve companions, sailed from Ireland crossing the North Channel to Scotland. Finally they dropped anchor in a quiet bay, landing on the shore of the Island of Iona.

BUILDS MONASTERY

"Here, he built his monastery and devoted himself to his favorite task of transcribing the Scriptures. Often too, he would sail to the other islands and far-off lands to preach the gospels.

"In his 76th year, he had reached the 34th Psalm in his transcription and wrote on till he came to the tenth verse: 'They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing.' Here I must stop," he said, "Let Baithune write the rest.

"On the following Sabbath morning, the 9th of June, 597, the venerable Columba entered into the Sabbath of eternity."

A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. MacLean by the president, Mrs. F. VanRompaey.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. Fullerton, the vice-president, Mrs. F. VanRompaey opened the meeting with a hymn and prayer. Mrs. A. Dunsmore read the Scripture.

RESIGNATION ACCEPTED

Acceptance of the resignation of the president, who is suffering from a back injury, resulted in the election of Mrs. F. VanRompaey as the new president. Mrs. R. Ashley was then elected to fill the vacancy of vice-president.

Plans were completed for the home bake sale and coffee party to be held later this month.

Mrs. N. Hutchinson announced the forming of a second Presbyterian women's group with the first meeting to be held this coming Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the St. Columba church school building on Farley Ave.

Mrs. D. Craig extended a warm invitation to all to attend the coffee party and homemade candy sale to be held later in the month by the CGIT.

Following the business meeting Mrs. G. Miller conducted the mission program and introduced Mrs. R. G. McKay, who gave an interesting message on Presbyterian missionary work in Formosa.

After the meeting was adjourned a social half hour followed.

Capacity Crowd Attends Annual Guide, Brownie Tea

With spring-like weather prevailing outside, it was equally refreshing outside when the Belleville Division Committee of the Girl Guide and Brownie Association held its annual tea and bake sale yesterday afternoon in the parish hall at Christ Church.

The conveners of this most delightful and successful occasion were Mrs. D. G. Williams and Mrs. L. G. Lennox, and the ticket convener and treasurer for the tea was Mrs. F. G. Belsey.

Receiving at the entrance to the appropriately decorated auditorium were Division Commissioner Mrs. D. Stewart and Quinte Area Commissioner Mrs. M. Haig.

The complete color scheme and decoration of the tea room was in keeping with the traditional Guide colors of blue and gold, and everywhere the eye turned the theme of guiding was evident. Noteworthy of mention were the three different insignia extended across the one wall, representing the Rangers, Guides and Brownies, with their respective mottoes. On the platform were potted ferns and golden colored 'mums and golden candles in crystal candelabra adorning the piano.

At the entrance to the tea room where each individual table was covered with the traditional colored deep blue luncheon cloth, centred with trays of dainty sandwiches and petite cakes and cookeis, were the tea room hostesses, who were the district commissioners: Mrs. R. Settle, Mrs. H. Floyd, Mrs. T. Hay, and the area international adviser, Mrs. R. D. Arnott. Here, the twin tea tables were lovely in the simplicity of their appointment with silvery colored driftwood holding sprays of dainty yellow and blue flowers, and flanked by tall golden colored candles in tri-branched silver candelabra with gleaming silver tea services.

POURING TEA

Those pouring tea were Past Commissioners Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, Mrs. L. Riggs, Mrs. M. C. Ryan and Mrs. D. Diamantides, past badge secretary Mrs. A. Lewis and members of the division executive, Mrs. J. Demeta, Mrs. F. Benson and Mrs. J. E. Kuntse, also officers of the district associations and badge secretaries, Mrs. C. Lusk, Mrs. A. A. Mathews, Mrs. D. Lamb, Mrs. D. Ross and Mrs. Major Carter.

The Guiders replenishing the abundant supply of goodies were: Mrs. R. G. Lane; Miss A. Franklin; Mrs. G. Chisholm; Mrs. E. Rawlyck; Mrs. J. McLaughlin; Mrs. G. A. Wilson; Mrs. A. Bruyea; and Mrs. J. Walsh.

Those serving were as follows: Mrs. D. Poulton; Mrs. W. Horwood; Mrs. C. Fremming; Mrs. H. Birkenshaw; Mrs. R. Pearson; Mrs. N. Gerow; Mrs. C. Male; Mrs. P. Stallkovitch; Mrs. D. Kuhn; Mrs. P. J. Cleary; Mrs. W. A. Eakins; Mrs. W. Irwin; Mrs. G. Greatrix; Mrs. G. Brunt; Mrs. A. M. Steenburg; Mrs. K. K. Piwowarski; Mrs. F. Donohoe; Mrs. K. Harnden; Mrs. A. H. Williston; Mrs. H. Sutton; Miss W. Huffman; Mrs. E. E. Lewis; Mrs. W. J. Ryan and Mrs. Butler.

Those in charge of the nursery were Mrs. D. Cairns; Mrs. J. Henry; Mrs. E. Alyea; Mrs. D. Allen; Mrs. D. Fournier, Mrs. F. Green, and Guiders assisting were — Mrs. S. Whittaker and Mrs. A. Wagner.

HOME BAKING

As usual the home baking room seethed with would-be purchasers and within a short period everything was completely sold out. Each of the 3 Belleville divisions was represented and carried an abundant supply of delicious confections, which included pies of all kinds, cup cakes, layer and rectangle cakes of every description, date squares, tarts, puff pastry and chocolate eclairs, cookies both large and small, home made buns and rolls, and many other tasty tid-bits. The Belleville West Division Bake table was convened by Mrs. H. S. Featherstone, with Mrs. E. T. Bedford, Mrs. R. T. Boldrick, Mrs. H. W. Hunter, Mrs. P. Lintott, Mrs. E. Shettell, Mrs. C. S. Lowther, Mrs. R. F. Terry assisting with Mrs. F. Rodgers and Mrs. R. S. Rolston in charge of the decorating. The south-east district bake table was convened by Mrs. J. McFarlane and assisted by Mrs. E. J. Pope, Mrs. J. D. Holmes, Mrs. J. D. Adamson and Mrs. R. G. Burns. The north-east district bake table was convened by Mrs R. Pringle assisted by Mrs. R. Lepore, Mrs. J. E. Dodge and Mrs. T. Riley, Mrs. R. J. Mawdsley and Mrs. Gillespie.

The candy booth with its nicely packaged maple creams, divinity fudge chocolate fudge, all of which were eagerly picked up was in charge of the Ranger Company.

Those behind the scenes for this most successful and well convened affair were the kitchen conveners Mrs. B. McCullough and Mrs. L. Lennox assisted by Mesdames R. Roulet, S. Wiggins, H. Ashton, C. Richards, W. Mills, K. Lewis, T. Carruthers, W. McCreary, J. Clark, N. Meldrum, W. Ironside, J. Sandford and Mrs. Garrison, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Sine, Mrs. May, Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Fraser.

One-Act Play Festival Changes Time

Due to circumstances beyond its control, Peterborough Little Theatre has had to withdraw its entry, "Pot-Luck," from the one-act play festival being held in the Belleville Collegiate this coming Saturday afternoon and evening. This has necessitated a re-arrangement of the remaining entries.

The Trenton entry, "No Exit" by Jean Paul Sartre, which has a running time of over an hour, has been put into the 2 p.m. slot. Belleville's "Box and Cox", a late 19th century farce, has been moved up to the 8 p.m. curtain, joining th St. John's (Peterborough) presentation of Thornton Wilder's "Happy Journey." Arrangements for the social get-togethers have not been changed. The spaghetti dinner is still slated for 5 p.m. in the Hotel Quinte's Club Room and the after-the-show celebration for 11 p.m. in the same hotel's Prince Edward suite.

"Box and Cox" is a revival of a play originally produced as a Workshop Production by the Belleville Theatre Guild. (A Workshop Production is one produced for the membership of the group rather than the general public.) "Happy Journey" is another foray by Thornton Wilder into the intricacies of a play without a set or the conventional properties, complete with a character listed as the Stage Manager. "No Exit" is the tale of three people who find themselves in a room with one door, a door that only opens from outside the room. The room turns out to be, literally, a hell of place.

Tickets will be available at the door for those who have not obtained them from Theatre Guild members.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Constance Jane Winter has been appointed director of nursing at Westminster Hospital here. She came to the city from Ottawa were she was assistant to the director of nursing services in the department of veterans affairs.

BGH Problems Topic at St. Michael's PTA

The monthly meeting of St. Michael's Parent-Teacher Association was held in the auditorium of the school, on Monday evening last, with the president, Mr. Joseph Doyle, presiding.

The Rev. Sister Mary Andrew opened the meeting.

The secretary read a letter from the Rev. Sister Mary Teresa, principal of Nicholson Catholic College, thanking the Association for its donation of $50. which was used for the purchase of eight crucifixes, one for each of the classrooms in the College.

The president expressed the sympathy of the parents and teachers to the Rev. Sisters Mary Andrew and Mary Frances Claire, on the death, recently of their mother.

Following a short business meeting, the president called upon Mr. J. Darlington to introduce the guest speaker of the evening, Dr. F. R. Ross.

HOSPITAL PROBLEMS

Dr. Ross spoke on the problems faced by the Belleville General Hospital and the fact that the citizens of Hastings County and the City of Belleville will soon be faced with major decisions which must be made in order to ensure that adequate hospital facilities will be available in the future. He pointed out that the hospital is presently operating at 104 per cent of capacity, whereas a more desirable rate would be 80 per cent of capacity. When the rate of future demand is considered in conjunction with the present overstrained capacity, it is quite apparent that the hospital system should be the subject of serious thought by each and every citizen.

Attendance plaques were awarded to Mrs. Cantin for the Junior School; Miss Breen for grades 6, 7 and 8 and the Rev. Sister Mary Celestine for grades 9 and 10.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. C. H. Langabeer and her committee.

Sour Cream

Pasteurized cream with approximately 18 per cent butter fat is especially soured for cooking purposes and table use. It is generally available from dairies and dairy counters of local stores. Sour cream has the consistency of custard and tangy flavor produced by the culture or starter used in the souring process.

Sour cream has many delicious uses, for example it may be used in recipes for quick breads, cookies and gingerbread. It is good as a sauce over asparagus, broccoli, cauliflower, beets, turnips and squash. Sour cream blends well with soft cream cheese and seasonings for a nippy dip with potato chips. A dollop of whipped sour cream on a bowl of steaming soup not only garnishes but gives character to an otherwise ordinary meal starter. It serves the same purpose for fruit desserts, compotes, cobblers and pies.

The Consumer Section in Ottawa cautions about adding sour cream to hot cooked foods like vegetables, soups and desserts. The caution: add sour cream to hot food just before serving and reheat quickly over low heat, stirring constantly. The reason: the cream will curdle if the dish is left standing too long before serving.

Here is a recipe for potatoes and sour cream from publication 1058: Potatoes. This booklet contains some 50 potato recipes and is available free from Information Division, Canada Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. (No stamp required).

POTATOES AND SOUR CREAM
(Hungarian Style)

4½ cups diced raw potatoes (½-inch cubes), ¼ to ½ cup boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons melted butter, 1¼ cups sour cream (½ pint), ½ teaspoon salt, paprika.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water 3 minutes. Drain. Add butter. Cover and cook over medium heat until potatoes are tender, about 15 minutes, stirring gently to prevent sticking. Add sour cream, ½ teaspoon salt and simmer 5 minutes. Sprinkle with paprika and serve at once. 6 servings.

Baked Beans As Herbie Remembers Them

By Mary Moore

About every three years we get visit from Herbie between postings. When he is here I try to cook for him the things he remembers from his childhood. One is coffee bread as Nana Onensen used to make it and another is baked beans as his mother made them.

Nana Onensen's coffee bread is pale yellow and very fine textured and intricately braided. She has the recipe in her capable head, so it is impossible to try to reproduce it here, but Herbie's mother's baked beans are easier to copy. These we made to his satisfaction last week.

For one thing, red kidney beans are used instead of white navy beans. The reason for giving the recipe today is because it is so good for a mid-winter dinner and actually improves if any is leftover in the bean pot. It is obvious that they are inexpensive.

HERBIE'S BAKED BEANS:

Wash one pound dried red kidney beans and soak in cold water to cover overnight. Add a little more water if necessary to barely cover and simmer covered until tender, from half to one hour. Place a whole peeled onion in the bottom of the bean pot (see note below) and pour cooked beans and whatever liquid is on them over the onion. Add 1-4 to 1-2 pound bacon ends, chopped. (Note: On the bacon counter I found a 1-pound package of rough bacon ends at a greatly reduced price — 29c per pound. Half of this I chopped and used in the beans. The other half I chopped and used in a big pot of pea soup.) Mix together in a small bowl 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 tablespoons catsup. Mix well together and add 1 cup boiling water. Pour over beans and pork and stir in. Add just enough hot water to cover beans. Put on cover and bake beans at 275 deg. Fahr. anywhere from 4 to 6 hours. Remove cover during last half hour to dry off top a little.

We served this for lunch one day with a crisp cabbage salad and fresh homemade whole wheat bread.

The following day we reheated it in a slow oven with the addition of 1-2 cup of tomato juice, and served it with a platterful of baked pork sausages and a big bowl of green broccoli with mock Hollandaise sauce.

NOTE:

A bean pot is a nice piece of equipment to own and is inexpensive. But many a good dish of beans has been baked in a lard pail or honey pail or common casserole. So do not let lack of bean pot stop you from making this homey flavorful dish.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

SUNDAY

The price of a bean pot ranges from $1.00 to $5.00 but the quality of the contents is the same. Use any heavy baking dish with a cover. If the time is ever right for baking beans it is now when temperature and budget are low.

ST. OLA W. A.

ST. OLA — On Wednesday the regular monthly meeting of the St. Ola W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Roy Philips.

The president, Mrs. Oscar Philips, was in the chair and 11 members were present.

Business was discussed. Miss Ann Mills recited "The Christian's Alphabet." The theme was "The Majesty of the Christ." The devotional period was taken by the hostess, Mrs. Roy Philips, who later served a delicious lunch which was enjoyed by all.

Cribbage, Euchre Party At Town Hall

WELLINGTON — Mr. and Mrs. William Yandt were host and hostess to about 80 of their friends in the Wellington Town Hall on Saturday evening. Euchre and cribbage were played until about 10.30.

After the games, the hall was cleared and round and square dancing was enjoyed until midnight.

Mrs. Yandt presented prizes to the following: Euchre — ladies' high, Mrs. M. Morrison of Port Hope, 2nd high, Mrs. O. Bovay; low, Mrs. D. McKenzie; men's high, Mr. M. Morrison of Port Hope; 2nd high, Mr. Bill Gee of Belleville; low, Mr. Clifford Carley; Cribbage — ladies' high, Mrs. E. Carson; 2nd Mrs. A. Ogilvy; low, Mrs. J. Callow; men's high, Mr. J. Callow; 2nd high, Mr. Ralph Moon and low, Mr. Eldon Carson.

Mr. Morrison, holding the lucky plate, received another prize.

The hostess, Mrs. Yandt, assisted by several ladies and gentlemen, served refreshments.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Sara B. — They tell us never to give a present to one child, always both.

Mabel M. — We want to prevent jealousy between our daughters.

• • •

Sara B. — My sister and brother-in-law have two little girls, one four, the other seven. Since my husband and I travel around the country extensively, we come across interesting toys and souvenirs and we like to mail them home to the children. But Mabel says that unless we can send two identical tokens, not to send any!

We don't get it. The children are different ages, different types. The older one, Nancy, is graceful and petite, while the baby, Nelly, is chubby and dancing and singing, so we like to send her things like recordings and harmonicas, as well as Indian belts and Scottish kilts. For Nelly, we buy picture books and games.

Sometimes it's impossible to get duplicates of a gift. We can't understand Mabel's reason for treating her daughters like carbon copies of each other, when anyone can see they're completely different!

• • •

Mabel M. — My husband and I have seen too many examples of deep-rooted jealousy between brothers and sisters. We decided to try to avoid this with our children, from the start.

I can't worry about how this looks to others, including my sister who, I know, is really devoted to us and the girls. I'm more concerned with the effect of presents on the recipients, my children, than with the annoyance of the donors over my request to send two-at-a-time.

This way, Nancy's automatic reaction to any joy is, "Where's Nelly's?" Before she begins to play with a ball, or try on a blouse, she waits to make sure Nelly has one too. We think this is planting a lifelong solicitude for each other.

• • •

The Council — While the goal Mabel and her husband have in view is laudable, their method betrays some confusion on what constitutes "equal" treatment. No two individuals are so alike that you can limit them, willy-nilly, to the same kind of attention, even though you are careful to give them the same amount of attention.

These two little girls are learning to check up on whether Sister has something, but with no idea whether it's the right thing. It's like handing out sweaters to everyone in an office because the boss feels chilly. Some of them may need a fan!

Aunt Sara is right in asking her sister to examine the ruling which is so rigid and extreme as to be unrealistic in terms of life as these children will have to live it. They're not really learning to share. They're learning to measure and compare. Unless they start from the same point and run to the same goal in the same time they won't play!

There's another point, one which we've heard many times from the older or oldest of a group of siblings who receive identical treats. "It's not fair," they say. "When I was four I didn't get my own microscope. Why should he? I had to wait until I was seven" They do like a few special nods toward their seniority.

But if it's character-training Mabel and her husband have in mind, they'll get further by teaching a little giving-up when there's a shortage, rather than a divvying-up when there's a glut. It's harder on parents and children, of course. But it makes life easier and more rewarding later, this ability to sacrifice and share.

Suppose Aunt Sara buys the last "vinte escudo" stamp in the hotel, the night they leave Portugal. Nancy and Nelly can't share it. Who gets it? Can't Nelly be taught to be happy that Nancy, her sister, has it? And can't the slack, if any, in Nelly's life be taken up in dozens of other ways?

In other words, Mabel must prepare her daughters for the stark fact that some things can't be shared even-steven. (Not even Steven, if he's a boy friend!) Happiness comes not from ducking conflict, but from bucking it and coming to bearable terms.

River Valley W.I. Holds Card Parties

Last Friday evening River Valley Women's Institute held a double card party under the convenership of Mrs. J. L. Donohoe, and Mrs. Ed Heasman. There were 36 in attendance and 13 visitors from Frankford and Stirling. The proceeds amounted to $13.

Five Hundred was played in the school kitchen with three tables. The ladies prizes were donated by Grace Donohoe and the men's by Ada Bush. The awards were: ladies high, Mrs. Bob Hearns, Frankford, 4530 points; Mrs. S. Kirkey, Stirling; men, high, J. R. Donohoe, 4080 points; Claude Tucker.

Six tables of euchre were played in the school house and the prizes were donated by Mrs. Jennie Donohoe. Ladies high, Mrs. E. Heasman, 87; Mrs. Bert Bedford, 80. Men, Lloyd Dafoe and Jack Sager.

The guests were welcomed, and Mrs. J. L. Donohoe announced that another double card party would be held on Friday evening around Valentine theme.

The conveners and their assistants served refreshments.

Women's Activities

CENTRE ST. UNITED W.A.

The W.A. ladies of Centre St. Church held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon in the church auditorium with an average attendance. Mrs. Longhurst opened the meeting with this thought, 'However rough our path of life, Christ is always with us to lead and guide us,' followed with the usual manner of devotion. Scripture was read by Mrs. P. Schamerhorn, Romans 12 4-21. Mrs. K. Ferguson gave the topic, 'With Brotherly Love'; 'So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and everyone members one of another.' She went on to say, "A warm spirit of friendliness among the members of any society is the oil that makes the machinery move smoothly. The Apostle tells the church members of Rome 'Be ye kindly affectioned one to another.' No church workers, no matter how clever and successful outwardly, can accomplish anything to further the Kingdom of God, without this spirit of kindly affection, as Paul tells the Corinthian Church, 'Though I could remove mountains and have not love, it profiteth me nothing, so this is the same in our personal lives and in our meetings we must see to it first that the light of love burns brightly. 'The universe is so ordered,' says a great English prelate, 'that self-seeking ends in disaster.'

"Let us thank God that the contrary is true; seeking the good of others ends in blessings for all. Every task, however simple, sets the soul that does it free."

"Help us to help each other, Lord, each other's cross to bear. Let each his friendly aid afford and feel his brother's care."

Mrs. Wood gave the financial report.

The ladies plan to hold a spring tea in April.

At the conclusion of the meeting, readings were given by Mrs. Hoult, Mrs. W. Schamerhorn and Mrs. C. Keller.

Mrs. Hoult and Mrs. Wood won the valentine contest.

A social half hour was enjoyed by all.

"THE WAY TO HIS HEART IS THROUGH HIS STOMACH". And since St. Valentine's Day and Pancake Day both fall on February 14th this year, here's a sure way to please that "Valentine" of yours, with tempting tender pancakes, of course!

Woman's Voice Heard for First Time in House

HALIAX (CP) — A woman spoke Wednesday as a member of the Nova Scotia legislature—the first time it has happened in the 203-year history of that House.

Mr. Gladys Porter (PC—Kings North), elected in the June provincial election, seconded the reply to the throne speech as the legislature opened.

Mrs. Porter said she was "happy" to become Nova Scotia's first woman MLA and "it is satisfying" to know that women are able to take part in government.

SCHEME APPROVED

SARNIA (CP) — City council learned Wednesday that both the federal and provincial governments have approved an agreement covering the Bluewater redevelopment scheme, involving relocation of about 450 families from a residential area surrounded by heavy industry. The federal government will pay half the net cost of the program, estimated at $2,000,000 and the provincial government and the city 25 per cent each.

That's right! It just takes seconds to stir Gerber Cereals to creamy-smooth perfection. That's because they thirst for milk or formula . . . and absorb it in a flash. Best of all, there's no separation; the smoothness lasts throughout the serving. One big reason why babies love these superior cereals.

As for your baby's nutritional well-being, Gerber Cereals are thoroughly cooked and easy to digest so baby can get full nutritional benefits from them. In addition, these quality cereals are enriched with easy-to-absorb iron, B-vitamins and calcium. And they've plenty of the calories every active baby needs.

Lines on Life

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Security, if you asked the average man to sum up his life's greatest desire that would be his word for it.

You'll find, of course, many re-arrangements and combinations. But always you come back to the same word: social security, job security, old-age security, wage security. Where does security come from? It it a physical thing?

The Chinese thought it resided in a Great Wall, the French in a Maginot Line and we think of it in the form of a bomb.

History has something to say about that kind of scurity. it reminds us that these are only the things men use to cover up their fears, suits of mail that cloak shivering spines. But they offer no real security. Nor does security come from passing a law, or from political systems that promise special delivery of their brand of pie in the sky on a day's notice.

Money is security, others will say. There's a half-truth, if ever there was one! Certainly money helps give us the impression that all is well, that we can get and do whatever we want. But dig down deep into your own inners and ask yourself if you've been kept happy for long by things money can buy.

We need many of these things, but we'd live as happily and maybe more nobly without a good many of them. Money matters, but not supremely. Money may make us men of means, but not of ends. Nor do we achieve security by confusing the two.

There once was a fox, so a familiar legend has it, which found a vineyard fenced around on all sides. There was just one hoe. He wished to enter through it, but was unable to do so. What did he do? He fasted three days, until he became very thin and then went through the single opening. He feasted then and, of course, grew fat again. When he wanted to go out, he was unable to pass through the hole. So he fasted again for three days until he had grown thin. Then he went out.

When he was outside he turned and said:

"O vineyard! What use have you been to me and what use are your fruits? All that is inside is beautiful, but of what benefit? As one enters so he comes out".

So with man. When a person enters the world his hands are clinched as though to say, "Everything is mine". When he departs from the owrld, his hands are open, as though to say, "I have acquired nothing".

To be sure we need protection from the physical dangers of life. Every man has a right to live so that none can make him afraid.

But security that begins and ends by the measure of what our hands can grab or acquire, or by what shelters our back, misses the point.

The heart of the matter is a matter of the heart. Real security begins and ends as a supreme inner buoyancy, a built-in faith that lifts us up to face every trial. It is within us or it is nowhere.

Twin Girls Said Born 22 Days Apart

BELMONT, Calif. (AP)—A 40-year-old mother has given birth to twin daughters 22 days apart.

Her obstetrician said Wednesday it was the third longest time lapse between the birth of twins in recorded medical history.

The first twin was born to Mrs. Beulah Swift Jan. 9 and weighed only 23 ounces. It died two days after birth.

After the normal post-natal recuperative period, Mrs. Swift returned to the hospital Jan. 29 and give birth to a twin girl Jan. 31. The infant weighed 30 ounces.

Now eight days old, the baby is reported to be in fair condition, despite a drop of three ounces from her birth weight.

Dr. Stanley Levine, the obstetrician who made both deliveries, said twins were born 58 days apart in 1953 and 35 days apart in 1957. He said the second twin is usually born within an hour of the first.

QUESTION BOX

Question: I recently received an invitation to a dinner party Down in the corner it says "R. s. v. p.," followed by a telephone number. I assume you are supposed to call in your acceptance or regret, but isn't this a new idea? In the past I have always written an acknowledgement. — Mrs. G. B., San Antonio, Texas.

Answer: This new form has come into being because of the rudeness of the many people who just don't answer an invitation at all, or wait until the last minute. By giving the telephone number, it is hoped that the person receiving the invitation will stop long enough to call and say yes or no whereas, if they have to write, it can be, and too often is, put off! Along the same line, it is also correct today to place the phrase "Regrets Only" by the telephone number. Reminder: If in this case you do not call, because you expect to go to the party and if something unexpected comes up at the last minute and you can't go, be kind enough to call the hostess and tell her. It is extremely rude to accept and then not go, without showing this courtesy to those who have been kind enough to offer their hospitality.

Question: The pastor of our church was married recently. The wedding took place at the home of the bride in another city. A group of us who like the Pastor a lot, would like to give a party for him and his new wife. We would also like to present gifts. Would a shower solve our problem? Or can one be given after the wedding has taken place? — Mrs. K. W. A., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: I would suggest a surprise buffet party. Those of you in the group who wish to honor them can plan among yourselves where the party is to be held, and what the menu is to be. If other guests are to be included, ask that a small gift be brought when you invite them. Appoint someone to ask the newlyweds for dinner. Have all the guests there before they arrive. The presentation of the gifts will be the high light of the evening. Actually, this is really in the "shower" category, but, since it is taking place after the nuptials, making it more of a surprise party is really in better taste. You should not have an, "shower" or bridal decorations.

DOMINION
for You!

Do you sometimes buy good-looking red or blue brand beef, only to be disappointed when you serve it? If so, don't criticize your judgment or your cooking. It takes a real meat expert to choose beef that is full of flavour . . . tender and juicy. Dominion's experienced meat buyers are such experts. Every day they inspect rows and rows of beef sides . . . hundreds of them . . . hanging in the cold rooms at the packers. They may all be red or blue brand, yet only one out of ten is good enough for Dominion. Only one out of ten has the coloration, graining, texture and other qualities that say: "This one will cook up absolutely delicious!" Why risk disappointment? At Dominion you get PSQ — personally selected quality. That's why Dominion is famous for meat from coast to coast!

Many Workers in Auto Plants Now Jobless May Never Be Called Back to Work

DETROIT (AP) — Alfred Bogel is a 47 - year - old, rough-hewn man who used to be an auto worker.

Now he is a statistic put into a column of figures to spell out the story of unemployment in this auto capital and the state of Michigan.

Bogel, a father of two, lost his job in an auto plant last November in a wave of layoffs that is still continuing. He had 24 years seniority.

He hasn't worked since and now faces the future with anxiety.

"I have only $400 in the bank," he reports. "I have my own home but I owe $3,400 on it and I'll probably lose it if things don't get better soon—which I don't think they will. I don't see anything to look forward to except losing what I've been able to save."

By the most recent official count there are 165,000 persons out of work in the Detroit area —a jump of 40,000 over December caused mainly by layoffs resulting from inventories of unsold cars.

MORE LAYOFS PLANNED

Even more layoffs—some of them permanent—are scheduled for the next few months.

But the most frightening aspect of the unemployment scene here is the probability that Alfred Bogel and thousands like him in Detroit will never work in an auto plant again, even if the U.S. recovers its economic health.

The rapid spread of automation in the car industry in recent years has permanently eliminated tens of thousands of jobs.

Other factors which have contributed to the staggering load of unemployment in the auto industry:

Consolidations in the industry which have ended such operations as Hudson's and Packard's in Michigan;

The change in defence contract emphasis since 1953 from vehicular (tanks, weapons carriers) to aircraft and, now, missiles. In 1953 there were 220,000 persons employed in Michigan in defence work. Now there are less than 50,000 employed.

The rapid decentralization of the auto industry. This was spurred by a defence department ruling some seven or eight years ago requiring auto firms, then holding most of the defence contracts, to disperse their plants rather than risk being wiped out in a single blow in an atomic attack.

WORKERS DIDN'T MOVE

"The auto plants," one employment official said, "thus got away from wornout facilities and wornout labor."

When sales began to fall, auto makers used the new, more efficient plants for more and more production, while cutting back in such old, established centres as Detroit.

Auto employment in Michigan has dropped from 503,000 in 1953 to 299,300 last December and is still decreasing.

Canadian Publisher Must Be Chuckling Over Press Notices

LONDON (CP)—Whether or not Roy Thomson wins his fight against Cecil Harmsworth King for control of Odhams Press, the millionaire Canadian publisher must be chuckling over his press notices.

Thomson's chances got a boost Wednesday as Odhams directors announced that their shareholders have been advised to reject a takeover bid from King's organization.

Almost any newspaper or magazine you pick up here nowadays contains a reference to the battle of the big battalions for a dominating position on Fleet Street.

King's Daily Mirror group offered to buy the giant Odhams group outright after merger plans between Thomson Newspapers Limited in the United Kingdom and Odhams were announced.

Since then the Canadian publisher has been in the limelight.

Flip the television switch, and there is Thomson on a panel program defending himself from suggestions by Liberal Leader Jo Grimond that it's a bad thing for one man to control so many newspapers.

SON WILL CARRY ON

The reply from Thomson is that it's not a bad thing at all, as long as Thomson is the man. And if anybody is worried about who succeeds him, he says, it will be his son Kenneth, who "will carry on my principles."

Turn back the pages of this week's edition of the magazine Punch, and you'll see a cartoon showing the "incredibly successful newspaper proprietor," Mr. Thomas Royston, discussing amalgamations with a "panel" of working journalists.

Apparently fascinated by word-play, Punch also has a parody on the press battle involving a character named Roycil Kingston, described as head of the Mirror-Odhams-Thomson group.

Roycil Kingston, Punch says, has just made an offer for all of Britain's school magazines.

"It will obviously be to the advantage of all schoolchildren to have control of their magazines centralized," says Punch.

WHAT NEXT?

The article concludes by asking where Kingston will strike next. "From The Times to the wrapping round the cooking-fat, no one can be regarded as entirely safe."

The reference to The Times, one of Fleet Street's institutions, recalls a New Year's Day prophecy of cartoonist David Low. In an almanac forecasting events in the months ahead, he pictured Thomson taking over The Times in December.

The current trend toward amalgamation and takeover has also attracted political notice. A member of Parliament calls it not so much capitalism as "cannibalism."

Vicky another cartoonist, has invented a couple of monsters dubbed Monopolosaurus and Mergerosaurus. Hannen Swaffer, veteran Fleet Street columnist, speaks of Roythomsonia.

Despite such cracks, Thomson can be happy about his publicy. The betting on Fleet Street has been that King will win the battle for Odhams, but most commentators indicate they would rather Thomson came out on top. This is partly because of his comparative political neutrality, partly because of the freedom he accords his editors.

System Takes 1,241 Drivers Off Ont. Roads

TORONTO (CP) — The demerit system, introduced April 1959, has taken 1,241 drivers off Ontario roads, a department of transport official said Wednesday.

William J. McIntyre, executive officer of the driver improvement division, said apart from drivers banned for the accumulation of points, 470 more were suspended for failing to attend the interview required when they collected nine points or more.

Another hundred were suspended when interviews showed they had an unhealthy attitude to driving.

Speaking to the Optimist Club of Toronto, Mr. McIntyre said there might come a time when every driver would be tested at five-year intervals, although he personally did not think it was necessary.

Since the introduction of the points system, warning letters—for six points or more—had been sent out to 25,089 persons. Of these, 82.4 per cent had given no further trouble.

Facts of Life Require Entry Of Red China

LONDON (Reuters) — Foreign Secretary Lord Home told the House of Lords Wednesday that Britain feels "the facts of international life" require the entry of Communist China into the United Nations.

Officials, meanwhile, denied a report that Prime Minister Macmillan is considering a visit to Peking this fall. They said the report had "no foundation whatsoever."

Home recalled that Britain had recognized Communist China in 1950 but had supported the American - proposed moratorium in a United Nations debate over admission.

This was "because the choice until now has been between the admission of Communist China and the breakup of the United Nations."

IN CLOSE TOUCH

"It is for the United States to say in the United States' own time what their attitude will be. but of course we are in close touch and our approach to the problem is well known to them."

Elsewhere in a review of foreign affairs, Home said it's up to Premier Khrushchev to say whether he will use the Laotians, Congolese and Cubans as "pawns in the cold-war" or will open "a new chapter of real coexistence."

He was amplifying Macmillan's statement Tuesday that the case for the West cannot be allowed "to go by default."

Home declared Britain intended to sustain the balance of nuclear power. It is the West's duty, he said, to convince the Communist world of the danger of limited wars.

Loan Will Help Elliot Lake Says Resident

ELLIOT LAKE (CP) — Officials and businessmen said Wednesday if the Ontario government combines its $4,000,000 interest-free four-year loan with previous promises, the town might get back on its feet.

Chamber of Commerce President Ed Blaney said: "We're not looking for handouts, but if the government combines this loan with previous promises of a penal institution, provincial park and highway, we'll show them."

"All we want is an opportunity to get up from under our present financial difficulties," he said.

Premier Frost announced Tuesday that if the four-year loan plan does not work, the province may write off some of Elliot Lake's debts.

But Mr. Blaney said it's nearly a year since the government announced the town would get the penal institution and provincial park.

Cancellation of U.S. contracts for uranium last year caused layoffs in the mines resulting in many citizens leaving. Federal and provincial governments shared in financing the community.

Ontario's interest - free loan would be $1,132,000 for 1961, about the same for 1962 and 1963, and $976,000 for 1964, with repayments staggered over a period extending to 1976.

Reds Undercutting Canada's Export Position in Big Way In World Mineral Markets

OTTAWA (CP)—Russia is in a position to move into world mineral markets in a big way, undercutting Canada's export position with low-priced offerings from Communist sources, the Senate manpower committee was told Wednesday.

Some Canadian producers have already had a taste of Soviet competition, witnesses said.

Competition from Iron Curtain asbestos, especially the Russian product, has become serious, said A. L. Penhale, president and managing director of Asbestos Corporation Limited.

The Soviet Union, he said, is producing about 1,000,000 tons of asbestos a year and is underselling Canadian producers in the western European market—"presumably as a matter of policy."

PRICED TO UNDERCUT

In the last two or three years, said V. C. Wansbrough, president and managing director of the Canadian Metal Mining Association, lead, aluminum and some other minerals from behind the Iron Curtain have made their appearance periodically on the markets of the West. They were always priced to undercut the Western product.

Mr. Wansbrough did not think economic aggression was involved — Russia from time to time simply has needed foreign exchange, "and anything she can sell to get foreign exchange she will sell it."

He warned, however, that Russia could carry the practice further, "as an actual matter of deliberate policy and as an aggressive attack on our markets if they so desired—and I think they are in a position to do that."

ASK ADVISORY COUNCIL

In another submission to the committee, the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association called for creation of an economic advisory council to "engage in and report on all aspects of Canadian economic problems." Its members would be drawn from industry, labor, agriculture, the universities and government.

Among possible measures advocated by the Pulp and Paper Association to combat the recession was gradual expansion of the money supply to ease interest rates and provide "a little more elbow room for industry to grow."

Replying to a question from Senator David Croll (L—Ontario), association President R. M. Fowler, who presented the brief, said the government should be making a "much more coherent effort" to get the economy rolling again. He agreed with an earlier submission by the Canadian Labor Congress that "social" investment in hospitals, schools, roads and the like should be stepped up.

Both the metal mining and the pulp and paper associations called for tax incentives to spur expansion and development.

Fund Benefits Keep Workers From Woods

OTTAWA (CP)—Extension of unemployment insurance benefits to seasonal woods workers has made impossible the cutting of pulpwood in winter months in Eastern Canada, the Senate manpower committee was told Wednesday.

Reason given: Lack of workers.

The problem was outlined in a brief presented to the committee by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association. Before the extension of insurance benefits, when pulpwood supplies were short and the demand high, the cutting season extended into the winter, it said.

Now, "many workers who have worked long enough to be entitled to insurance benefits prefer to leave their jobs and take their insurance rather than face the physical rigors of working during the severe winter weather."

The brief cited one case where an operator, who planned to keep his camps open at the request of the provincial government, found it impossible because men were not available —"even though there were several thousands of men drawing unemployment insurance in the area surrounding these operations."

The brief was read by R. M. Fowler, president of the Pulp and Paper Association. In the ensuing discussion Liberal Senator G. P. Burchill said the case referred to by Mr. Fowler occurred in the Senator's home province of New Brunswick.

CHARGE SIX

TORONTO (CP)—Six youths were charged with assault and robbery Wednesday after Edwin Lambe, 19, said he was beaten and robbed of 50 cents and a cigaret lighter.

Odhams Press Under Pressure From Both Sides

LONDON (Reuters) — The many small shareholders of the big Odhams Press combine Wednesday were under pressure from two sides on proposals by The Daily Mirror newspaper group to take over Odhams.

The Odhams board announced it was advising shareholders to reject the £32,000,000 ($93,600,000) Mirror take-over bid.

An announcement after a board meeting called by Odhams Chairman Sir Christopher Chancellor said the shareholders would be mailed a statement today on why the board did not favor the offer.

However, The Mirror group also announced it was sending a letter to the Odhams shareholders urging them to accept the bid.

The Mirror letter says the sole objective of the bid is to "secure advantages which should accrue from close co-operation between the respective magazine interests of The Mirror and Odhams."

As for the pro-Labor newspaper, The Daily Herald, which is owned by Odhams, The Mirror pledges that all possible steps will be taken "to ensure its continuance and development."

MAKE A BID

The Mirror made its bid after an announcement of merger plans between Odhams and the British group of newspapers owned by Canadian publisher Roy Thomson.

There were indications Thomson may be preparing to counter the Daily Mirror offer. He told reporters Wednesday:

"I am keeping my own counsel. I will come up with some masterminding in the next few days and then you will know."

The 6,500,000-circulation Sunday paper, News of the World, emerged Tuesday as another party interested in the newspaper deal.

Its chairman, Sir William Carr, said he had conferred with Mirror Chairman Cecil King on buying the two newspapers owned by Odhams if the Mirror takeover went through. The two papers are The Herald and a Sunday paper, The People.

Carr stressed, however, that "no decision has been reached."

SHOULD PROVIDE

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Andrew Stewart said Wednesday night Canadian television stations should provide suitable programs for children, even if they cost more than filmed adventure shows. Dr. Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, gave the first lecture in an Institute of Ethics series at Beth Tzedec synagogue.

Premier Salazar's Regime Criticized in Newspapers For First Time in Years

LISBON (CP) — The Portuguese Wednesday night had their first taste in years of newspaper criticism of Premier Antonio Salazar's regime—and they welcomed it.

Evening newspapers published a communique issued by three opposition leaders demanding the return of fundamental liberties promised in the constitution but which "are a dead letter."

This news is startling in a country where the government tightly controls publications and political activity.

The four evening papers quoted the full text of the opposition statement following a meeting between the three leaders and President Americo Tomas. The statement came in the wake of anti - government violence last weekend in the Portuguese West African territory of Angola, where 31 persons were killed.

Lisbon residents pouring out of offices in the centre of the city lined up to buy newspapers containing the severest criticism in years of the Salazar regime's policies.

The few who would talk to foreign correspondents on the streets welcomed the move and expressed the hope the government would give the people a greater choice in elections and also give the opposition a greater chance to express its views.

In halting English, they said that in this way they hoped to achieve national unity to counter external pressures threatening overseas provinces and an internal threat to the country's stability.

Commenting on the publication of the statement, a government spokesman said:

"The government considered it to be its duty to give the highest publicity to this communique, because it will provoke a healthy reaction of public opinion."

The spokesman said the editorial criticism of the statement in six of the papers — four printed the statement here and two in Oporto — confirmed the government's view that a "healthy reaction" would result.

The left - wing Republica, which was suspended for three days for lukewarm handling of the recent seizure of the Portuguese liner Santa Maria by anti-government rebels, made no comment.

The spokesman added that the government did "not consider the interview granted by the president to be of any particular importance. The three visitors were received only as private citizens and not as representatives of the opposition."

In an exclusive interview, Dr. Marcello Caetano, rector of Lisbon University and a leading political figure, doubted the value of giving the opposition the right to airing its views publicly.

Caetano, once Salazar's No. 2 man as minister to the presidency, expressed apprehension that such a move might weaken support for the National Union party.

The National Union, Salazar's creation, was formed in the early 1930s to bring together all political forces.

Communal Strife Claims Lives Of Ten Persons

JUBBULPORE, India (Reuters) —Thousands of Indians clashed for the third straight day Wednesday in communal strife which has claimed the lives of 10 persons and injured 38.

A curfew was imposed Wednesday night and a city official said "there is panic among the people."

Two persons died and houses were burned down when a howling mob swept through the streets Wednesday despite patrols by troops and police.

Eight persons died and many houses were burned to the ground Tuesday night when an acid - throwing, torch - waving crowd surged through sections of the city. Some 308 arrests have been made.

The violence apparently was triggered when two young men from one religious community assaulted a college girl from another. The girl later was found dead.

One person was killed and about 25 were injured when the clashes first broke out Saturday.

Troops which were withdrawn from the city only 72 hours earlier were recalled to aid the fully - mobilized police, who opened fire twice on Tuesday night's rioters.

Police were reported to have confiscated large stocks of weapons, including firearms, swords and knives.

CHARGED THEFT

TORONTO (CP) — Frederick Ferguson, 48, of Toronto was charged Wednesday night with theft of $3,400 worth of jewels from a Yonge Street store Saturday.

She said her brother was afraid he would be whipped because of poor grades.

TWEED

Kiwanis Club Hears Fine Nature Talk

TWEED — At the weekly Kiwanis dinner meeting at the Tweedsmuir Hotel last Thursday night, the local Kiwanians were treated to an interesting lecture and display on 'nature photography' by A. G. (Jack) Austin, of Wooler. Mr. Austin presented slides depicting various animals and birds in their natural habitat. Of special interest was the fact that most of the pictures were taken in Hastings and Northumberland counties. Numerous awards have been won by Mr. Austin's pictures and several of his current ones are on display in Chicago. He received word, only last night, that these were prize winners.

A former Telephone Company executive, Mr. Austin pursues the photography of wild life as a hobby, which has its own rewards in the satisfaction of preserving some fleeting moments in the life of a bird or animal.

Mr. Austin explained that a variety of equipment skill is necessary for successful nature photography. The most importent is the use of an extension release which permits a camera to be placed close to the bird's nest or animal lair; but allows the photographer to remain at a distance. Thus the prospective subject for the camera does not become aware of his presence.

Mr. Austin uses an assortment of lenses for his unusual color pictures.

He was introduced by Kiwanian Dr. Paul and thanked by Kiwanian Ed. Way.

President Keith Cotton was in charge of the meeting.

Allay Fears 'Flu' Spread In Britain

LONDON (Reuters) — Fears that Britain's present influenza epidemic might reach the proportions of the epidemics of 1957-58 and 1959 dwindled here today.

Ministry of health sources expressed guarded optimism.

"Figures for another two weeks are needed before we feel sure that the epidemic is abating," a ministry spoksman said.

This January influenza accounted for 1,453 deaths, compared with 3,292 in the peak epidemic month of February, 1959, and 2,954 in October, 1957, the year of Asian influenza.

Joe Wright New President Of Big Four

WINNIPEG (CP)—Joe Wright Jr of Toronto Argonauts Wednesday night was elected president of the Big Four Football Union, succeeding Sam Berger of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Ted Workman of Montreal Alouettes became first vice-president, Frank Gibson of Hamilton Tiger - Cats second vice - president and Barry O'Brien of Ottawa third vice-president.

O'Brien is the only new member of the executive elected at the Big Four's annual meeting held in conjunction with the Canadian Football League meeting.

Past President Berger was named as the fifth member of the eastern league's executive to balance representatation on the CFL executive with that of the five-team Western Interprovincial Football Union.

BLAMES WATER LACK

SIMCOE (CP)—An increased incidence of infectious hepatitis in Norfolk County may be linked with the current water shortage, Dr J. R. Mayers, county medical officer of health, said Wednesday night. The disease becomes prevalent when water levels are low, Dr. Mayers said.

N.H.L. Stars

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dave Keon, Toronto Maple Leafs rookie, and Bert Olmstead, Leafs veteran, who each scored a goal and two assists in Toronto's 5-3 win over New York.

Chicago centre Tod Sloan, who scored a goal and two assists in the Hawks' 5-2 victory over Detroit Red Wings.

LONDON (CP) — J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne, European president of the International Ice Hockey ederation, s-id Wednesday members of the Trail Smoke Eaters hockey team should not be blamed for rough play in Europe.

"It's not the fault of the players," he said in an interview. "They are just playing the type of hockey they are used to playing."

"It's the rules, and their enforcement, that are to blame. If the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association had its own rules, instead of following the professionals, and if we got rid of the centre red line and made players do all their body-checking behind their own bluelines, then we could establish a standard that would involve brain and not brawn."

FOUR SWEDES INJURED

Ahearne was commenting on reports from Sweden in which the Canadians, warming up for the world championships, were severely criticized for their rough play against the Swedish national team. Four Swedes were injured—two will be out of the world tournament—in four exhibition games with the Smokies. Some Swedish hockey officials referred to the "brutality" of the Canadians.

Ahearne said that five years ago he suggested to officials of the CAHA that Canada should establish a national hockey team, built on promising juniors, and that it should remain intact throughout the winter, playing under European rules.

"I still think that's what they should do. Then this problem of rough play, which comes up every year with the Canadians, would be done away with."

Western Football Conference

Gate Problem Unsolved

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Western Interprovincial Football Union adopted a new name Wednesday but apparently was unable to solve an old problem—gate equalization.

The league voted at its annual meeting to take the name Western Football Conference.

The gate-equalization problem pits British Columbia Lions against the rest of the league over a plan to increase contributions of the richer clubs to a pool aimed to help less-wealthy teams.

The plan calls for teams with gate revenue over the league average to pay into the pool a percentage of the margin. The clubs with gate income below the average receive a percentag of the amount by which they are below the mark.

Lions balked at the plan because, with the 35,000 capacity of Vancouver's Empire Stadium they have the largest gates and would pay the largest amount into the fund.

Lions proposed to increase their contribution to a total of no more than $50,000. They say an increase from 25 to 40 per cent could result in their paying between $66,000 and $80,000.

CLAIMS ILLEGAL

Lions claimed the gate-equalization system was unconstitutional and requested that the league seek legal advice on the issue. Whether the request wuold be met remained in doubt.

Said league secretary R. H. Gillies of Regina: "If the B.C. club does not meet its assessment, it will lose its vote in the league.

"If the Lions want to make a legal issue out of it, they would have to take it to court."

The WFC also gave tentative approval to a disaster insurance plan to cover the possibility of a team being irreparably damaged by a fatal accident.

Under the plan, if a team lost six or more players in an accident, the league and team would receive money from the insurance.

SUES HOCKEY CLUB

SPOKANE (CP)—A fan who claims he was struck during a fight after a Western Hockey League game last month is suing Spokane Comets and coach Colin Kilburn for $50,000. Bill S. Carr of Seattle says in his suit that Kilburn aimed several punches at him after the Spokane-Seattle game Jan. 15, and the blows caused a concussion, aggravated an old back injury and caused him to lose several days of work.

Bay of Quinte Basketball

Crawford Metals rolled along at the top of the Bay of Quinte Basketball League by handing the Belleville Lightfoots an 87-50 defeat at Moira Secondary School last night.

The Metals piled up an early lead, 29-9, 55-21 and 81-30 by quarters, before one of the big scorers, Bert Faulkner, fouled out of the game. Lightfoots then outscored the winners 20-6 in the fourth quarter.

Teddy Batchelor paced all scorers, hooping 28 points for Crawford Metals. Faulkner struck for 18 before his ejection while Phil Bennett had 16 and Gus Rogers 14.

Crawford Metals (87)—Jackson 2, Rogers 14, Bennett 16, Batchelor 28, Walmsley 9, and Faulkner 18.

Belleville Lightfoots (50) — Marner 6, Newsome 7, Reynolds 2, Stark 4, Boomhower 2, Savage 12, Smith 14, Scrymgeour 3.

In another B. of Q. hoop game last night, second-place Trenton Wilson's rallied in the second half of the game to defeat Northern Electric of Belleville by a 64-56 score.

Northern led Trenton by one point, 33-32, at half time, but the strong Trenton crew roared back in the latter half to prevent an upset.

Earl Neismith topped the Northern scorers with 15 points, followed by Harry Green with 13 and John Batchelor with 10.

Trenton Wilsons (64) — Bambers 12; Crews 12; B. Burleigh 21; T. Jeffery; M. Jeffery 5; Burke 12; Theriett.

Northern Electric (56) — Green 13; J. Batchelor 10; D. Soule 8; Orazetti 9; Neismith 15; Kingston 3; Clancy.

FEES RAISED

GUELPH (CP)—Tuition rates have been raised for the second time in six months for degree courses at the Ontario Agricultural College, the Ontario Veterinary College and Macdonald Institute, it was announced Wednesday. The $50 raise brings fees to $280 a year.

Marlies Nip Irish 6-4, Move Up

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros, paced by the line of Ricky Hay, George Standing and Gus Brassard, moved to within five points of the last playoff position when they defeated Toronto St. Michael's College Majors 6-4 Wednesday night. It was the Ontario Hockey Association's only scheduled junior A game.

The cellar-dwelling Marlboros held a one-goal edge at the end of the first period and led 4-2 going into the third. Standing's second goal after only two minutes of play in the final period appeared to put St. Michael's out of the running.

But Draper executed a fine solo effort on a power play and MacMillan completed a neat passing play from Andre Champagne to reduce the margin to one goal within two minutes. Marlies were short one man when Hay connected on a five-foot backhander at 9:08 to complete the scoring.

Marlboros outshot St. Michael's 30-28 and the teams collected six penalties apiece.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Missing the Rocket's red glare and the Boom-Boom's bombs bursting in air, Toe Blake has been heard of late mumbling to his Mexican chihuahua, "Jose, can you see if our Habs are still there?"

In the first mumblings the Canadien coach meant the top spot. Now unless Jacque Le Plante and Doug Harvey readjust the steering mechanism, re-fire the sparkplugs and give the four-year-old Stanley Steamer a general overhaul, the upsurging Red Wings and Black Hawks might catch the second-place model and relegate it to the fourth spot.

And just as though the trouble-beset Montreal coach did not have woes enough with his slipping Habitant Horsemen, danged if he didn't commit an innocent faux pas that put him in hot water up to his gum-flavored cigar.

It happened at the Sports Celebrities Dinner in Toronto when Toe, one of the guests of honor, was called upon to speak. Outside of making dressing room speeches from the coaching throne to his puck warriors, after-dinner oratory is as strange to the Ontario-born Blake as seeing his favorite hockey club in second place.

Prior to the dinner Toe was "tipped off" to say something funny. He probably pondered over that "something funny" all through the evening until it came his turn for the patter-making podium.

So Toe told a story. Unfortunately, as it turned out, he made the mistake of giving the yarn his home-town flavor and making himself the "hero" who subsequently turned out to be a newspaper goat.

Toe's story said he had made a name for himself in the NHL and was returning for the first time to his home town of Coniston, a community in the Sudbury district.

He figured his hockey reputation had preceded him, and on the occasion of his first visit to the old home town, the village, complete with brass band, fire department, etc., would be at the station to meet and greet the local hero.

So he disdained a porter's offer to carry his luggage saying "Somebody will be here to get them for me."

"When we arrived," Toe said, "the station was bare. Not a soul, not even my brothers were there to meet me. So I carried by own bags and walked rather sadly along the railway station platform.

"I met an old friend of mine who was working for the railway and greeted him.

"Hi, there Charlie," I said with a grin.

"Why, hello there, Toe," said Charlie. "You leavin' town."

Now that is the story Toe told and he told it, of all places, where some 200 off-duty working newspapermen and radio-TV blokes were gathered in one huge outlet chunk.

Personally, I for one, and there were 198 others who took the story as a funny anecdote cooked up in Toe's mind or perhaps gathered at some sports bull-session where such yarns—among others—are noised around. Later it proved to be just that.

But there was one newspaperman there who didn't see it that way. He was a sportswriter who was formerly associated with the Sudbury Star. He, and I believe quite innocently, smelled the Sudbury angle and filed the story to the Star.

Naturally, the few hundred Coniston souls who probably take the Sudbury paper to a man, woman and mine-pick, read the Saga of Toe Blake, a former hometown boy.

The explosion that back-fired Toe's joke reverberated around Montreal's Mount Royal. It roared to the home of the Habitants and deafened the Blakian ears with its thunder. Letters poured in from irate Conistonians. Toe's face was redder than the home uniforms of his beloved Habs.

"It was only a joke," explained Blake to Sudbury newsmen. "I was told at the dinner to tell 'em something funny. I just told it to get a few laughs. When I did return home to Coniston I received a wonderful reception."

As was noted all but one of that illustrious gathering of sportswriters and 'casters took the story the way it was meant.

But it could have been worse. Gad, what if Toe had repeated one of those glamor gal yarns newsmen often exchange——and used the same cast. It is easy enough to explain a faux pas to a newspaper—but to the madame—ah.

Senior Hockey

CHATHAM (CP) — Chatham Maroons moved back into a tie for second place with Galt Terriers in the OHA senior circuit Wednesday night, scoring a 7-4 win over Strathroy Rockets.

The win gives Maroons 38 points for the season. Galt and Chatham meet Friday at Chatham to decide sole holder of second place.

George Aitken assisted on four Chatham Goals.

Maroons used a complete Chatham Junior B line, in Bob Pole, Ross Columbus and Terry Chapman. Pole and Columbus scored a goal each and Chapman assisted on both.

Leafs Up Margin, Hawks Clip Wings

Hand Rangers 5-3 Defeat

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Coach Punch Imlach's survey of the scoring summary of his Toronto Maple Leafs' win over New York Rangers Wednesday night could give him some special grounds for satisfaction.

Not only did the win increase the Leafs' hold on first place in the National Hockey League to five points, but the scoring summary points out clearly the balance between rookie and veteran talent that has kept the Leafs going this season.

In the only other NHL action, Chicago Black Hawks defeated Detroit Red Wings 5-2.

Toronto rookies Dave Keon and Bob Nevin each scored for the Leafs. Veterans Bert Olmstead and Frank Mahovlich got two more, with the fifth Leaf counter coming off the stick of Eddie Shack, acquired in a mid-season trade with the Rangers.

And veteran Red Kelly picked up two assists. The points gave him a total of 56 points on 16 goals and 40 assists, two more than his previous high established in 1950-51.

BIDS FOR RECORD

One of the assists came on Mahovlich's goal midway through the first period. It was the 42nd goal of the season for Mahovlich, making a bid to break Maurice Richard's record of 50 goals in one season.

Chicago scored three third-period goals to streth their third - place lead over Detroit to six points. Bobby Hull and Tod Sloan scored in the first and second periods with Gordie Howe getting one for Detroit before the Black Hawks broke loose in the third.

Pierre Pilote, Ab McDonald and Stan Mikita were the third-period scorers while Norm Ullman added Detroit's final marker.

Montreal Canadiens, embarrassed at finding themselves in second place, will have two veterans back with them at Boston tonight when they try to cut down the Leafs' first-place lead. Montreal has three games in hand over Toronto.

One of the veterans is Jacques Plante, mask and all, who has been called up to replace Charlie Hodge in the Montreal goal.

The Canadiens have managed tnly one win in their last seven starts and, while coach Toe Blake has said he in no way blames Hodge for the losses, he obviously feels this is the time to bring his five-time winner of the Vezina trophy back into action.

Plante has been playing with Montreal Royals of the Eastern Professional Hockey League to try to get his timing back after a long layoff caused by a knee injury and loss of his job to Hodge.

The other veteran is defence great Doug Harvey, who has been troubled for more than a month with assorted injuries.

In other action tonight, the Rangers will be at Detroit.

Bisons Edge Amerks 5-4, Bears Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buffalo Bisons must look forward to sudden-death overtime games in the American Hockey League. They seem to enjoy the tension.

The Bisons ran into overtime against Rochester Americans Wednesday night and ended up with a 5-4 victory, their fifth straight in an extra session on home ice this season.

The win put the Bisons in a position to shoot for second place in the league race as Hershey Bears trounced Cleveland Barons 6-1.

The Barons are in second spot with 54 points. And the Barons have 52. Each has played 51 games. The Bisons have 51 points but have played only 49 games.

At Hershey, Ray Kinasewich scored two goals nine seconds apart in the first period. Despite the performance, he was far off the record for the fastest two goals. Nels Stewart of the old Montreal Maroons in the National League scored twice in four seconds in 1931.

Smoke Eaters Defeat Finns 10-5

TAMPERE, Finland (CP)—Trail Smoke Eaters wore down their opposition in the first two periods and poured on the coal for eight goals in the final period to take a 10-5 victory over the Finnish national team Wednesday.

The Finns managed to hold their own against the Canadians for the first two periods, and going into the last session the score was tied 2-2. But within a few minutes the Smoke Eaters had scored six goals, deflating a record crowd of 12,000 cheering the home team.

The victory was the fifth for the Smokies in their six exhibition games so far. From here they go to Moscow, where they will play three games, starting today. In all they are playing 17 games before the world hockey championships start in Switzerland.

Ad Tambellini scored three times for the Smoke Eaters, who were playing without their regular goalie, Seth Martin. Substitute goalie Claude Cyr appeared a bit rusty and let a couple of easy shots past him.

Darryl Sly was Trail's next highest scorer with two goals. Harry Smith, Dave Rusnell, Walt Peacosh, Jackie McLeod and Hal Jones picked up singles.

Unlike the Swedes, who took unkindly to what they considered rough play by Trail in a four-game series in Sweden, the Finns made no complaints. After the game they presented gifts to the three players who made the best showing for Trail—Tambellini, Sly and Russell.

O.H.A. Prexy Would Leave Sweden Out

TORONTO (CP) — Canada should think twice about sending another touring hockey team into Sweden says Ab Hulse of Aurora, new president of the Ontario Hockey Association.

The OHA is a powerful branch of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which sends teams abroad. Mr. Hulse was commenting on Swedish outcries about rough play by the touring Trail Smoke Eaters.

"It puzzles me that we don't get complaints from the Russians or the Czechoslovakians when our teams visit those countries," he said Tuesday, "but we're always getting beefs from the Swedes.

"I know this Trail club. It isn't a big team and it isn't dirty. Maybe it's time to curtail our tours and bypass Sweden. It's something we have to consider."

Bets Heavy On Russ Nags In National

LONDON (AP) — Bets poured in Wednesday on the three Russian entries in the Grand National Steeplechase March 25—even though the experts say they don't stand a chance.

One bookie said $56,000 had been bet on the Soviet trio.

It is the first time Russian horses have entered the four-mile, 856-yard Aintree race over 30 tough obstacles.

The Russians automatically will carry top weight of 168 pounds because they have not raced in Britain.

Indian Teams In Peewee Tournament

QUEBEC (CP) — Two Indian teams—one from Alberta, the other from Quebec — will be among 20 teams scheduled to play today in the second international peewee hockey tournament.

The English-speaking Alberta squad, matched against Beaupre, Que., in a class C game, is made up of players slected from Blackfoot, Crow and Blood Indian reservations in southern Albedta.

The French-speaking Montagnais Indians from Bersimis, in northern Quebec, also entered in class C, are scheduled to meet Murdochville, Que.

Class AA play Wednesday featured an upset 7-5 victory by Peterborough over the favored Toronto Leafs.

Peterborough was trailing 5-2 after the second period, but netted five third-period goals to win the match.

Offered Job To Manage A.H.L. Entry

NORTH BAY (CP)—Pete Palangio, one of North Bay's hockey greats of the 1930s, said Wednesday he has been offered a job as general manager of a prospective St. Louis entry in the American Hockey League next spring.

Palangio said he has been approached by a St. Louis hockey group, headed by Bill Hannegan, that has applied to the AHL for admission in 1961-62.

Once a player for the now defunct St. Louis Flyers of the AHL, Palangio said he has been asked to visit St. Louis within the next few weeks to discuss the proposition.

If the bid to enter the AHL is rejected, he said, the team plans to enter the International League. A Pittsburgh team already equipped with a new arena is also trying for an AHL berth.

C.F.L. Annual Under Way

Interlock Sked Up For Approval

By TOM WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League was set to open its annual meeting today and the main topic on the agenda was approval of its new partial interlocking schedule involving eastern and western teams.

The nine general managers of CFL teams, together with commissioner G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg, worked late Wednesday night hammering out dates for interlocking games. Halter said he would present the schedule to the full CFL meeting today.

R. H. Gillies, CFL secretary-treasurer, said the final schedules likely will be released tonight.

The interlocking plan calls for each western club to play each eastern team once, either at home or away, during the next two seasons.

Other items expected to be discussed today included rule-change proposals and alterations in import player quotas suggested by the eastern and western leagues at their individual annual meetings Wednesday.

The western conference was expected to ask that CFL teams be permitted to keep 15 American players on their rosters after a certain cutoff date, while maintaining at 12 the number eligible to be used in any game. Teams now are allowed 34 players on their rosters, any number of them imports.

One change in import regulations both leagues appeared to be agreed upon in principle was a proposal to eliminate the so-called Canadian - Americans. Players now are considered Canadians under such circumstances as their parents being born in Canada, even if the player himself has lived in the United States most or all his life.

Under changes proposed by the western conference, a player to be considered Canadian would have to have Canadian citizenship papers and have played three years in some phase of Canadian football—including junior or intermediate. Eastern delegates were reported to agree with the principle of this.

One rule discussion likely to prompt hot discussion was that of the CFL waiver regulations, placed on the agenda at the request of some eastern clubs.

Toronto Argonauts were reported seeking more teeth in the regulations, which require a player with a Canadian team to be waived out of the CFL before he can sign with an American club.

Three instances of apparent violations of these regulations occurred since the last season. Sam Etcheverry, brilliant quarterback with Montreal Alouettes signed with St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League after refusing to accept a trade to Hamilton Tiger - Cats and quarterback Randy Duncan of British Columbia Lions and tackle Bill Hudson of Montreal signed with American Football League clubs. None was waived out of the CFL.

Toronto claimed both Duncan and Hudson when they were placed on waivers, but waivers were withdrawn and the players went to the U.S.

Halter, commenting on these incidents, said Wednesday night: "I have these three violations of the waiver regulations under consideration. However, I have not received a formal complaint from any of the clubs involved."

The Etcheverry case was also expected to result in other CFL action.

Etcheverry claimed he was a free agent because the Alouettes traded him without obtaining his consent, breaching an agreement he had with the club.

Halter maintains Etcheverry remained Montreal property when he refused to report to Hamilton.

Will Develop Swimmers for '64 Olympics

MONTREAL (CP)—A competition aimed at finding Canada's best swimmers and developing them for the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo will be held from coast to coast March 11.

Some 2,000 youths—all under 15—are expected to take part in the national age-group telegraph swimming competition.

"Part of the next Olympic team will certainly be made up of these kids," said meet chairman Ken Murray Wednesday.

Mary Stewart of Vancouver was 14 last year when she reached the Olympic finals in Rome.

MAY FIND STARS

"If we begin looking now, we may find a couple more Mary Stewarts for 1964," said Murray.

Applications for entry must be made by Feb. 17 to CASA representatives in cities where the meet will be held: Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, London, Ont. Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. There are no fees.

The male and female age groups are: under 10; 11-12; 13-14; and 15-16. Depending on age swimmers will race 25 to 100 yards in any of the four Olympic strokes: Free - style, butterfly, backstroke or breaststroke.

The time of each entry will be flashed to Montreal on a teletype network for tabulation. A mechanical brain will pick out the top 10 swimmers nationally in each stroke and age group, and also the top 10 by province. The time and standing of each entrant will be recorded.

London Here For Fight With Chuvalo

LONDON (AP) — Brian London, former British heavyweight boxing champion, arrived in London Wednesday on the first leg of his trip to fight Canadian champion George Chuvalo of Toronto and admitted to one big fear—the cold of a Canadian winter.

The London-Chuvalo fight is due to go in Toronto Feb. 20. London, who travelled from his northwest England home of Blackpool, will leave for Canada today.

"It will be very cold over there right now," London said. "I'm not looking forward to that. But I suppose it will be hot enough once we get in the ring."

The Toronto fight will be London's first since the British Boxing Board of Control slapped a three-month suspension on him following a brawl against Dick Richardson — one that ended with policemen in the ring.

It will be the third time London has crossed the Atlantic on fighting expeditions.

The first was in 1954 when he went as an amateur and won the heavyweight gold medal in the British Empire Games at Vancouver.

He returned in 1959 for a world heavyweight title fight against Floyd Patterson and was knocked out in the 11th round.

London said he may fight another Canadian, Bob Cleroux of Montreal, before returning home.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Portland's legion of supporters have discovered a new reason to dislike Seattle badman Frank Arnett.

The rugged defenceman, second in the Western Hockey League in penalties, forgot the rough stuff Wednesday night and led Totems to a 2-1 victory over the Buckaroos before 9,357 fans in Portland.

The victory moved Seattle into a third-place tie with Vancouver Canucks, beaten 7-1 by the league - leading Stampeders in Calgary. Winnipeg Warriors defeated Victoria Cougars 4-1.

Arnett set up the tying goal for Seattle after Portland's Gordon Haworth broke a scoreless deadlock midway through the third period. T's Seattle defenceman fired a hard shot which goaltender Don Head kicked out, but Rudy Filion was there to fire in the rebound.

There were six seconds left in regulation time when Arnett picked up a pass from Bill MacFarland inside the Portland blueline and scored the winning goal.

Lou Jankowski led the Calgary attack with three goals and singles were added by George McAvoy, Norm Johnson, Gord Vejprava and Don Wilson. Larry Popein scored for Vancouver.

Veteran Nick Mickoski sparked Warriors to their come-from - behind victory as he potted three goals. Gordon Labossiere got the winner with less than two minutes remaining in regulation time. Victoria marksmen were Red Johansen, Doug Anderson and Wayne North.

Defeat Picton 6-4

Macs Ring Down Curtain

By GARRY ALEXANDER

A high-scoring performance by the veteran line of Hull, Goyer and Hunter overcame an over-all sloppy team performance as the Belleville Macs edged Picton Merchants 6-4 to wind up their part of the OHA Eastern Junior "B" hockey league schedule here last night.

The Macs are tied with Whitby, with 28 points apiece, in second place at the present time but will officially finish third because of Whitby's better games-won record. Whitby plays at home against Kingston Saturday. Playoffs will commence next week, the dates to be set at a meeting here Sunday.

The short-handed Picton crew, only 11 players dressed including the goalie, took advantage of weak clearing, carelessness and penalties to hold the Macs to a 3-2 lead after one period and a 3-3 tie after two heats. Merchants took the lead early in the third before Bell's boys potted three for the win.

Belleville picked up 14 of the game's 20 penalties, including a major to Gary Hull for charging a Picton player to the ice at the final whistle. They still managed to outshoot the visitors 37-33 but a strong game by Les Pendleton in the Picton nets helped keep it close.

The vet line of Goyer, Hunter and Hull collected all of Belleville's scoring points except a goal and assist by defenceman Larry Mavety.

Ron Hull was the big marksman, scoring three goals, including the tying and winning ones. The hat trick gave him 30 goals for the season. Gary Goyer topped all point-getters with one goal and four assists while Moe Hunter, the team's leading scorer, had one goal and two assists.

Picton markers came from Larry Pero, Dick Proctor, Larry Tracey and Ronnie Hess. Bill Waddling drew three assists, Brien Beatty two, Don Taylor and Don Shortt one apiece.

The Macs pressed in the game's early minutes and Hull bagged his first on a three-ply play with Goyer and Hunter at 1.02. Hunter converted Goyer's corner passout to make it 2-0 at 5.35 but Pero got that back at 9.15 with Kellar in the sin-bin for hooking. Moxon and his defence were lost on this one.

Hunter and Hull were both in the penalty box when Proctor tied the count at 12.41. Larry Mavety's blueline shot gave Belleville a 3-2 lead less than two minutes later and that's the way the period ended.

Loose play in their own zone cost the Macs Picton's lone goal in the middle heat. Tracey caught an upper corner at 2.14 as the locals missed in close time and again.

Hess connected on a screen shot after only 49 seconds had passed in the third then the Macs, led by Ron Hull, took over. Hull took Goyer's pass on the fly, cut in from the wing and beat Pendleton at the goalmouth for the prettiest goal of the night to tie the score at 2.12. He broke through the Picton defence and tucked the rubber in the short corner for the winning marker at 5.10.

The teams were playing five aside when Goyer completed the scoring, breaking in alone at 12.05 for the final 6-4 score.

WANT PROPOSED

J. W. Pickersgill (L — Bonavista - Twillingate) complained Wednesday that the resolution has been "talked pretty threadbare already." Frank Howard (CCF — Skeena) suggested it isn't necessary to "beat this resolution to death."

They both wanted to see the bill itself. Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill had planned to bring it in Tuesday night but couldn't, simply because the resolution still was being debated. The same thing happened Wednesday.

Mr. Churchill, who also is government House leader, proposed at the 6 p.m. adjournment Wednesday to get first and second reading of the bill launched in one sitting today. Normally, a sitting-day separates those two, legislative steps.

MAY BE FRIDAY

The minister's proposal appeared to meet Liberal opposition. Mr. Pickersgill said the official opposition would prefer to stick with normal procedure. This would mean waiting until Friday to debate second reading, or approval in principle, of the bill.

Disability pensions range down from the $1,800 a year paid to a veteran who was 100-per-cent disabled in a theatre of war. The lower the percentage of disability, the lower the payment. These pensions are separate from the "burned out" pension, designed to bring needy veterans' income up to $145 a month.

As the discussion whirled Wednesday around the technicalities of awarding disability pensions, the House got a living symbol of why the payments are made. He is Cyril F. Kennedy, Conservative MP for the Nova Scotia riding of Colchester-Hants.

CUT OFF ARM.. .. ..

As a major with the North Nova Scotia Highlanders during the Second World War, Mr. Kennedy was struck in the right arm by shrapnel during the Normandy invasion. Using a clasp knife, he amputated the arm above the elbow and returned to action with his company until collapsing from pain and loss of blood.

"He does not feel that this country owes him a living," said J. Chester MacRae (PC—York-Sunbury).

Said Mr. Kennedy:

"It is hard for me, as a pensioner myself, to define the term 'disability pension.' I would rather refer to it as an earnest desire by a grateful people to compensate others for a part of their physical well-being given up in service to the country."

STARTS JAZZ SCHOOL — Montreal-born Oscar Peterson, one of North America's top jazz pianists, joined with a Toronto musician last year to organize the Advanced School of Contemporary Music in Toronto. The school with a current enrolment of 38 students, aims at improving and developing jazz music. Peterson, who learned music on a home piano, is also a music teacher and photographer. (CP Photo).

Pianist Oscar Peterson Is Jazz Teacher, Auditor, Photographer and Father

By JOHN BELANGER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Talking with Montreal - born jazz pianist Oscar Peterson is much like carrying on a conversation with three or four people.

He is, for instance, an expert photographer, the devoted father of three girls and two boys ranging from 7 to 12 years, a teacher and the winner of the Down Beat magazine best pianist award eight times in 10 years.

In January, 1960, Oscar and Toronto musician Phil Nimmons decided to form a school for the betterment of jazz. It's called the Advanced School of Contemporary Music and at present has 38 pupils. Among them is Ottawa pianist Brian Browne, who Oscar calls a "comer." Oscar and Phil both lecture at the school, run stringently, and guest lecturers are called in whenever available.

The school is in Canada because Oscar wanted it that way. In order to raise money for the institution, the men telephoned every musician, impresario and night club owner they knew and asked for scholarships.

Well - known jazz spots such as Chicago's London House, Boston's Storyville and Toronto's Town Tavern have contributed.

DAD BOUGHT PIANO

Oscar began playing the trumpet and cornet in the family orchestra at the age of five but gave up when the horns became too much for his lungs. Oscar's father, Daniel Peterson, a Canadian Pacific Railway sleeping - car porter, bought the family a piano and the chubby Oscar fell in love with it.

"I don't know where he got the money to pay for it," says Oscar, "but he got it. When he'd go away on a trip, he'd give my sister Daisy and me a piece to learn and if we didn't know it when he got back—that was it."

Oscar, or Big Os as his friends call him—he weighs 238 and stands six-two — attributes much of his success to Montreal concert pianist and teacher Paul De Marky.

"Without Paul and my father, I would be nowhere today. They taught me more than I can ever thank them for, not only in music but in the more difficult art of being a man."

Starting in Montreal with bookings in cheap clubs and bars, the Peterson star rose quickly. Oscar won a $250 first prize in a radio talent show and club bookings followed. In 1950, at 24, he won the Down Beat award, formerly the almost-exclusive property of George Shearing.

VISITED DEEP SOUTH

Recognition followed and in 1953 New York impresario Norman Granz, now living in Europe, offered Oscar the first of the "Jazz at the Philharmonic" tours.

The pianist had never run into outright discrimination in Canada and Granz offered to let Oscar skip those sections of the tour which would take him through the deep south of the U.S. Oscar turned him down and had to eat standing up in a kitchen while the white musicians passed food to him through a window.

In Hamilton once a barber refused to cut his hair. Oscar visited the police and the local papers, and a score of barbers offered to give him a free haircut.

Peterson is as thorough with his children as he is with his music and his policy of raising Lynn, 12, Sharon, 11, Gay, 10, Norman, 7, and Oscar Jr., 8 to be well - behaved disciplined youngsters has paid off for him and his wife, Lil.

"I am away much of the time," he says, "and this makes things a little rough on Lil because she has to carry the weight of the discipline. But the children know who's boss."

Now living in Toronto, the Peterson family won't see much of Oscar for a while because of a tour of Australia, New Zealand and Europe.

Moore Will Meet 'Champ' For $200,000

"My price is $200,000," said Moore, "and any time Johnson puts up the money, he's got himself a match."

Johnson stopped Jesse Bowdry of St. Louis in the ninth round at Miami Beach, Fla., Tuesday night to win the National Boxing Association crown that Archie claimed so long.

Moore knocked out Johnson in the 14th round in the Philadelphian's only other shot at the title. The NBA took the crown from Moore because he failed to defend it.

Moore, 42 going on 50 and still recognized as the champion by the New York and Massachu- he is in good shape and would setts boxing commissions, said have little trouble making the light heavyweight limit.

Court Action Is Adjourned

TORONTO (CP)—A court application by Bernie Faloney to determine whether he is the property of the Big Four football league's Hamilton Tiger-Cats or Montreal Alouettes was adjourned indefinitely Wednesday at the request of his lawyer.

The hearing was requested by Faloney as a result of confusion generated when he was traded by Ti-Cats for Sam Etcheverry of the Als at the end of the 1960 season.

Etcheverry later signed with St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League on the grounds his contract with the Montreal team had been violated by the trade.

Executives of both Big Four clubs are in Winnipeg this week for the annual meeting of the Canadian Football League.

Beavers Win Over Hull 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers climbed within a point of a second-place tie Wednesday as they brought down league - leading Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 4-3 in an Eastern Professional Hockey League action on their home ice.

And at Sudbury, the hometown Wolves were whipped 3-2 by Montreal Royals.

Hull - Ottawa still have a healthy hold on the lead, with 70 points against the 54 of Sault Ste. Marie. Behind the Soo comes Kitchener - Waterloo, 53, followed by Kingston 47, and Sudbury and Montreal tied up at 41.

The Kitchener crash was Canadiens' second straight loss in two nights. They have been beaten only 12 times in 49 starts.

The Mel Pearson, Bob Sabourin, Dennis Olson line scored three for Beavers. Pearson claimed two himself, Sabourin one. The other Beaver scorer was Don Cherry with a screened 50-footer in the first.

At Sudbury Montreal's marksmen were Sawicki, Connelly and Grigg. The Wolves replied from Bettio and Burton.

SOVIET TOUR

Peter Ustinov has been asked by the Old Vic company to lead a group of European actors on a tour of the Soviet Union next summer.

AT THE PARK — A scene from Warner Bros. Technicolor comedy "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd", co-starring Charles Laughton and now showing at the Park Theatre. On the same program Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall and the Bowery Boys in their funniest comedy "Bowery to Bagdad". Also on the giant laugh show a Three Stooges comedy and a color cartoon.

Greta Anderson Will Attempt To Swim Channel for Movie

By BOB THOMAS

Greta is the human propeller who has conquered just about every long distance swim normally navigated, including a two-way stretch in the Catalina Channel. She is here to swim the Molokai Channel, 26 miles of tortuous currents. Her first try failed Jan. 28.

She also is getting in the movie swim with 90-minute documentary about the feat. It is being filmed by a crew headed by Jerry Courneya, veteran producer of travel and sports films.

"We'll make the Molokai Channel the heavy," he says. "We'll show all the preparations for the swim — Greta's fear of sharks and all that. We'll build up suspense and the swim will be the climax of the picture."

SHE'S EASY-GOING

How does Greta feel about all this? She's an easy-going (on land) Dane who seems willing to try anything.

"I've never done any acting," she admitted. "But that's going to be easy. It's the swimming that's difficult."

Greta is 31, 5 feet 7½ and a muscular 140 pounds, though she dropped 17 on the Molokai try. When she isn't in the water, she lives in Long Beach, Calif., with her husband, swim coach John Sonnichsen. They run a swim school and she lectures with a film of her achievements.

"I have averaged $15,000 to $20,000 a year from it," she said. "But by the time I pay expenses and Johnny leaves his job for three months, there isn't much profit."

NEW COMEDY SMASH IS 3-TIME WINNER FOR STANLEY DONEN

The third time, according to legend, is the charm. Which means that producer - director Stanley Donen's "The Grass Is Greener" should be an all time screen charmer. The happy third time combination crops up no less than five times in the new Technicolor - Technirama comedy success now at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

"The Grass is Greener," which Donen made under the Grandon Productions banner for Universal - International release, stars Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr, Robert Mitchum and Jean Simmons. It marks the third association of Grant and Donen (from whose names the corporate title Grandon Productions is taken), an association that previously embraced "Kiss Them for Me" and "Indiscreet."

Hollywood observers also note that the picture marks the third time Grant has appeared with Miss Kerr, the third time Miss Kerr has appeared with Mitchum and the third time she has co-starred with Jean Simmons and Mitchum. Miss Kerr and Mitchum, in fact, began work on "The Grass Is Greener" only two weeks after they had finished their second film together, "The Sundowners."

This lucky combination, Donen explains, was not the result of any superstition. "It's just that these four stars represent an ideal combination," he points out. "In 'The Grass Is Greener' they all work together in variations of the third time around."

Hugh and Margaret Williams wrote the new comedy screenplay which is adapted from their great London stage hit.

Television to Focus Attention On Trial of Adolf Eichmann

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The next big predictable story on which television will focus its attention will be the trial of Adolf Eichmann. The man who was in charge of Nazi Germany's liquidation of Jews is scheduled to be tried in Israel in mid-March.

So far, the job of covering the trial looms as an expensive headache. At the moment, it looks as though the three American networks have no choice but to accept pool coverage—each network to receive the same taped pictures of the trial each day—and each will pay about $50,000 to get them.

But this is a lot less than the original estimates made by an independent company with an Israeli government contract to provide exclusive TV coverage for all who want it. The original asking price was $160,000 from each network.

But cost isn't the only problem. The TV networks, like any other communications medium, dislike the idea of having news fed to them, particularly by an agency allied with a government.

The trial is expected to last 17 weeks, and the way things stand now, the three American networks will receive an hour's worth of TV tape on the trial daily, material which will be selected by an editor on the scene chosen by ABC, CBS and NBC.

But most awkward of all is a chance the Eichmann trial may not turn out to be interesting viewing. In the first place, most of the testimony will be in foreign languages — Hebrew and German, and with instantaneous translations into English and French. In the second place, there may be long periods of trial devoted to legalistic debate over Israel's right to try Eichmann, captured in South America.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROL RIGHTER

Friday, February 10, 1961

General Tendencies: This is a wonderful day for you to go directly to whomever is noted as good for your own sign following to state what you have in your mind and to get the help that you need in order to make your dreams in these directions come true. Fine for adopting more up-to-date ideas and methods.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You will be filled with inspiration to gain your aspirations that it would be wise for you not to lose one moment of this valuable day in going after your goals. Be practical yet idealistic and ethical in all that you do.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) If you get into the so-called Silence for a while today, powerful intuitive flashes will reach you to assist immensely in solving all problematical affairs, whether of a personal or business nature. Relax and be happy tonight.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) The ideal day to get together with accessories or even the competition and talking over what plans you have in mind for the future. Come to a real understanding and sign whatever new agreements will be of benefit later. Grow.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — If you will stop deliberating and procrastinating so much, you can accomplish a great deal by acting quickly and positively. Don't waste a single moment of this precious day, but be busily occupied every second. P.M. take it easy.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — This is a day for pleasure and fun, so be sure you first get your appearance at its very best and then be off to the pleasures and people that you most enjoy. Impress others with your wonderful personality — mix business with pleasure, too.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Important you attend to all practical and basic affairs wisely today. Strive for greater prestige and also security for loved ones. Make future plans in confidence. P.M. fine for any club or society activities.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)— A day for activity — get out early and do that selling or buying that is important, then put all files and reports in good order. Evening is then fine for fun and relaxation.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have every opportunity now to come to a better understanding with those who can give you the financial aid you need to carry through with your projects. Take higher-ups out to dinner in p.m. Make big headway swiftly.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — You can accomplish almost anything you set your mind to today, provided you will first get your appearance at its best and then follow through in a decisive and positive fashion. Evening is fine for sociability — be dynamic.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you will raise your level of consciousness today, you can easily achieve so much more than has been possible ere this. Be certain you get the backing those in higher brackets for early and best results. P.M. have fun.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) This is one of those fine days when your desires are within easy reach and you have but to make the effort to go after them. Allies are most co-operative. Go out socially in p.m. also and make big strides in this sphere, too.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) A day to impress all higher-ups with your ability and true citizenship, plus fine managerial capabilities. Advancement is in the offing. Be sure that you get your credit rating as high as you can. Collect monies owed, pay bills.

If your child is born today—he, or she, will be of that category of individuals who have a tremendous ability to get things done by using a very direct and positive method, but you must early teach your capable youngster that a certain amount of reflection is necessary in order to permit inspiring ideas to come to the surface, without which no big and lasting success is possible. Fine chart for big undertakings which your son, or daughter, can make workable.

DESERONTO

Deseronto Unable to Grant Legion Fixed Assessment on Its Building

DESERONTO — At the regular meeting of the town council on Monday night it was revealed that the town would have no sale of properties for taxes this year. Apparently there are only two properties in arrears and arrangements have been made to redeem these. As a result a motion was passed to prepare a by-law to this effect.

Council dealt with a heavy amount of correspondence and passed four by-laws. The bylaws covered the road expenditures for 1961, appointed J. Spence to the Board of Health, amended the parking by-law to include penalties and appointed a town scavenger.

At the opening of the meeting Dr. McVicker addressed the council on behalf of the Canadian Leagion and his requests were referred to new business.

A letter from the Department of Highways clarifying the previous letter on "Stop" signs for through streets resulted in the matter being referred to the streets and police committees with power to act.

The letter from the Emergency Measures Commission was referred to the fire and police committee.

A request from G. Goodfellow and Mrs. Lawlor for the installation of a water supply to their houses was turned over to the Public Utilities for an estimated cost of the project.

E. Harrow was rented a vacant store on St. George St. in the block taken over by the town for taxes from J. Balka. Rental is to be $25 per month; Mr. Harrow is to be responsible for any necessary repairs.

The request from the Salvation Army for a donation was referred to the finance committee for consideration in its budget.

J. Colley requested the town supply bowling sweaters for the ten-pin bowling team that is to compete in the International Ten-Pin League. This was referred in the industrial and publicity committee for a recommendation at the next meeting.

NO ACTION TAKEN

No action was taken on the request of William Stanley for a reduction of the monthly tax on trailers located within the town limits.

The Mayor and the chairman of publicity committee are to attend a meeting of the Lake Ontario Development Association to be held in Trenton on February 22.

The streets committee asked that council petition the Department of Highways for the balance of the 1960 budget.

Council agreed with the chairman of property committee to place fire insurance on the John Balka property recently taken over by the town for taxes. The amount is to be sufficient to protect the investment of the town.

The chairman of the fire committee reported that he had been unable to arrange a meeting with the Public Utilities and it was moved that the recommendations of the fire chief be presented by the mayor at the next meeting of the Utilities.

Council granted the firemen the use of the town park for June 30 and July 1st for their annual jamboree.

On motion of the entire council the clerk is to write a letter of appreciation to Clarke Rollins, MPP for his efforts in connection with decision of the Highways Department to construct the causeway between Deseronto and Prince Edward County.

Council could take no action on the Legion request for a fixed assessment on their proposed building. It was revealed that the new building will be 45 by 100 feet and will be an asset to the town. The main floor will be for the use of the public and the storey below the street level will be for the use of the Legion. The new building will have a stage and will be available for dances, shows, conventions and general meetings.

The request of the Legion for a grant for the "Memorial Scholarship Fund" was referred to the finance committee to be considered in the budget. The Legion was to be advised that, because of the granting of the park to the firemen, their request for the use of the property on June 22 to 24th was too soon before the firemen and suggested that they consider other dates.

The by-law committee reported that as a result of their search there seemed to be no reason why Mr. Burley could not alter his property on Main St. into an apartment building. Council finally decided to hold the matter in abeyance for further study.

Atomic Tests In Sahara Discontinued

PARIS (Reuters) — France will not carry out any more atomic tests in the Sahara Desert, official sources said today.

France has so far explodel three atomic devices at its Reggan desert site in a bid to join the world's major nuclear powers. The tests aroused widespread protests in African countries.

Nova Scotians May Be in For Higher Taxes

HALIFAX (CP)—Nova Scotians may be in for higher taxes.

The throne speech, read at the opening of the legislature by Lt.-Gov. E. C. Plow, referred twice to the need for money—specifically to pay for the hospital plan and road construction. But it did not mention taxes.

Observers are betting the Progressive Conservative government of Premier Stanfield plans to boost the present three-per-cent hospital sales tax and the 17-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax. The sales tax, introduced in 1959 to pay the province's share of the national hospital plan, is expected to be increased to five per cent.

The gasoline tax likely will go to 19 cents equalling the gas levy in Newfoundland, the highest in Canada.

The speech failed to say how new revenue would be raised. It only told the 43-seat house it would be asked to "consider means of raising the money required. . ."

Liberal House Leader Earl W. Urquhart spoke only briefly before adjourning the throne speech debate until today. He said the government's plans will "hit Nova Scotians in the pocket book, which will be slimmer than ever."

Waterloo Boys Claim Record For Bedpushing

The boys, who claim to be the world's champion bedpushers, set a mark of 8.4 miles an hour along 71 miles of highway from London to Kitchener. They left for Quebec City Wednesday night.

Bill Brown, 20, of Toronto, said the Waterloo group beat the University of New Brunswick's 7.2 miles per hour as well as marks set by students at the universities of Western Ontario and British Columbia.

The push involved some 40 undergraduates, with four or five hours at a time.

The students, who arrived in Montreal with their bed firmly tied on the top of a bus, visited the University of Montreal, McGill University and city hall Wednesday.

They will attend the Quebec Winter Carnival for two days and return home Saturday.

FOUR ECLIPSES

There will be two total eclipses of the sun in 1961 and two partial eclipses of the moon.

Daily Milling Rate Is Down

TORONTO (CP) — The collapse of two pillars last December in the underground workings at Geco Mines Ltd. at Manitouwadge, Ont., has forced a 20-per-cent reduction in the daily milling rate, it was reported Wednesday.

The company's stock dropped $1.25 on the Toronto Stock Exchange Wednesday on sales of more than 28,000 shares.

President Norman C. Urquhart said the mine mishap is regarded as a temporary setback. He said the mine will be able to draw ore from the area again after the middle of the year.

However, he expected 1961 earnings would be lower than in 1960 when they equalled $1.80 a share.

WHERE SOVIETS CHARGE AIR ATTACK — Cross locates area over Mediterranean about 80 miles north of Algiers where Soviet Union charged a French military plane fired on a Russian plane carrying Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev on visit to Africa. Brezhnev landed at Rabat, Morocco, where he planned to spend a few days before going on to Guinea for a five-day official visit. (AP Wirephoto).

French Admit Fighter Fired At Red President's Plane

ALGIERS (AP)—France's admission that one of her jet fighters fired warning shots at a Russian plane flying Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to Africa put a new strain today on Paris-Moscow relations, already tense because of Soviet support of the Algerian rebels.

The Soviet government charged the Russian civilian airliner was attacked over the Mediterranean 80 miles north of Algiers Thursday afternoon. The Soviet protest called it "an act of international banditry carried out by the French armed forces."

The plane apparently was not hit.

The French said the big four-engined, turbo-prop Ilyushin failed to respond to radio challenges and that three French Vautour fighters intercepted it in the "zone of French responsibility." One plane fired some shots. A French spokesman did not pinpoint the location, but the French have been keeping a close watch along the Algerian coast to prevent shipment of arms to nationalist rebels.

ON GOODWILL TOUR

The 54-year-old Brezhev, who is making a goodwill visit to West Africa, arrived on schedule at his first stop in Rabat, Morocco, and appeared unruffled by the shooting incident.

One Soviet official travelling with him told newspaper men the flight from Budapest was pleasant and uneventful. But on learning of the Moscow announcement he said the plane had been buzzed and attacked by French aircraft.

There were conflicting reports on whether the Russians had notified the French of Brezhnev's flight.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said in Moscow the plane was "following the course communicated beforehand to the French government."

SEE ON RADAR

Coup de Frejac, lirector of information in Algeria, said the French picked up the Ilyushin-18 on a radar screen. "This plane did not possess any international flight plan. It was coming from the east and seemed to be heading toward Morocco (which borders Algeria)."

Bachir Bel Abbes, the Moroccan ambassador to Moscow, who was travelling with Brezhnev, said he could see the Algerian coast off to one side when a twin-engined French jet appeared out of a clear sky.

"The French jet came very close, flying parallel to our course," he said in Rabat. "It was beating its wings, flapping them up and down, as if the pilot was trying to tell us something."

Aviation sources said this is a signal meaning either "follow me" to a landing, or that the plane wants to contact the other.

The Moroccan envoy said the jet "came in closer and began firing tracer bullets . . . (then) suddenly veered away and was gone. The whole incident took about 10 minutes."

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis—cold air which moved over Ontario Thursday night, brought an end to the warm temperatures of the last couple of days. However, this new outbreak of cold air is not severe and temperatures will be about normal for this time of year. A rather minor disturbance will bring snowflurries to southwestern Ontario Saturday but the rest of the province will be mostly sunny.

Find Goldfine Competent to Stand Trial

BOSTON (AP)—Judge George C. Sweeney ruled Thursday industrialist Bernard Goldfine, 70, is mentally competent to stand trial on charges of evasion of $800,000 in income taxes.

Sweeney made the ruling immediately on completion of a six-day hearing in U.S. district court on Goldfine's mental condition. He set March 20 as the date for the start of the trial.

Goldfine, Boston manufacturr who once collected as friends high officials in both state and federal governments, was found free from any delusions or hallucinations, or any present suicidal tendence.

Sweeney commented:

"I find he has some anxiety and a moderate loss of the memory and a tendency . . . to ramble, which can be cured by prodding."

BITTER DEBATE BOILS UP OVER HYDRO ACTION

Govt. Accused Of Exploitation

TORONTO (CP)—A simmering 18-year-old inter-provincial agreement boiled over into bitter debate in the legislature Thursday night.

Government benches tried to shout down accusations by Ray Edwards (L — Wentworth) that the Hydro Electric Power Commission had "plundered and exploited" the 8,000 residents of Hawkesbury, some 60 miles north of Cornwall on the Ottawa River.

Mr. Edwards said the government should build low-mortgage homes to accomodate property owners in the town forced out when their land is flooded by a power development.

Under a 1943 agreement Hydro must acquire about 180 acres in Hawkesbury for lease to Quebec. The property will be affected by flooding the headpond level behind a new power dam at Carillon, Que., 12 miles downstream from Hakesbury.

Liberals were in power when the agreement was made.

"I voted against it," shouted Premier Frost. "You shoved it down the throats of the people."

Mr. Edwards said Hydro last year indicated to residents they would have to evacuate the area because only a few homes could be moved to another location.

He said it was more than a coincidence that Hydro issued a news release a week ago which said consideration was being given to the moving as many homes as possible.

"I submit that the earlier release was deliberately intended to cajole and entice these people into accepting Hydro's offers of settlements," said Mr. Edwards.

"If this had been possible and they had succeeded in persuading these people to do this, no alternative offer would have been provided."

Mr. Edwards said he had been told by residents that if half of the property owners "sold out," Hydro would have been able to make any offer.

ACCUSES MINISTER

He accused Energy Resources Minister Macaulay of following the line of least resistance when the minister vetoed a Hydro plan to build a dyke so the river could be diverted and the homes would not be flooded out.

He quoted Mr. Macaulay, who is second vice-chairman of Hydro, as saying in a letter that "result in delay could quite conceivably reopen a matter which was of high controversy a number of years ago, but which the people on both sides of the river have come to accept."

He said Hydro's latest proposal would only force residents into greater debt because new houses "cost three and four times the amount Hydro intends to pay for their present homes."

"It is now up to the premier and the cabinet to take the steps necessary to try and right the situation," he said.

Disease and Sabotage Stalk Land As Result of Famine in Red China

HONG KONG (AP)—Refugees arriving from Communist China say the twin spectres of disease and sabotage stalk the land.

Hunger, malnutrition and famine in some areas have undermined the people's health and morale, they say, and passive but crippling sabotage is setting in.

Responsible Western experts here see no sign of a mass uprising or revolution in the making. They say the Chinese Communists have taken drastic measures to stave off disaster.

Apparently trying to give their underfed, overworked people a breather, the Peking regime has abandoned in all but name the "great leap forward" campaign on which it had pinned its hopes of overtaking the West in industrial and agricultural production.

Peking also has started paying out large sums of precious foreign exchange—estimated at up to $200,000,000 worth — to Australia and Canada for goods for its hungry millions.

Refugees, streaming out of China in increasing numbers, paint a harrowing picture. The picture probably is colored by emotion, but the stories they tell are being repeated too often these days to be disregarded.

The people of China are desperate, they say. Food has always been short, but never this short. And rations are being cut lower and lower.

Reports of illness are widespread. Many refugees come out of China suffering from tuberculosis, amoebic dysentery, and liver, heart and stomach ailments. They say their friends are similarly affected. They report peoples' bodies bloated with malnutrition, passers-by collapsing on streets.

Refugees report startling disorganization in agriculture and in industry.

Farmers and factory hands, they say, work only as long as they are watched.

Some state granaries have been reported raided, others set afire.

Peking blames the food shortages it admits on natural disasters — typhoons, floods, droughts and insect plagues—which it says have been the worst in a century. But Western observers in Hong Kong blame the current crisis on the "leap forward" program, which they condemned originally as inhuman and impractical.

Soviet Scientist Says Sputnik Carried No Men, Animals

MOSCOW (AP) — A leading Soviet scientist reported today that the Soviet Union's giant new sputnik had successfully accomplished its missions and would soon fall into the earth's atmosphere and burn out.

L. Sedov, a member of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, in an interview with Pravda also took note of Western speculation about a passenger aboard the seven-ton satellite. He said it carried neither a man nor any experimental animals.

The interview with Sedov in the Soviet Communist party newspaper was the first detailed report on the satellite launched last week. Since they announced Saturday that it had gone into orbit around the earth, the Russians had given virtually no information on the sputnik's performance.

Sedov said there were two main goals in launching the satellite—to get an object that big into orbit and, once there, to keep it in its planned orbit with exacting precision.

"The super-precise orbiting of this sputnik, a task not less important than sending it up and very difficult, was successfully accomplished," Sedov said.

The scientist said to study the parameters or elements of orbit, the sputnik was "fitted out with a radio telemetric system to control the parameters of its orbit . . . The needed measurements and observations were carried out by means of the instruments of trajectoral measurement installed in the sputnik."

Sedov said no special system had been provided for retrieving the sputnik.

Western tracking stations had been trying to see the satellite and hear its radio signals. They were unsuccessful until Thursday, when scientists at the Edinburgh Royal Observatory in Scotland saw it pass overhead on an almost perfect schedule furnished them by Moscow.

Mrs. Fairclough Accused Of Shifting Policy in Debate

OTTAWA (CP)—Immigration Minister Fairclough was accused in the Commons Thursday night of following a shifting, vacillating policy on immigration.

"Her juggling, her almost mercury-like policy with regard to immigration shows she is unable to keep her course steady in any shape, form or manner," said Leon Crestohl, 60-year-old Montreal lawyer and Liberal MP for Montreal Cartier.

He attacked Mrs. Fairclough and the government as the Commons turned to the $65,429,262 spending estimates for the immigration department in the fiscal year starting April 1. The estimates are $2,805,649 higher than those for the 1960-61 fiscal year.

"The government seems to be playing its immigration policy by ear, meeting conditions as it sees them without having any fixed guide in its policy on immigration," said Mr. Crestohl.

Mrs. Fairclough, only woman among the 23 cabinet ministers, promptly rose in her own defence.

To desk - thumping support from government back - benchers, she said:

"When he accuses me of being inhuman and vacillating and playing the immigration policy by ear, I should like to say to him—if by that he means that my ear is open to the pleas which are made to me, he is right.

"I have pursued and tried to pursue a flexible policy insofar as immigration is concerned."

The former Liberal immigration minister, J. W. Pickersgill, said the cause of Canada's immigration problem is not any failure of immigration policy or the department itself.

"The root cause of that situation is the unemployment situation with which we are faced," said the member for Bonavista-Twillingate.

"I do not believe it is practical policy to encourage to come to Canada people who have no employment and who have no real chance of getting employment."

Mrs. Fairclough, reporting that 104,111 immigrants came to Canada in 1960, down from 106,928 in 1959, blamed the situation on "the difficult economic circumstances through which we are passing now in this country, contrasted with the unusual economic and employment opportunities reported from so many of the countries of Europe."

She also said that Canada continues to be in a position to encourage and stimulate suitable increases in immigration "when economic and other circumstanes warrant."

Mrs. Fairclough apologized for being unable to tell the Commons when the long-awaited revisions to the Immigration Act will be brought forward. They were promised in the throne speech for the current session.

"I do not like the act," she said.

"I have said so on many occasions, but I have also said that I am not going to bring into this House some half-baked instrument to take its place."

Reaction of British Papers To Govt. Inquiry Is Mixed

LONDON (Reuters) — British newspapers today welcome—with reservations — a government decision to order an independent investigation of the press.

Prime Minister Macmillan announced in Parliament Thursday that a royal commission on the press would "examine the economic and financial factors affecting the production and sale of newspapers, magazines and other periodicals."

In addition, Postmaster General Reginald Bevins plans to ask a committee investigating broadcasting about the relationship of the press and television and the effect on television companies of mergers and takeovers.

Macmillan's announcement followed charges that merger and takeover plans involving the huge Odhams newspaper and magazine empire pointed up monopolistic trends in the industry. Also, the last five months have seen the demise of four major newspapers with combined circulations of almost 5,000,000.

The Times says editorially that some papers died because they were not good enough to live.

"While the royal commission is now inevitable and had better be made as fruitful in the national interest as possible," The Times adds, "it is hoped that such things are not going to become a habit."

"In a healthy society the press should be no business of Parliament."

The Guardian of Manchester says that while most of the facts would be easy to get "one per-months, haps obscure area is on relations between management and printing unions, particularly on recruitment and on the introduction of new machinery."

The Guardian says that at times printing unions have resisted changes because their members felt insecure. "It may be true that they have sometimes carried resistance to unreasonable lengths. But it also appears true that often individual managements—and, in London, the Newspapers Proprietors' Association—have done lit.

Stolen Mail Did Not Contain Any Valuables

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) Five bandits, boldy brandishing sub-machine guns, stole 100 to 120 bags of mail from a postal delivery truck Thursday and left the driver bound and gagged in an isolated sand pit.

Postal investigators said a preliminary investigation indicated the bandits obtained nothing of value. Twenty of the mailbags contained letters, none registered. The remaining bags contained newspapers and magazines.

Police said the holdup was possibly carried out by the same gang responsible for the looting of money from four other mail trucks in the last 18

BASIC INCREASE OF 20 P.C. GIVEN DISABLED VETS

Government Hints Further Action

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government, introducing legislation to increase pensions to disabled veterans, has hinted strongly at further action to better the lot of the ex-serviceman with not-so-visible scars of war.

Disabled veterans will receive a basic increase of 20 per cent in their pensions under a bill given first reading in the Commons Thursday.

The other veterans, not so visibly scarred but nonetheless impaired by war, were given hope by Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill.

While he could make "no promises at this time," Mr. Churchill said that a study was begun last November into the War Veterans' Allowance Act to determine how the act, covering "burnt-out" veterans, could be amended.

WILL CONSIDER

Mr. Churchill, himself an overseas veteran of the two world wars, said the study will consider "how quickly these amendments might be undertaken."

Increases in the disability pensions, to cost the federal treasury $31,000,000 a year, will affect 154,899 pensioners and 31,701 widows and other dependents.

The pensions are paid according to percentage of disability, with medical opinion determining the percentages. Many complicated factors must be taken into consideration in this regard, and there is no pat formula for arriving at degree of disability.

Biggest increase would go to the 100-per-cent disabled veterans. There are 7,000 of these in Canada.

A totally disabled veteran with a wife and two dependent children, for example, would have his annual pension raised to $3,444 from $2,820. A 50-per-cent disabled person who is single would receive $1,080 compared to the present $900 a year.

OTHER CHANGES

Other proposed pensions, with the present pension in brackets: Ninety-nine per cent disabled, $1,944 ($1,620); 80 per cent, $1,728 ($1,440); 70 per cent, $1,512 ($1,260); 60 per cent, $1,296 ($1,080); 50 per cent, $1,080 (900); 40 per cent, 864 (720); 30 per cent, 648, $540); 20 per cent, $422 ($360); 10 per cent, $216 ($180).

Extra payments made to disabled veterans for their wives and dependent children will also be increased. These, too, are graduated according to disability.

The payment to these veterans for their wives is increased by $120 a year to $720. For one child the payment is boosted by $84 to $324, for two children by $144 to $584 and for each additional child by $48 to $192.

Increases also are planned for pensions paid to widows and in death benefits for surviving children. The bill also extends benefits of the act to Canadians who served with Allied armies even if the recipient does not live in Canada.

Cupid Now Taking Back Seat To Mother on Valentine's Day

By EDNA BLAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Cupid is taking a back seat to Mother for Valentine's Day, Tuesday, Feb. 14.

Traditionally regarded as a day for sweethearts, it's really more of a family day, card manufacturers and stores report.

A Toronto manufacturer says men buy three times as many valentines for their mothers as for girl friends. And cards for and from grandparents are among the big sellers in Canada this year.

Sentiment shows up in the heirloom cards, similar to the lacy cutouts popular during Queen Victoria's reign. Sections are hinged together and pull out to give a three-dimensional effect.

The sick or contemporary cards sell well in some stores but not in others. Two big department stores in Montreal and Toronto say humorous cards have lost some of their popularity.

"People look at them and laugh but they buy the gushy type," a Toronto salesman said.

However, other stores report that 50 per cent of their sales are in humorous cards.

W. G. Kay, sales manager for a large manufacturer, says sick humor is on the way out and

Lumumba, Two Associates Flee From Custody

Deposed Premier Likely Heading for Stanleyville

ELIZABETHVILLE (AP) — The Katanga government announced today that deposed premier Patrice Lumumba of The Congo and two political associates escaped Thursday night from a farmhouse where they had been kept prisoner west of Elisabethville.

A communique said the trio overcame and bound two sentries guarding them and fled in a black Ford with several rifles and enough gas to cover 60 miles.

Godefroid Munongo, the Katanga interior minister, indicated his government believed Lumumba was headed for Portuguese Angola, west of Katanga province, although his ultimate objective presumably is Stanleyville, capital of the Congo's Oriental province, which is controlled by troops and politicals loyal to him.

The Katanga government said it had blocked all roads leading from the province and offered a reward for his capture.

Lumumba previously had been reported in a prison at Jadotville, 65 miles northwest of Elisabethville, to which he had been moved under heavy guard from Thysville military camp near Leopoldville Jan. 18.

FLED FROM FARMHOUSE

But the Katanga communique today said he and his associates escaped from a farmhouse between Mutshatsha and Kasaji, 165 and 225 miles farther west. Kasaji is about 80 miles from the Angola border, on a highway leading across the frontier.

Munongo said Katanga troops were searching the area. He also demanded that the UN military command send up reconnaissance flights.

Rumors have circulated in Katanga, Leopoldville, Brussels and at the UN headquarters in New York that Lumumba has been killed. UN officials and reporters have been putting pressure on Katanga officials for proof that the ex-premier still is alive.

One diplomat, hearing of the escape report, commented that this would be excellent preparation for an announcement later that Lumumba and those with him had died, or been killed, while trying to flee the country.

The prisoners who escaped with Lumumba were identified as Col. Joseph Okito, youth minister in his cabinet, and Maurice Mpolo, vice-president of the Congo Senate.

TOO MANY ID CARDS

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexicans love to display impressive credentials and identification cards, but Francisco Javier Orellana Ruiz tops them all. He was arrested Thursday on a false identity charge after police found him carrying credentials — all phoney — identifying him as an agent for Interpol (the international police organization), the FBI, the state of Jalisco government, an army lieutenant-colonel, an army surgeon, a secret service operative for the Mexican police and a private detective.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thursday, Feb. 9

Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill introduced amendments to the Pension Act providing a basic 20-per-cent increase in veterans' disability pensions.

Mr. Churchill hinted that increases in pensions are in prospect for "burn-out" veterans under the War Veterans Allowance Act.

Immigration Minister Fairclough said, in introducing her departmental estimates, that Canada continues in a position to encourage and stimulate suitable increases in immigration "when economic and other circumstances justify."

Leon Crestohl (L — Montreal Cartier) charged that the government seems to be playing its immigration policy by ear, "without having any fixed guide in its policy."

YOUTH REMANDED IN CUSTODY ON THREE CHARGES

Seventeen - year - old Robert Bennett of Belleville was remanded in custody to Tuesday to try to raise bail when he appeared in city magistrate's court today charged with there criminal offences.

Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson suggested bail be fixed at $3,000 cash or $5,000 property with two sureties but Magistrate T. Y. Wills suggested $2,000 cash or $3,000 property with two sureties would be sufficient.

Bennett is charged with two counts of breaking and entering with intent and one of breaking and entering and theft. He was arraigned today on the latter count in connection with a break-in Feb. 4 at Northtown Motors.

Richard Barrett, appearing for defence counsel Tom Lally, said Mr. Lally may request a date for a preliminary hearing, indicating that the case may be tried by a higher court.

Wellington Man Found Dead In Flaming Car

A 20-year-old Wellington man was fatally injured early today when his car left the county road at Allisonville and caught fire after crashing into a tree.

Provincial police said the young Wellington man was southbound when his car went out of control, went into the right ditch and struck a large tree. He was trapped in the wreckage of his car and was burned when the car caught fire.

The dead man was said to have left Belleville about 12.30 and was on his way home to Wellington when the accident occurred.

The flaming car was discovered about 1.30 by a passing motorist, Herbert Brooks, guard at the penitentiary at Kingston. He was unable to get near the blazing wreckage of the car.

Negro Named Administrator For Housing

The action climaxed several hours of debate in which the 53-year-old Weaver was described by critics as a zealot for integrated housing and by supporters as a dedicated American who will do a fine job.

Weaver's nomination for the $21,000-a-year job was the first of President Kennedy's selections for high government posts to encounter any major Senate opposition. Confirmation, however, was by voice vote.

Most of the opposition was based on what Senator A. Willis Robertson (Dem. Va.) called Weaver's "extreme views" in favor of racially integrated housing.

Southern senators contended that builders in their sections would refuse to develop housing projects with Weaver in command of federal programs.

Reports Indicated Russia Ahead of States in ICMBs

WASHINGTON (CP)—A qualified source says intelligence reports clearly indicate Russia is far ahead of the United States in acquisition of numbers of long-range missiles which now are operational.

But this source, who asked not to be identified, added that in over-all hitting power the United States appears to be ahead because of a bigger force of long-range strategic bombers.

He said this assessment is based on an analysis of Russia's inventories by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and includes Intercontinental Ballistic Missile intermediate range ballistic missles and missiles which can be fired from submarines and other sea-going craft.

He declined to estimate numbers. But he said the Russian lead over the United States in numbers of operational ICBMs appears to be far greater than the 3-to-1 estimate given by former defence secretary Neil McElroy two years ago.

The missle issue has boiled into a political storm with reports quoting a high-placed Pentagon informant as holding the tentative view there is no missile gap between the two powers and that in over-all destruction power the United States has a comfortable lead. The source later was identified as Defence Secretary Robert McNamara.

President John Kennedy claimed during the 1960 election campaign that a big missile gap existed in Russia's favor and that a crash production program was needed to close this gap.

Republican Richard Nixon, supported by former president Eisenhower, repudiated Kennedy's claims and argued that the U.S. was ahead in total deterrent power.

The White House at first labelled the no-missile-gap stories as inaccurate, but Kennedy at his press conference Wednesday seemed to back away from his campaign position that a big gap existed.

He explained that he asked McNamara to look into the strategic and tactical weapons situation and report to the president by Feb. 20.

Graph shows recorded sales of North American and British and European vehicles since 1945. Sales for 1960 are estimated but the total, according to industry spokesmen, is expected to hit a record 449,910.

Imported cars will account for about 27 per cent of the total compared to about 26 per cent in the previous year. (CP Newsmap).

Rev. H. H. Hillis Dies Suddenly In Hospital

After taking his afternoon constitutional walk on Thursday afternoon, Rev. Harry Hunter Hillis, 159 William Street, returned to his home and later suffered a stroke. He was rushed to Belleville General Hospital by ambulance but died suddenly soon after admittance. Mr. Hillis was the honorary minister of visitation for Bridge Street United Church and had been most active in that capacity.

Mr. Hillis was born at Toledo, Ontario, 83 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hillis and had resided in this city for the past fourteen years, when he retired from his last charge at Arundel. After receiving his early education in his native schools he attended University and graduated with an Arts degree and entered the ministry and was ordained in 1903. He was in charges of Sidney, Little Britain, Wellington, Pakenham, Wall Street Church in Brockville, Vankleek Hill and Arundel during his ministry and in all places was highly respected by his congregations.

He was a man of keen intellect, high intelligence and was of a kindly nature. Mr. Hillis made and maintained a legion of friends throughout the district and his sudden death will be sincerely regretted by a wide circle. He was a member of Bridge Street United Church and was always willing to assist the many ministers in the city in any capacity. Fraternally he was an affiliated Past Master of The Belleville Lodge A.F. and A.M. No. 123 and took an active interest in the order.

Surviving is one daughter, Miss Margaret H. Hillis at home. His wife the former Pansy Margaret May Oliver, died in 1946.

The funeral will be held on Monday from Bridge Street United Church with interment in Belleville cemetery.

Three Charged At Napanee

NAPANEE — Three Belleville district residents have been charged by Napanee police in connection with an accident last month.

James Sagriff, 20, R.R. 1 Corbyville, faces a charge of careless driving and one of drinking while under the age of 21. He has been released on bail of $100. His hearing is scheduled for Feb. 21.

Two other occupants of the vehicle, Robert Wayne Parsons and William Barriage, both of Belleville, are also charged—Parsons for failing to have his ownership card changed; Barriage for having liquor in a place other than his residence.

On Jan. 27 police followed a car west on Dundas street to East street. The auto turned onto East street where it allegedly struck a parked car. Police stopped the vehicle a few minutes later.

Sgt. Lawrence McTaggart is in charge of the investigation.

Two Local Rinks Make Playoffs On Saturday

Although the mild weather has caused the ice committee some concern with respect to condensation and dripping on the ice, the quality of curling has been maintained at the men's open bonspiel now being held at the Quinte Curling Club and which will continue until Saturday night when the prizes will be awarded. Only one sheet of ice has been affected by the dripping but careful work by the committee has kept the sheet in play during the past two days. Incidentally the chairman of the committee is strong in giving orders but he has a lot of faithful members who are willing to do the hard work for him.

A Quinte rink and one from the RCAF made the charmed circle by winning three games in the day's play which entitles them to return on Saturday for the playoffs. Mac White skipped the one rink of Al McCullam, Ross Booth and T. A. Carruthers and this local rink should take some beating before the prizes are handed out.

Stan Keith, Trenton RCAF, and Bob Lanning with his rink of medical men, Drs. Nelles, Beattie and Loynes, were two-game winners and will also compete on Saturday. Mac White had his stiffest competition for the day in the third game against Charlie Millar's rink of Kingston and skipped by George Kostick. The game went down to the last end with White on top in a 7-6 count. It was strictly a "knockout" game and the members of both teams were not missing, which accounts for the low score. Bob Barlow and his rink from the Trenton Curling Club, won the one-game high for the day.

As usual there was a large gallery in attendance both afternoon and evening and they witnessed some excellent curling. The cheese table was well patronized — the wants of the inner man were amply supplied by Pete's Lunch, caterer for the spiel.

The results of the draws were:

• Belleville - Madoc

Resident of this city for the past 16 years and formerly of Madoc, Mrs. Lottie May Smith, 26 Murney Street, died suddenly in Belleville General Hospital on Friday. She was in her 72nd year.

Born in Madoc, she was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Harley Brooks. She was a member of Holloway Street United Church and was Past Noble Grand of Quintena Rebekah Lodge, No. 133.

She is survived by her husband, Ambrose Clayton Smith; two daughters, Mrs. James B. (Lynore Maribeth) Jackson of Peterborough, and Mrs. Maxwell (Dorothy Harley) Bone of St. Jean, Quebec. There are five grandchildren.

TO HIT TARGET EARLY

LONDON (Reuters) — Russia will reach the 1958 United States industrial production level by 1964, a year earlier than the target in the latest seven-year plan, the Soviet news agency Tass said today. Under the 1959-65 plan Russia was to attain the 1958 American level by 1965 by increasing its industrial output 8.6 per cent annually. But in the first two years of the plan the increase was 10.5 per cent annually.

REBEKAH MEMORIAL SERVICE

The officers and members of Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133, Belleville, and sister lodges, are requested to assemble at the Thompson Funeral Chapel, Everett Street, on Sunday, February 12th, at 8 p.m., for a Memorial Service for our late sister, Lottie Smith.

By order of the Noble Grand, Sister Ila Addy.

CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank my friends, relatives and neighbors for their cards, flowers and visits while I was a patient in the Belleville General Hospital. Special thanks to nursing staff on Second Floor West, Dr. Douglas and Dr. Empson.

—Grant Lott.

Sincere thanks to Dr. Williamson, Dr. Beattie, all the nurses and staff on 2nd West, Belleville General Hospital, for their wonderful care during my two weeks' stay there, to all those who sent flowers, plants, baskets of fruit; cigarets, treats and cards, to those who have come to call, telephoned and inquired about me, those who helped at home, my staff who carried on so efficiently, and to the two men who took me to Trenton hospital after my accident and brought my tool chests to my home, to each and everyone a most sincere thank you!

—J. Allan Osterhout, Rossmore.

We would like to express our gratitude to the many friends who remembered us during the illness and passing of our dear mother, Sophia Townsend, also to those who visited her at the hospital which meant so much to her, and thanks to all who helped in any way. Everything was deeply appreciated.

—Harry and Maud Townsend.

I would like to express my sincere thanks to all by friends, neighbors and relatives for cards, gifts and flowers, also nurses and girls of 2nd East, and a special thanks to Drs. Hart, McDonald and Scott while I was a patient at the Belleville General Hospital.

TORONTO STOCKS

On the exchange index, industrials were off 2.86 at 538.50, base metals .50 at 168.90 and western oils .54 at 90.14. Golds were up .01 at 86.75.

The 11 a.m. volume was 405,000 shares compared with 403,000 at the same time Thursday.

Goodyear Tire went down 2⅛ at 130. Great Lakes Paper dropped ⅝ and Imperial Oil and Stelco both eased ½.

Great Lakes Power went ahead ½ at 33. Moore improved ⅜ and Bank of Nova Scotia ¼.

In golds, Dome and Kerr Addison paced the losers, both off ¼ at 22⅛ and 11¼. But a series of narrow advances helped boost the index.

On index, industrials were up .07 at 541.38, golds were ahead .35 at 6.71; base metals were off .36 at 169.40; Western oils eased .30 at 90.68.

Volume was 1,642,000 shares compared with the 1,800,000 shares traded Wednesday.

Stelco led steels with a half-point gain at 73¼. Atlas Westeel was up ⅜ at 23¾ and 11, and Canada Iron Foundries, Dominion Foundries and National Steel Car all improved ¼.

Great Lakes Power, International Utilities and Power Corporation all improved ½.

Ford of Canada jumped three points at 141.

Campbell Red Lake had a 25-cent gain at 14½ while. Among base metals, Noranda led a list of small losers with a drop of ¼ at 40¼. Gaspe Copper was up a point at 20, Falconbridge went ahead ½ at 39¾.

Local Drivers Will Take Part In Big Rally

Four local motoring enthusiasts will be taking part in Canada's premier endurance motor sport rally which commences this evening from Roote's Motors in Toronto. The annual Canadian Winter Rally, which has been sanctioned as an international event by the world motorsport governing body, the Federation Internationale Automobolism (FIA) is a 1,200-plus mile test of both the driving and navigational ability of the two-man crew and of the mechanical ability and endurance of their car.

Entered from Belleville are Jim Williamson and Jim "Sandy" Smith in a Renault Dauphine from Jones Motors and Jim Jenkins and Jack Dodson in a Citroen, all members of the local chapter of the St. Lawrence Automobile Club. Messrs. Williamson and Smith are also members of the official three-car team entry of the St. Lawrence Automobile Club. (St. LAC.)

Others on the St. LAC team include Al Edmunds of Kingston with Frances Walsh of Messina, N.Y., in a Corvair, and Jack Willson of Kingston, and Fred Charlton of Napanee, also in a Corvair. Another club member, Homer Trotter of Watertown, N.Y., winner of the rally two years ago, will again be competing with the official Swedish Saab factory team.

The local club entrants will be competing against 378 other motoring enthusiasts during the two days of the rally. The 194 cars entered, a record entry for the eight-year-old event, will be on the road all of this time with the exception of a compulsory eight-hour stopover at North Bay to allow the drivers and navigators some sleeping time.

The event is organized by the British Empire Motor Club of Toronto, probably the senior motorsport club in North America, under the sanction of the Canadian Automobile Sport Club, the governing body of motorsport activity in Canada, and the the international governing body, the FIA, which has its headquarters in Paris, France.

The course is laid out, for the majority of its length, over secondary roads usually noted for their twisting and turning and isolation. These factors, together with the vagaries of the Canadian winter, usually make just the completion of the rally a feather in a competitor's cap. Only 92 of last year's 163 entries managed to complete the course.

Weekend Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP) —All classes and grades of slaughter cattle traded actively with steer prices firm to 25 cents per hundredweight higher this week at the Ontario public stockyards.

Heifers and yearlings were steady while cows were 50 cents and more higher and bull prices strong to 50 cents per hundredweight higher. Veal calf prices were a strong $1 higher, hog prices steady and lamb prices steady on a narrow demand.

Cattle receipts, estimated at 7,200, were some 800 head more than last week and about 400 head more than the same week in 1960. Receipts from Western Canada numbered 310 head, 100 from last week. Western stock calves totalled 122 head, including 10 cattle and 40 calves from Nova Scotia. There were no shipments to Eastern Canadian slaughterers and no exports to the United States.

Slaughter cattle: Choice steers $24.50-25, sales to 25.25; good 23-24; medium 20-22.50; common 16-20; good heifers 21.50-22.50, a few choice to 23.50; medium 20-21; common 15-19; choice fed yearlings 25-26.50; good 23-25; good cows mostly 17-17.50, odd tops to 18; medium 15.50-16.50; common 14.50-15.50; canner and cutter cows 11-14; good heavy bologna bulls 19, odd tops to 19.50; common and medium to 18.50.

Replacement cattle: Good light steer stockers 22-24; heavy Western steers stock calves to 27.50; common and medium stockers and stock heifer calves 20-22 with off colored light dairy boner stockers down to 16.

Calves: Choice vealers 33-35, odd extreme tops to 38; good 30-32; medium 26-29; common 20-25; boners 14-19.

Hogs: Grade A 29.50; heavy sows 24.25; lights 26.25; stags 16 on a dressed weight basis.

Sheep and lambs: Good handyweight lambs 21.50; good heavies 18; common and medium 12-20; good light sheep 8-10, some yearling up to 14; common and fat sheep 3-7.

LIFE INSURANCE

Life insurance began in Canada in 1833 when a British company established a branch office in Quebec City.

The annual convention of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association was held in Trenton yesterday. Shown above are: Frank Evans, president of the association; Rev. W. H. Carty of St. Peter's Church in Trenton; Robert Temple of Belleville, afternoon speaker, and Rev. Matthew Meehan of Toronto, guest speaker at the dinner meeting last night.

Township-Town Annexation Parley Just Like Amicable Chat Over Backyard Fence

TRENTON — As Councillor Lloyd Worrall put it, "It was just like a couple of guys talking over the backyard fence."

Last night, members of town council and Murray Township council who, in their separate group meetings have seemingly been at odds on the annexation question, met here. Harmony was the keynote of the meeting.

Councillor Worrall, who heads up the Industrial and Economic Development Committee of town council, and Councillor D. R. Fraser who last year was the chairman of the committee appointed to look into the question of possible annexation by the town of parts of Murray and Sidney townships, were spokesmen for Trenton council.

Also present, representing Trenton, were Mayor James MacDonald, Councillors N. J. McNair and Ross Burtt, town clerk O. W. Larry and town engineer Walter Murray.

Mayor MacDonald started the discussion by saying "it was too bad the two council hadn't gotten together before." He said he was under the impression that Murray wasn't so much concerned with what Trenton intended to take as it was with what Trenton intended to leave in the township.

Councillor Worrall said that annexation plans were based on developments in the area in the next 25 years. He said that Trenton had to grow and that the only area open to expansion was to the west of the town.

Mayor MacDonald introduced Councillor Fraser and said that the councillor had received a great deal of criticism for heading up the annexation committee last year, because he is in the real estate business. The mayor assured the visiting councillors that Councillor Fraser had no ulterior motives in recommending certain areas in Murray for annexation.

ONLY INQUIRED

Councillor Fraser said that the action taken by town council in the annexation field so far had been "wholly investigative." He said that a tentative western boundary for the proposed annexed area had been set, but that the planning consultants and the Ontario Municipal Board would have the last word on the question. He said that a fairly large part of the township was being considered, as the provincial board disapproved of piecemeal annexation. Trenton must justify its desires in the annexation request and prove that the town will be able to service the area, provide schools, etc. He said that roughly 512 acres of the township were under consideration.

The tentative boundary line has been set at a point running 331 feet due west of the boundary line of the Klemencic sub-division and squaring off at the bay. The town also has plans for the annexation of about 80 acres in Sidney township.

The councillor said that with annexation, the area would be properly zoned and properly serviced before any large scale building took place. He said that there were 101 reasons why it would be better for the town to proceed with annexation now rather than wait until the area was built up, with no zoning observances and with septic tanks being used for sanitary facilities.

"We intend to annex, but we're not necessarily land hungry," said the councillor. "We'd like to develop this area at the least cost to the town and with the most pleasant negotiations with the township council."

Councillor Fraser explained that it was an economic necessity for the town to expand as the average assessment on town property was low and that the homes built in the area under consideration for annexation would be of a better than average class and would return a greater revenue to the town in taxes.

In discussing the objections of the township residents who live south of the railway tracks on the Carrying Place Road, Councillors Worrall and Fraser said that these residents now enjoyed many town privileges and that with the township about to embark on a re-assesment program, they wouldn't find taxes much higher if they were taken in by the town.

RELATIONS STRAINED

Reeve McMaster said he felt it was time the two councils got together as relations were becoming decidedly strained. He said that one of his constituents had said that "Trenton would soon be filling in the bay to build on".

He said that a few years ago the township council had approached the Trenton Board of Education and that as no plans could be worked out for a high school to serve both areas, Murray had built its own secondary school at Brighton. He said that many township residents had deliberately built outside the town, knowing they wouldn't get services and that if certain parts of the township were annexed by the town, some of them would move outside the boundary again.

"The area you name as being consideed for annexation involves quite a bit of assessment", said Reeve McMaster. "It isn't fair for one area to profit at the expense of another. If you were in the same position wouldn't you feel that you should have some recompense for the lost assessment?"

"Nothing is definite", Councillor Worrall said. 'We'll sit down with you and discuss any new developments in our plans".

"There's been horse trading done before", said Reeve McMaster. "A few years ago you gave us back 800 acres, now you want some of it back".

"For the first time in the long history of Trenton we've begun to look ahead", said Councillor Fraser. "There has been a population explosion in the province. There's a strong need for municipalities to work hand in glove".

Councillor Fraser suggested that the two councils get together to discuss mutual problems on a quarterly basis. This met with the approval of members of both councils.

MRS. ELIZABETH ANN GRAY

Real Interest In Life Reason For Longevity

Mrs. Gray, the former Elizabeth Ann Blakely, was born in Marmora and lived in that district before moving to Trenton 46 years ago.

She lives with her two sons, Joe Gray and Martin Doyle, (Mrs. Gray has been married twice); does all her own housework and gardens in the summer.

She maintains an active interest in world and local affairs. Although failing eyesight precludes reading, she is a keen radio listener.

Eight of Mrs. Gray's nine children are living. Beside Joe and Martin at home, Mrs. Mary Bonter, Carrying Place, Mrs. Lena Mulharon and Mrs. Ardie Sinclair of Toronto, Mrs. Ellen McMurter of Trenton, Jack Doyle of Belleville and George Doyle of Trenton were all in touch with their mother to add their felicitations to the many extended by friends and neighbors.

Mrs. Gray was the recipient of many gifts and cards. She insisted on serving callers with tea and birthday cake (baked by a neighbor) when they called to wish her happy birthday.

"I guess I owe my long life to the fact that I've been interested in living", said Mrs. Gray.

Make Deal With John Bush For Ambulance

TRENTON — Councillor N. J. McNair told reporters last night that Trenton's ambulance problem had been solved — temporarily. He said that the John R. Bush Funeral Home in Belleville would supply the service at a slightly higher cost than that charged in the past by the Weaver Ambulance Service. Weaver will cease ambulance operations at 6 p.m. Saturday night.

Trenton area residents will now put in a call to the Bush Funeral Home when they require an ambulance. Mr. McNair guaranteed that the ambulance will be in Trenton in a matter of minutes.

When asked what would happen if the Belleville ambulance should be caught in traffic and delayed, Mr. McNair said, "We'll face that problem when we come to it."

The councillor said that other arrangements of a more permanent nature are pending, but declined to elaborate.

Former Corps Leaders of SA In City to Conduct Services

The Salvation Army came to Belleville in February, 1884.

A tidal wave of spiritual awakening was sweeping Ontario through the daring and enthusistic efforts of a handful of Salvationists. This surging wave had its beginnings in London, Ontario, just two years previously when two young immigrants from England started holding open air meetings as they had done in the home land. They wore a uniform much like an English policeman and the startling phrase "Prepare to meet thy God" on their helmets.

The same year a man and his wife, also immigrants from England, started holding meetings in Toronto.

Urgent requests for Officer leaders were finally granted when Captain Wass and Captain Shirley arrived from New York to take charge of the two branches. The work surged ahead, hundreds of people were converted and by 1884, the year of Belleville's opening there were sixty-two corps and 175 officers.

"It is just one year since this wonderful people made their first appearance in this city, and opened fire on the powers of sin, drink, and the devil, and it has been a year of real victory. Hundreds, yes, we may say thousands, have felt its mighty influence, and have been led to give up vice of every kind. Hundreds of homes made happy and hearts made to rejoice in the dear Master."

And although the program and methods have been modified since those days of beginning the objectives of the Salvationist have remained the same—to lead men and women and boys and girls to Jesus Christ, and thus into lives of usefulness to others and satisfaction to themselves.

FAMILY OF 14

Leading the 77th anniversary meetings this weekend will be Major and Mrs. Robert Marks of Earlscourt, Toronto, who were in charge of Belleville Corps in 1955 and 1956. Born of pioneer parents on a Saskatchewan wheat farm, Major Marks was one of a family of 14 children migrating to the west coast with their parents in the wake of the depression.

Settling in Chilliwack, B.C., the Major received his schooling there. Entering The Salvation Army Training College in Toronto he received his commission as an officer in 1942. Since then he has commanded corps operations in Western Canada and Ontario at such centres as Coleman, Alberta in the Crow's Nest Pass; Regina Citadel; Ellice Avenue in Winnipeg; Lippincott in Toronto and Corner Brook, Newfoundland. For two years he was on the staff of the Training College and has become well known as a contributor to Salvation Army periodicals.

Major Marks was for two years the National Evangelist for The Salvation Army in Canada. He covered the entire Dominion from Victoria to St. John's conducting six and ten-day campaigns for revival, and speaking to high school groups, service clubs and youth organizations in most of the major cities of Canada. He was married in 1945 to the former Captain Audrey Sims. They have three children, Anne - Sheila, attending Oakwood Collegiate, Betty-Joy and Edward who are at the Earlscourt public school.

Nine bandsmen from the Earlscourt Band and three songsters, also of Earlscourt will accompany Major Marks and provide special music in all the meetings. These visitors represent a variety of vocations — assistant editor of Technical Productions, telephone repairman, linoleum layer, compositor, aircraft mechanic, IBM operator, trainee nurse, and students—but come together in their spare time to play and sing the music of Salvation. They may be heard on Saturday evening at seven o'clock in a Festival of Praise and on Sunday at 11 a.m., 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. at the Citadel on Pinnacle St.

Must Streamline Work in Classes In Modern Age

The president of the district branch, Frank Evans, of Moscow, Ont., conducted the business portion of the meeting.

Reports were read by the secretary, Miss T. Taggart, and treasurer, D. Foley.

Inspector E. J. Neville urged teachers to enlarge the field of their own personal development in order to achieve best resutls with the children under their charge.

Miss Marion Tyrrell, general secretary of the association, urged the teachers to maintain a constant interest and participation in the activities of the association. She said that the teachers of today must streamline their classroom activities to keep abreast of the space age and be open-minded about suggested improvements in the field of education.

Mr. Evans reported on a recent board of directors meeting. He explained the intricacies of an educational machine which would result in the student being able to absorb two months' instruction in two weeks. He said that this machine, which may soon come into use in school rooms, would help students advance but might tend to isolate them from their fellow students by doing away with much general classroom instruction.

TV GOOD, BAD

Sister Mary Carthagh gave an evaluation of the visual aids used in the modern classroom. She said that instruction by television had some good points and quite a few drawbacks. There must be great improvements made in this line.

The guest speaker for the afternoon session, Robert Temple, of Belleville, was introduced by Sister Mary Andrew.

MUST T. 2 BOB

Mr. Temple said that the only way for Canada to solve the chronic problem of winter unemployment was to set up some sort of subsidized education for the workers, particularly in the field of technical instruction. He said that he felt the government should be willing to lend money to deserving students in order for them to pursue their education at technical schools or at university level. He said that other countries remained prosperous, winter and summer, and he felt Canada's economic stability could be preserved by an educational program among the country's workers.

Macmillan May Try Again

Wednesday a report from London said that Prime Minister Macmillan was considering visiting Peking next fall, in an effort to "begin the process of bringing Communist China into the family of nations." By Thursday this report had been denied, but it is worthy of note that on Wednesday Lord Home, the British Foreign Secretary, said that Britain feels "the facts of international life" require the entry of Communist China into the United Nations.

If events should prove that Macmillan is considering an approach to Peking, and the assertion the report to this effect had "no foundation whatsoever" was the customary reaction to a premature disclosure of future plans, it will make "Unflappable Mac" seem like a born optimist. After his last venture into the turbulent water of personal diplomacy, leading to the ill-fated summit conference at Paris a year ago, one might have supposed that he would have sworn off. Compared with the task of getting the belligerent Mao and the Chiang-wedded U.S. to kiss and make up, the job of getting the genial Ike and the ebullient Nitka to pull together would appear a piece of cake. Macmillan, though, is probably driven more by a realistic sense of necessity that by unrealistic high hopes. One of these days, and that soon, the U.S. and China will have to sit down and work out a modus operandi if these two giants of the western and eastern worlds are not to drift into armed strife.

Macmillan's trip to Peking is reported to depend upon his first getting the private approval of President Kennedy. One might wonder whether this will be easily obtained. Kennedy has publicly expressed his distaste for personal diplomacy, preferring to see the handling of international problems returned to the hands of professional diplomats. Yet in China's case he may be prepared to make an exception for the compelling reason that at present the avenues of normal diplomacy are closed. He might welcome Macmillan's plan, not so much as the forerunner of a "summit" parley with Mao, but as the first step towards the eventual formal recognition by the U.S. by one of the most important facts in today's world—the existence in the world's most populous country of an energetic and aggressive government dedicated to revolutionary Communism.

Before Macmillan makes the trip, he will, we must presume, need the permission and approval of one other statesman, Chairman Mao. It is interesting to speculate whether Macmillan would even approach Kennedy with his proposal if he had not received prior indication, possibly indirect but nonetheless authoritative, that Mao would be willing to receive him.

The London despatch says the views of Britain's Commonwealth partners and allies will also have to be taken into account. It is fairly obvious that these views will be split. West Germany, if Konrad Adenauer is still at the helm, may be expected to object. Nehru's India will almost certainly approve wholeheartedly, despite India's recent boundary disputes with China. One would expect that Canada would be quick in giving Macmillan its blessing, although there might be reservations attached if Kennedy proves cool to the suggestion.

One wonders, though, what the men in the Kremlin will think of such a journey, particularly if it is not preceded, or accompanied, by any move to resume negotiations, at least at the foreign minister's level, between the West's Big Three and the Soviet Union.

Somebody Knows

The Royal Navy has decided to leave behind nine colored sailors when the aircraft carrier Victorious visits South Africa. Some other colored sailors will make the voyage, to allow them to visit their families.

The decision to leave nine men behind was made "to prevent any possibility of their being treated badly in South Africa," said an admiralty spokesman. He added: "In the navy we just do not know whether a man is colored or not. The fact is not included in any of his documents. It would be monstrous to suggest that there is a color bar."

The navy may not know whether a man is colored or not—but somebody must have found out or how could the nine men to be left behind have been chosen?

"One of the nicest things about the Yorkshire Christmas is that housewives were still making their mince pies oblong in shape, long after the rest of England had changed to round ones. Yorkshire remembered that the pies once symbolized the manger of the Holy Child, and the rich spicy filling the gifts of the Wise Men". (Doreen Taylor speaking in the BBC program "The Northcountryman.")

Letter To The Editor

Subsidy for Sewer Or Water Illegal

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

As chairman of the Belleville Industrial Commission for eight years during Belleville's greatest expansion, the writer can categorically say that any industry requiring a subsidy of $1,500 more or less for the construction of a sewer or water service is one which the municipality could well do without. Besides, the granting of such a subsidy as contemplated by the 1961 council is contrary to law.

The only bonus a municipality can grant an industry is a fixed assessment by a vote of two-thirds of the electors. If council grants any other form of bonus, each member of the council who voted for the expenditure is personally responsible to reimburse the city for the unlawful expenditure.

Doubtless, if Mayor Haig had been present at a recent meeting which voted on such an illegal subsidy, same would not have been even introduced to council.

Insecure Are Not Free

Hartland N. B. Observer

Shortly before his first presidtntial nomination, Dwight D. Eisenhower delivered a widely-publicized speech in which he said that pensions and other public measures were undermining the character of the American people.

Americans, he said, were driven by the desire for "security" especially in their old age. "If what you want is security," he said, "you can find it in jail where everything is provided for you."

As an ex-president, Mr. Eisenhower will receive a pension of $25,000 a year for the rest of his life. Now a move is being pushed forward in Congress which would enable him to draw an additional annual pension of $20,542 as a retired five star general. The pension would carry with it a special military staff to serve Eisenhower, an office to handle his business affairs, low cost hospital and medical care and other benefits, all at the taxpayer's expense.

Comment on the incongruity evident here is unnecessary. And we hardly need to re-state the fact that is known to all of us. It is the lack of security that saps the initiative of the individual. No man can be free if he is not secure.

A man's wish to avoid homelessness and starvation in his old age does not imply a lack of moral fibre. Nor was a nation ever strengthed by the weakness and poverty of its citizens.

The great depression of the 1930's was a time when few people had occassion to complain of a glut in security. Probably never was there a time when so many people in North America were economically insecure not only from year to year but from month to month and week to week and day to day. Yet the depression was not notable for the strengthing of character.

The way to buttress the moral fibre of our countries is to ensure that no man, woman or child need go to bed hungry at night or live in a slum, civic or rural, that no man too old or sick to work need resort to beggary, that no child need stay home from school in the winter because it has no shoes to wear, that no citizen need agonize through his whole life in the shadow of insecurity.

PIGEON-HOLE FOLKS

Label a man, and your interest in him fails. Give him a world to play in, and it is difficult to find him.

Pigeon-hole this man, and you will always know where to find him — but he will probably disappoint you.

How facinating that personality which seems to show a new front every time it expresses itself. In freedom alone, with space, it is possible to grow, to expand, to breathe the breath of large life into one's hope.

Define a soul — and it withers away!

Why should human beings be pigeon-holed? Yet the majority are! Speak to them through their cold conventionality, and immediately they respond from their particular little stalls.

Walk where you will. Observe. Who goes there? A "specimen" — just out for a walk from his pigeon-hole home!

But he whom you never know where to find, whose playground is history, human endeavor, all literature, and all human though — well, what a delight to sit in the presence of such a one.

There is only one important phase of the earthly adventure of a man, and that is the development of his individuality. Starve this and you starve the man — pigeon-hole all that he is that is wborth while.

Not only "know thyself," but be thyself. Let no one pigeon-hole you, not even yourself. Feel the room, become intoxicated with the space that is the world itself.

Don't be afraid!

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

SPENDING TIME

One of the most valuable and yet least valued dimensions of human life is time. Yet though it is precious and irreplaceable, nothing is more easily wasted. The trickling away of golden minutes and hours in idleness or in useless activity is probably the most common single source of tragedy in human life.

How can we spend our time well?

One way is to have a worthwhile occupation and to spend honest hours at it — hours really devoted to the work at hand, and not to watching the clock or sipping coffee. Good work is a good investment of time, and it should claim a large share of every man's waking hours during his working years.

We need to spend time on people — the right people. Time is too precious a commodity to squander on casual acquaintances at the bar. Those who are important to us — our families, our true friends must receive a fair share of our time if these relationships are to be rich and full.

Good causes deserve our time. There is nothing more valuable, not even our money, that we can give them, than ou rnever-to-be-lived again time. The man who thinks he supports his church or his community by contributing a few dollars but never doing anything is not really giving of himself. The gift of oneself is the gift of one's time.

And the time to start spending time wisely is now. Don't put this off if you really want to be happy.

Kids Are More Resilient Than Delinquent

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Most people today profess surprise that we are producing so many delinquent children. I am surprised that we are not producing more. Far more children should be delinquent than actually are.

As Dr. Lauretta Bender of New York University observed recently, "Children have an amazing capacity to tolerate bad parents, poor teachers, dreadul homes, and chaotic communities."

It is the strength of the human personality, not its weakness, that astonishes and heartens me. We live in an era of continual revolutions in all aspects of our life; the rate of change is greater in a year that it used to be in a decade.

Traditions have been shattered, patterns broken, old ceremonies picture of the universe, the world and the breed of men has been turned inside out within our lifetime.

A sense of continuity is missing from contemporary society. Fathers change jobs with distressing rapidity. Mothers work. Families move from town to town. Neighborhoods are demolished and new ones built. Speel, power and violence are the special marks of our time.

Delinquency increases? Every thing increases: adult crime, divorce, traffic fatalities, narcotics, addiction, alcoholism, mental breadowns, suicides, all the heartbreaking pathology of a social order in upheavel.

The actua lpercentage of delinquent children is still quite small, though no less alarming for that. In almost every case, this sick, sad, twisted behavior can be traced to lack of love and security, to Dr. Bender's "bad parents, poor teachers, dreadul homes and chaotic communities."

Still, 95 per cent of the nation's children are weathering the storm. They have their problems and difficulties, just as we have, but for the most part they are coping with a hardiness and a humor that we adults might well envy and try to emulate.

Children are stronger and more resilient creatures than we commonly think. The power of the ego to restore and integrate the whole personality has only begun to be explored by psychiatrists. Freud, great as he was, drew only one profile of human character; his successors, such as Hartman, Krsi and Erickson, are showing us the other, and more hopeful, profile.

We are not nearly so much at the mercy of our dark unconscious forces as we previously thought. Our children are proving that daily.

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Canada is a proud name. It rolls musically off the tongue. Yet comparatively few Canadians know how the proud name originated.

There have been many fanciful derivations suggested for it, one from the Portuguese, another from the Spanish, and even one from Sanskrit But the name is almost certainly derived from the Huron-Iroquois Kanata, signifying a town. So says the Encyclopedia of Canada.

In the Origin and meaning of Place Names in Canada, G. H. Armstrong describes it as an Iroquois word, Kanata, or Kanada, meaning a cabin or a lodge.

The name Canada has stuck from the days of the early French explorers, having become the popular designation for the colony of New France, as distinct from Acadia.

At one time in the course of our history Canadians narrowly escaped being known as Tuponians or Hochelagans. This grisly piece of intelligence was unearthed by Industry trade publication of the Canadian Manufactures Association.

Tuponia and Hochelaga, if you can believe it, were seriously proposed as names by which the nation born out of Confederation should be known. Tuponia was the more strongly favored.

We have to thank Thomas D'Arcy McGee, one of the most colorful of the fathers of Confederation, for retention of the name Canada. Addressing his colleagues on Feb. 9, 1865, he said:

"Now I would ask any member of this House how he would feel if he woke up some fine morning and found himself instead of a Canadian, a Tuponian or a Hochelagander?"

That settled the name issue.

Drink Plenty of Water Whenever Taking Aspirin

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Does the amount of water taken with medication have anything to do with the effectiveness? If I were to take aspirin with only a swallow of water would it be more effective than with a full glass of water? — J. K."

In most cases, including the aspirin, the effectiveness won't materially change. However, irritation from the medication should be considered. So follow directions. And with aspirin, distress may be avoided by drinking plenty of water, rather than just a swallow.

• • •

"Dear Dr. Molner: My daughter, 8, is overweight, and also occasionally wets the bed. Is there any connection? And is there a pamphlet you could send regarding same? — Mrs. A. E."

Yes, there can be a connection. Except where there is some real physical flaw, bed-wetting is primarily a matter of nerves and habit. The child may be upset because of the weight, or may be over-eating to compensate from some emotional conflict. It happens frequently. Yes I have a booklet on this topic, "Enuresis — or '0 Ways to Stop Bed-Wetting." For a copy, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20 cents in coin to Dr. Molner, care of The Chicago Sun-Times, Syncidater P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have read that scars can in part be removed, or at least made less obvious, by dermatologists. I understand this is done by abrasive methods. Is it expensive? I have a scar about an inch long on my forehead from an accident and often wondered if anything could be done about it. — Mrs. F. C."

This abrasion method is used by plastic surgeons as well as by some dermatologists. In some cases a scar can be best removed by surgical removal of the scar tissue itself, then carefully drawing the edges together with invisible stitches — stitches which actually are underneath the skin, and do not go through the skin.

In some cases, usually where there is an uneven sprinkling of marks, as the aftermath of acne, for example, such surgery would not be practical. However, "skin planing" or "abrasion" can be used. The skin in the area is planed down and a new surface layer grows in its place.

This method will remove many minor blemishes, but will not remove the deeper pitting which sometimes occurs.

Whether the abrasion method would be suitable for you is a matter to be answered only by examination of the scar itself.

As to expense, I can't answer — I don't know what you might consider expensive. Planing is a surgical procedure. It must be done with skill and, of course, under sugically antiseptic conditions. It is by no means a trivial procedure. Many people would consider the mony well spent. Others might decide that a small scar isn't so bad, after all. It depnds on you and the scar.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have a severe dandruff problem. I have tried just about all of the treatments on the market, but each week my whole scalp is covered. I am at my wits' end. Maybe you can answer my problem. — Mrs. W. D."

In a case as severe as yours evidently is, I have have one suggestion: Have your doctor refer you to a dermatologist (skin specialist). If you don't have a personal physician to ask, then write or phone to the nearest medical society and ask for the names of such specialists in your locality.

Elopements Are Cheaper

Ogdensburg Journal

Most local people take for granted many services which are provided for the community by the hometown newspaper. The services are often expensive for the newspaper and free of charge to the groups served.

The activities of civic organizations, athletic events, business promotions, farm development and social affairs are good examples. Often these activities would be dismal failures without the free help of the local newspaper. Some of them owe their existence to newspaper publicity.

The editor of a Mississipi weekly recently dramatized this situation in a humorous column. He said that he figured it cost his newspaper $900, when a local girl got married. This cost was figured on the basis of type composition and space used on stories on the wedding and parties leading to the wedding.

"This does not include about 40 hours of tedious work on the part of the society editor telling about how beautiful and charming the honoree (sometimes as ugly as a mud fence) was in chantilly lace, black sheath, etc. . . . ."

The editor then set up a standing offer: "$15.00 wedding present to any gal that runs off and gets married..."

However, the distraught editor can find some consolation in the publicity given to non - commercial activities. The importance attached to the publicity by the local community is continuing proof that the newspaper is closely read and the most indispensable local advertising medium.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

In the army before a battle we used to speculate furtively and privately on the possibilities of the morrow: who would survive, and who would take over? Colonels and seconds in command did not often go west, so there was little likelihood of large, dramatic consequences. It was the company commanders and lieutenants among the officers, and the sergeants and corporals in the ranks, who were the subjects of speculation. There was no use speculating if you counted yourself among the casualties, for in that case it wouldn't matter. But as a rule, battles came and went, and there wasn't much change in the situation. Whoever was left did fine.

In a thriving business with which I am acquainted, three deaths among the top executives occurred in the past year. In business as in the army, there is always the private and furtive element of speculation as to the shape of things to come. The three deaths were thought to make a dramatic shake-up in the organization. But as far as I can see, everything is going on as usual in the business.

With what humility do the dead withdraw! Like figures in an antique drama, they fold their hands and bow backwards out of our memories, their faces hidden more with every backward pace until, in shadow, they are forgotten except by an effort of the mind. In business as in the army, the reinforcements are right at hand.

The first shipment of 300 outgrown skates collected from Southern Ontario residents are happily received by Indian children at Fort Albany on James Bay, 700 miles north of Toronto. No one seems to mind the —30 degree F. temperature as King Whyte, who conceived the program, and John Trent of the Cities Service Oil Company, which gathered the skates, help with the lacing.

Receive 2,000 Pairs Skates

Indian Kiddies Happy

—Belleville Gives 200

More than 300 Indian children in Northern Ontario are taking to the ice on their real ice skates today thanks to the residents of southern Ontario.

The skates were the first shipment of more than 2,000 pairs already collected by the King Whyte Skate Program.

Mr. Whyte, an outdoorsman and television personality inaugurated the program to collect outgrown and unused skates just before Christmas.

The skates were collected at Cities Service Oil Company service stations across Ontario. The oil company also agreed to cover any additional costs of the program.

Belleville can proudly hold high its head as a member of southern Ontario cities and communities taking part in the program.

For thanks to generous-minded citizens and the efforts of Angus Duffy of the Cities Service Oil Company here, some 200 pairs, or one-tenth of the total to date was collected in this city.

Mr. Duffy and his staff did a tremendous job. They not only accepted the skates for shipment to Toronto, but voluntarily called for and collected the skates when requested. They delivered the skates to a Toronto collection point.

The first shipment of skates was recently flown in by Mr. Whyte and the RCAF to the large Indian residential school and to the reservation at Fort Albany, 700 miles north of Toronto on James Bay.

Another load was dropped off at the Indian village of Winisk several hundred miles further north on Hudson's Bay.

Said Mr. Whyte, "The mission fathers told me their boys had been skating on barrel staves and old skates blades nailed to boards until recently. But if anyone wanted to know how much the children liked the skates they should have seen the hockey game the older boys put on for us before we left".

Many organizations co-operated in the program. Once the skates were gathered in Toronto at the Cities Service warehouse, they were sharpened and refurbished by C.C.M. with new laces, they are sorted and packed by the Gyro Club. The RCAF and several chartered airlines will fly in the skates to remote areas on their regular supply runs.

So from the happy Indian children in Ontario's frozen northland to Belleville and other southern Ontario centres comes a sincere "Thank You".

Scouting activities

4th KIWANIS

Group chairman John W. Denton is pleased to announce that this group has been re-organized and is now in a position to accept boys into the Cub Pack and Scout Troop. A cordial invitation is extended to all boys interested in this world-wide movement.

The Cub Pack for boys 8 to 11 years old, meets at the Kiwanis Centre on Wednesdays at 6.45 p.m. under leadership of Cubmaster Don Harvey. Boy Scouts, boys over 11, meet on Tuesdays at 7.00 p.m. with Scoutmaster G. Schadan in charge.

Any boy wishing to join, or just wants to know more about Scouts will be made very welcome by Akela Harvey or SM Schadan.

You will enjoy these wonderful evenings of friendly comradeship with boys in your own age group. Scouting is fun—come along and join in the fun.

BAYSIDE CUBS

Cub Ken Danylcluih, recently arrived from overseas, was welcomed to the pack by Akela Fred Tebbitt and now proudly wears the Bayside colors, Ontario crest and the Tawny Six patch.

We know you will like it here, Ken, and with group chairman Chuck Hartwick wish you "Good Hunting."

Baloo (ACM Betty Moase), informs us there was some delay obtaining badges resulting in a rather late presentation of a first year star to Eric Cooney and a second year star and toymakers' badge to Steve Carter. These boys are now Tenderfoot Scouts and were given "Scouting for Boys" with the sincere wishes for "Good Scouting" from Akela Baloo and the Cubs. SM Cannon permitted these Scouts to be Cubs again for the short ceremony.

AN APOLOGY

Sixer Steve Jones received his first year star and should have been in our last report. Sorry, Steve, will try to do better next time.

Seconder David Green was awarded a first year star and Gardeners' badges were given to Cubs Larry Fell, John Little and Sixers Bill Fell and Don Mallory.

CANNIFTON-CORBYVILLE

Quite a number of parents were present at the first "Going-Up" ceremony in fifty years of Scouting history. Until recently this group never had a Cub Pack. Miss Louise Rush, who was Scoutmaster fifty years ago and takes a lively interest in the troop, will be proud to learn that five Cubs were raised to Scouts. These boys, A. Belstadt, D. McKay, J. Reynolds, D. Thornton and D. Putman were invested by Scoutmaster Stan Kerr.

After the ceremony SM Kerr spoke briefly to the new Scouts. He said their time spent in Cubbing where they learn the basic ideas and life as portrayed in the Jungle book could be likened to public school. In Scouting they progress to a life associated with high school where they improve on ideas learned earlier. A Scout is taught to do things for himself, the leaders instruct and guide over the rough spots. Parents can play an important part by attending group meetings and make themselves acquainted with the needs and problems that arise from time to time. Scouter Kerr closed with a few well chosen remarks of appreciation to the ladies of the Boy Scouts' Auxiliary and group committee men for their help which is always freely given when needed.

WON'T TRY TWICE

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd said Thursday, South Africa will not "allow herself to be belittled" on an application to remain a member of the Commonwealth. If South Africa is refused continued membership at the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London next month and told to apply again, it will refuse to do so, he said.

IN THE SWIM — Above may be seen four local pupils who recently graduated from the swimming instruction classes put on through the joint efforts of the YMCA, the Quinte Water Safety Council and the Belleville Public School Board. There were 30 certificates of proficiency presented, Wednesday evening at the "Y". Also in the picture are several parents. From left to right: Mrs. George Grant and Lynda Grant, Mrs. Alex McCrury and Pauline McCrury, William Robinson and Billy Robinson, Archie Davidson and Stanley Davidson, and Joe Ruddy, men's physical director at the "Y".

To Solve Problems Readily, Concentrate and Be Precise

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D., with HARRY KARNS

(Article 10)

Now let's talk about solving problem.

Your mind is a wonderful thing. It will solve problems of surprising complexity, if you feed it the necessary facts and ideas and give it the chance to operate at its top efficiency.

So few persons do. They are satisfied with half measures, or, if dissatisfied, do not know how to do better. Mental laziness is a pitfall to some students. They memorize a single process for solving a problem and try to apply it to all problems.

Such students don't get the exact knowledge which is the foundation for any real learning. They have not been taught to care.

The time usually comes when they do care — and when they painfully regret the wasted years.

-To be a good student you must develop the habit of giving complete attention to the task. Your thinking must be precise, persistent. You must know exactly what is meant and not be satisfied with partial or approximate ideas.

You must completely understand principles. It is not sufficient to know just enough to get the homework done.

THE PRINCIPLE OF PRINCIPLES

Many students in our class in algebra have said that the process of solving a problem is clear enough when it is demonstrated in the classroom. But, just a few hours later at home, the same sort of problem is not simple but baffling. Why?

The answer is that they understand the solution of the specific problem, but they do not grasp the principles involved. They have failed to exert the energy to think the problem through in words.

Since we are going to use this word "principle" often in the dozen or so paragraphs, let's pause briefly and think about what a principle is.

If you know what two plus two is, you know the answer to a specific problem. If that is the only addition problem you can answer, however, you haven't grasped the principle of addition. If you know how to solve not only two plus two but also four plus four and six plus seven, and anything plus anything, you know the principle of addition. While there is something different about all these problems of addition, there is something fundamentally alike in the way the answer of each is obtained. When you find that, you know the principle.

Let's keep in mind something mentioned once before: The device of talking things out by yourself. This device is vital in the solving of problems.

Mary told us she understood how to do long division in class but forgot before reaching home. We started to explain long division again. Mary reached for her notebook and started copying the simple problem.

TRY IT STEP BY STEP

"Put the notebook aside", we told her, "and think in words instead. Think of the explanation as general directions which you can apply to any problem in long division, not just this problem".

Concentrate

Step by step we explained the principles of long division. She understood each step in words. She went home, worked problems involving different numbers but the same principles — and worked them correctly.

To understand the principle is to own a skeleton key to the doors of a whole house of knowledge.

And the best way to hold the principle in mind is to think in words.

Pete was a junior at the university .His major was math. He did all his homework easily, but his exam grades pushed him down to a "C" for the course.

Actually, he grasped math processes rather quickly. He was a potential math genius. As he had said, getting the homework — the work of one day on one particular kind of problem — was easy. But on the exams, when the professor threw a mixed group of new problems at him, he performed like a fast ball hitter coming up against a pitcher who tosses curves and sinkers.

We sugested that when he prepared for a test, he skim through.
through materials covered recently and ask:

1. "What principles were used in the solution of these exercises?"
2. "What problems may be solved through the use of these principles?"
3. "What is the cue that would indicate that these principles should be recalled in working a problem?")
4. "How does this fit in with what I already know?"

We suggested that when he prepared for a test, he skim through materials covered recently and ask:

1. "What principles have been used to solve these problems?"
2. "How do I recognize the situation in which they may be used?"

This deliberate, precise thinking about math, in place of the vague, hit-and-miss method he'd follow before, produced the "A's" which Pete should have been making all along.

Should Teach Good Manners Says Church

Modern education, in addition to equipping technicians to make a good living, should also teach young people good manners — even how properly to use a knife and fork in the dining room ,says an editorial in the current issue of the United Church Observer.

"Teaching good manners, even little things like the use of a knife and fork, is part of the job of a church university, if not in the class-room, at least in the dinning room", The Observer says. 'And judging by the way male undergraduates consume their food in some of the college cafeterias we see, they've got plenty to learn, and are not getting much help in learning it".

The Observer points out that "imparting good manners is considered an important part of life in the women's residences of United Church colleges."

"But as we travel about the country we hear some strange things about undergraduates and ministerial manners", the church journal says. 'Professors' wives tell of students who accept invitations for tea or dinner, then fail to appear, and send no regrets We learn of a few ministers, up on theology who are notorious for tactlessness and bad manners".

The Observer suggests that "some of us are eternally in need of corection or having the rough edges honed off".

Concluding, the Observer says: "University missions and evening chapel prayers, counselling by don and dean, discussion groups and talk-fests will have an important place (in church universities), but among the things a church college can do is to teach young men and women to eat properly, an din all other things to behave like ladies and gentlemen'.

BRIDE-TO-BE FETED

The home of Miss Charlene West, 10 North Park Street, was the scene of a happy event one evening, recently, when friends gathered to honor Miss Gail Juby, bride of this month.

Several interesting games and contests were enjoyed by all.

Miss Juby was the recipient of many lovely gifts, for which she expressed her thanks.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and her mother, assisted by Miss Nancy Lou Middleton.

DANGEROUS OBJECTS

Cosmetics may contain substances that could poison young children who swallow them.

Smart Sophistication

The French lace bodice is dotted here and there with sequins. Silk faille is used for the body of the dress, which starts with a little pleated flang that takes a slanting line to the hem. The midriff cummerbund is optional and a simple belt of the fabric could be worn in its place.

Missionaries Give Talk on Ecuador Work

The monthly meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon when the new president, Mrs. Bertrand, opened wtih a timely poem, followed by prayer.

Mrs. Holmes reported on the recent executive meeting held at the home of Mrs. Bertrand when the program for the year was arranged.

Mrs. Johns, Christian stewardship secretary, read an article on "Gifts for Building Advance" and stressed the need for the printed word in the Far East. The treasurer, Mrs. Phillips, gave the financial report for 1960.

It was announced that "The World Day of Prayer" will be in St. Thomas' Anglican Church at 3 p.m. on February 17th., also that the Belleville Presbyterial will meet in Stirling on February 21 and 22, with Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Mitchell appointed as delegates.

Mrs. Brown and her group were in charge of the program and Mrs. Smith led in the devotional. "Break Thou the Bread of Life" was sung, followed by Scripture reading by Mrs. Bush.

Mrs. Smith gave a reading, stressing the importance of Bible reading.

At this time the guest speakers, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Smith, missionaries home on furlough from Ecuador, were introduced by Mrs. Brown. Mrs. Smith told of their progress in the work and said they spent their first year in Quito, Ecuador in a language school learning the Spanish language, after which they were appointed to give a full life-time to the work.

Mr. Smith showed colored slides of the coast, jungles and mountains of Ecuador with a population of two and one-half million, consisting of Indians, Mistyas and white people, with no purpose in life. He also gave three reasons for his interest in missions: a debt to forefathers who sacrificed their lives for missionary work; as a duty, "I discipleship: Jesus said to go into all the world and preach to all peoples who haven't had the peoples who haven't had the opportunity to hear or see the printed word.

Mrs. Brown thanked Mr. and Mrs. Smith for this inspiring treat in pictures and information and extended best wishes from the W.M.S.

At the close, Mrs. Townsend favored with a solo, "My Ain Country," after which refreshments were served and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

Women's Activities

COLLEGE HILL W.A.

College Hill W.A. met at the church for its monthly meeting on Wednesday afternoon.

The president, Mrs. C. Bailey, opened the meeting and welcomed all present.

The members discussed a few items of business held over from the last meeting. It was left in the hands of the parsonage committee to look after items needing to be replaced in the manse. The roll call showed 20 present. Expressions of "thank-you" were received from Mrs. F. Molkawa, Mrs. F. Watson and Mr. A. Greenwood.

It was decided that a group of the members would visit the county home some day during the first week in March.

It was announced that the World Day of Prayer would be held in the city on February 17 at 3 p.m. at St. Thomas' Anglican Church, also to keep in mind the Keswick Conference for Women in September.

The devotional period included the Scripture lesson from Romans 12:4-21, read by Mrs. E. Flunder.

Mrs. K. Belcour read the theme for the devotional which was "Jesus Christ, the Light of the World — with Brotherly Love." "So we being many, are one body in Christ and everyone members one of another."

A warm spirit of friendliness among the members of any society is the oil that makes the machinery move smoothly. No body of church workers, be they ever so clever, and successful, can accomplish anything to further the Kingdom of God without this spirit of kindly affection. Working together for the Kingdom draws all closer. So one must see to it that in his or her personal life and in the meetings the light of love burns brightly, and must remember all are members one of another.

Mrs. C. West favored the gathering with a solo, "In the Garden."

GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. R. G. Coulter, who is treasurer of the W.M.S. Presbyterial, was the guest speaker for the meeting. Her talk was along the lines of Christian education.

"In the time of Moses, the people were promised a land flowing with milk and honey. In our time we also have such a land, and we should be willing to share our abundance with others less fortunate. In our hearts we must get rid of grudges and slights before we can have peace of mind.

"Unless we have peace of mind we cannot be happy. We should adhere to God's law — not turning to the right or left and choosing the most important things. We meet discouragements and disappointments, but God gives us faith to meet these."

The speaker also outlined some of the work of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and invited any of the ladies to attend its meetings. She especially mentioned the work in connection with the Consecon children's camp, and said the camp was in need of financial aid. She said she thought the women of this country hold the key to the drinking question.

For this interesting and worthwhile message, Mrs. Coulter was thanked by Mrs. Bailey.

A contest was conducted by Mrs. A. Dickens and a social half hour was enjoyed with Mrs. F. Treverton and Mrs. D. Hunter in charge of refreshments.

PARKDALE BAPTIST L.M.F.

The Ladies' Missionary Fellowship of Parkdale Baptist Church held its February meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Robinson.

Mrs. Stewart Blake, as president, presided. A Scriptural quiz game was played and was of interest and enjoyment to all.

Mrs. Beverley Foster opened devotions, the theme was "Walks With God." She said in part: "We cannot stand at the portals, but must get walking with God, who chooses our ways and compels us to walk in them.

"Walk before God that He may watch us and it behooves us to do His will.

"Walk beside God and have wondrous hand in hand communion. Walk after God and, as our Shepherd, He will lead us in green pastures. Walk in all His ways and He will surround us with His Divine presence.

"Walk in the atmosphere of Christ and He will make us like Him and we will attract people to us."

Prayer time, led by Mrs Stewart Blake, was followed by sweet fellowship.

JUBILEE E.A.

The Jubilee Evening Auxiliary met on Tuesday evening. Following supper, reports were heard by the secretary, the treasurer and conveners. Mrs. Grace Anderson and Mrs. Martinson took charge of the worship service, the theme being "The Unchanging Glory of God".

A solo by Mrs. Demeza, entitled, 'I Shall Not Pass This Way Again", was much appreciated.

Miss K. MacPherson with her group — Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. MacDonald and Miss Russell, discussed "Christianity in Africa, Burma and the Philippines".

Radio with its educational programs, good music and news has helped so much to spread Christianity. Last year the United Church gave $14,000 to do mission work in there and other countries around the world.

SHANNONVILLE HOLY TRINITY W.G.

The regular meeting of the Women's Guild of Holy Trinity Church, Shannonville, was held at the home of Mrs. Gordon Johnston on February 2, with 18 members present.

The Rev. J. Riesberry opened the meeting with prayer. Mrs. A. McBride, in charge of the devotional, chose Psalm 12.

Mrs. A. McBride read an interesting selection which everyone enjoyed. Mrs. B. Cook read a thank-you card from Mrs. Jean Rump. Mrs. T. Whittle and Mrs. J. Williams donated their birthday offering. Mrs. B. Cook won the flower fund contest.

Mrs. W. Houston read an invitation from Mr. Russell Ritz for all young teenagers to attend leadership training school to be held at several district churches.

The pot-luck supper will be held on Valentine's Day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sager, starting at 5 o'clock. Everyone is welcome.

Mrs. S. Fitzgerald closed the meeting.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. W. Houston; the hostess will be Mrs. N. Edwards; devotional will be led by the Rev. J. Riesberry; the program by Mrs. B. Spencer.

Mrs. A. Ryckman thanked the hostess for a delicious lunch and hospitality.

SPRINGBROOK W.A.

SPRINGBROOK — Members of Springbrook W.A. met in the church basement on February 2. Mrs. Murney Mason and Mrs. Ralph Thompson were hostesses for a potluck dinner.

Following the dinner the president, Mrs. Gordon Webb, welcomed a large number of members and visitors for the regular meeting.

The devotional, "Brotherly Love", was led by Mrs. Fred McKeown. The Scripture, Romans 12: 4-21, was read by Mrs. Joe Thompson. "Lesson Thoughts" were read by Mrs. John McKeown.

A prayer for the missionary was given by Mrs. Arthur Reid.

An interesting topic on "Love" was given by Mrs Merle Moore.

Members reported making 20 calls and sending 34 cards to sick and shut-ins. The visiting volunteers, and th. executive, reported making seven calls.

Mrs. Bert McCoy reported sending a blanket to Mrs. Don Bateman for her new baby.

The parsonage committee reported a new washing machine had been purchased. A motion was made to send $10 to the "March of Dimes."

Mrs. Delbert Fleming and Mrs. Reg McKeown are the visiting volunteers for February.

It was decided to have a Valentine Day potluck supper in the church basement with entertainment to follow.

Readings were given by Mrs Ed Bateman, Mrs. Percy Bateman and Mrs. Andrew McInroy. A solo, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," by Mrs. Gordon Webb, was much enjoyed.

Corduroy For Cruise

By ALICE ALDEN

The comfortable dress that looks good all through the day is a boon for the cruise traveller on all-day shopping forays during stopovers in foreign ports.

Here is one such dress, attractive and a good number to pack as well as wear.

It is of washable, fine-wale corduroy in such delectable shades as lilac, gold or coral. There is back interest in the form of huge buttons all the way down, a contrast to the uncluttered front.

Club Activities

FELLOWSHIP CLUB

CENTENARY — The regular meeting of Centenary Fellowship Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard May recently with a good attendance. Harold Hancock led in a rousing sing-song to open the meeting. Bernard and Agatha May had charge of the worship service. The president, Byron Harder, had charge of the business. Notice of a conference at Five Oaks was read, also notice of a dance at Tobe's sponsored by the Belleville and Cobourg Couple's Club.

Dawson Douglas introduced Mr. and Mrs. Machold who showed pictures of their tour of Denmark. These were most educational and interesting.

Harold thanked Mr. Machold for showing his pictures. Refreshments were served by the group in charge and a social half hour was spent.

TRINITY W.M.S.

MADOC — Trinity United Women's Missionary Society held its meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Roy Taylor, West St. Laurence St., with a splendid attendance of members. Owing to the illness of the president, Miss Holmes, Mrs. Albert Empey was in charge and opened the meeting with some devotional thoughts on co-operation in the work of the United Kingdom, concluding with a prayer.

Mrs. Bennett gave an appropriate reading on Stewardship and remembered the missionary in prayer.

During the business period, Mrs. Empey announced the Presbytery meeting to be held in Stirling on February 20-21. Arrangements were made for several to attend. She also reminded the members of the World Day of Prayer, which is being held in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church on February 17.

Mrs. Boyle was in charge of the program which consisted of a skit from the study book, on "Work Camps." Assisting were Miss Ashe, Mrs. C. Johnstone and Mrs. W. McCoy.

The Bible lesson was taken from 2nd Peter and read from Phillip's translation by Mrs. A. Tanner with Mrs. Boyle giving the commentary.

Thanks were expressed to Mrs. Boyle by Mrs. Empey. Miss Ashe thanked the hostess and her assistants for the use of her home and the lunch served.

ST. PETER'S W.M.S.

MADOC — Mrs. Sinclair was hostess for the February meeting held at the manse. The president, Mrs. Bailey, opened the meeting with Mrs. Brett at the piano.

The World Day of Prayer is to be held in St. Peter's Church, February 17th at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Carl McCoy gave the Bible reading from St. John 17: 18-26. Meditation was given by Mrs. Bailey, who also took the topic, "How We Go Into All the World Together."

"What kind of world do we live in? What is the church doing to meet this situation and to fulfill its responsibilities?"

Mrs. Wood read an article on the World Council of Churches and the International Missionary Council, showing how different churches work together through some of the councils and also for the extension of the church.

COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

The Canadian Council of Churches was read by Mrs. Kilpatrick, also the commission on missionary education and the World Presbyterian Alliance. A paper on the Canadian Bible Society was given by Mrs. Donohue. A reading from the "Glad Tidings" was given by Mrs. C. Woods. Many delegates go from the World's Council of Churches to Africa, Asia, Latin America, Ghana world co-operation.
co-operation.

Refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Kernohan and Mrs. Donohue. A pleasant social hour followed.

'Open House' Marks 25th Anniversary

FRANKFORD — On February 2nd, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Faul of R.R. 2 Belleville celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

"Open House" was held from 2 to 4 p.m. when 40 guests visited the Faul home which was decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells over the head table. Bouquets of red roses from the grandchildren and snapdragons, baby 'mums and gladioli from cousins from Newark, N.Y., centred the tables. On the kitchen table were white and yellow 'mums from the Uniondale Women's Institute.

Meeting the guests at the door were Mrs. Gordon Rice, Mrs. Harry Faul, Mrs. Mildred Crowe and Mrs. Harry Patrick.

Pouring tea in the afternoon were Mrs. E. Anderson, Mrs. Clifford Elliott and Mrs. Clayton Marisette.

Those serving refreshments were Mrs. Frank Phillips and Mrs. Harry Phillips.

In the evening approximately 125 guests gathered at the Faul home. The Rev. R. M. McMullin was chairman for the evening. The program consisted of: piano solo, Miss Joyce Anderson; reading, Mrs. Morley Sine; piano solo, Miss Marlene Phillips and a reading by Mrs. Arnold Chase.

A "mock wedding" was enacted with the following neighbors and friends taking part: minister, Mr. Ernest Anderson; bride, Mr. Cecil Frost; bridegroom, Mrs. Carman Frost; bridesmaid, Mr. Carman Frost; groomsman, Mr. Claude Tucker; flower girl, Mr. Art Osterhout; bride's mother, Mrs. George Nicholson. A duet was rendered by Mrs. Ernest Anderson and Mrs. Avery Martin, with pianist Mrs. Cecil Frost. The wedding guest was Mrs. Art Osterhout.

The community presented the honored guests with a lovely coffee table centred with flowers. The family presented them with a tri-light lamp and matching table lamps. Other relatives and friends presented them with a silver cream and sugar set, several lovely cups and saucers, silver butter dishes and several hammered aluminum dishes.

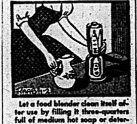
Wife Preservers



Let a food blender clean itself after use by filling it three-quarters full of medium hot soap or detergent suds and plug it in. Rinse it in the same manner.

Mother's Helper

MILK has an unpleasant way of clinging stubbornly to the sides and bottom of a pan in which it is warmed. Keep your scouring chores at a minimum by pre-rinsing the pan with cold water. Pouring milk onto the cold surface prevents it from sticking when heated.

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

In the past, your help with bridge refreshments has been most appreciated. So, here I am again, do you have any suggestions for a salad I might serve to twelve? Man ymany thanks. You are my most admired writer . . . E. S.

ANSWER:

Try this professional looking salad.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Poached Finnan Haddie with Milk Sauce; Scalloped Tomatoes; Delicate Turnip; Celery & Cucumber Sticks; Pumpkin Pie; Tea.

BRIDGE PARTY FRUIT SALADS:

Lettuce cups: Be extravagant when preparing the lettuce cups. Allow 3 well-cupped leaves for each individual salad plate, carefully drying them. Have ready 1) drained canned grapefruit sections, 2) drained canned-pineapple rings 3) bananas cut in halves crosswise, spread with mayonnaise and rolled in chopped blanched almonds, 4) plump stoned prunes filled with white cream cheese, 5) choice dessert figs filled with cubes of Gouda or Swiss cheese, 6) small bunches of choice grapes — preferably Thomson seedless. To assemble: Put 1 ring of pineapple on lettuce leaves to form base. On both sides of it put 2 large sections of canned grapefruit. At front of salad put a nut-coated banana half. In centre of pineapple ring put a stuffed prune. Then place a small bunch of grapes and a stuffed fig attarctively where you think the arrangement requires them. Serve with Fruit Cream Dressing: Three tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 eggs, 3 tablespoons vinegar, 1 lemon, juice and grated rind, 1 cup juice from canned pineapple, 1 cup cream, whipped. Mix sugar and flour in upper part of double beller. Add beaten eggs, vinegar, fruit juice and grated rind. Cook over gently boiling water, stirring constantly, until thick. Chill; just before serving fold in 1 cup cream, whipped.

QUESTION:

Can anyone tell me how to make runny butter tarts? Mine are always firm . . . Mary B.

ANSWER:

Yes, I can.

SYRUPY BUTTER TARTS:

Line medium tart tins with the flaky pastry given below, that has been rolled very thin. Spoon 1 teaspoon or more corn syrup into each lined tart tin. Make

FILLING:

Mix together 1-2 cup each butter and corn syrup, 1 cup nice clean fresh dried currants, 2 eggs, well beaten, 1 teaspoon each lemon juice and vanilla. Mix until well blended. Spoon into the lined tart tins that have the corn syrup already in them, filling them 2-3 full, (no fuller). Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for 15 minutes.

PASTRY:

Sift 3 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt together into bowl. Into this cut with pastry blender or two knives 1 cup shortening until the pieces are the size of small peas. To this add 1 tablespoon at a time, 8 or 10 tablespoons cold water tossing lightly to mix. When all is moistened, gather up in a ball and let stand for a couple of minutes, then roll out very thin.

NOTE:

Forks will have to be served with these tarts.

MODERN MANNERS

DON'T BE A LINGER- LONGER LADY

Mrs. Inexperienced has stubbed her toe again in her latest social misadventure. Her heart was in the right place, but her actions were not!

She set out at four o'clock, quite properly, to pay a formal call on Mrs. Dow. The Dows lived in a big hotel apartment, so Mrs. Inexperienced stopped at the desk to ask the number of the suite, took the elevator to their floor, and rapped on the door.

Mrs. Dow herself answered. She was wearing a hat and coat, obviously ready to go out. Mrs. Inexperienced bustled in, saying she hoped she hadn't come at an inconvenient time. Mrs. Dow replied in a gracious manner that she had been on the verge of leaving, but would be happy to visit for a short time. She removed her coat to make her visitor feel more at home. With mutual friends to chat about, the new regime in The White House, etc., time slipped by, and one hour later Mrs. Inexperienced reluctantly too her departure. She thanked her hostess for a delightful time, hoped she hadn't detained her, and finally left, after lingering at the front door for a final chit-chat.

It was too late for Mrs. Dow to do anything she had planned. It was almost time for her husband to return from the office. With a sigh of resignation, she removed her hat, her afternoon having been completely ruined by the thoughtlessness of her visitor.

In the first place, Mrs. Inexperienced should never have gone directly to the Dow's apartment. She should have had herself announced from the lobby, thereby giving Mrs. Dow a chance to excuse herself, if she wished to do so.

Mrs. Inexperienced showed extremely poor taste by staying for an hour when it was obvious that Mrs. Dow had been about to go out. Even had Mrs. Dow been entirely free the visit should not have lasted more than a half hour at the most. As it was, when her hostess was dressed to leave, Mrs. Inexperienced should have spoken to her for a few minutes, not removing her coat or taking a chair, and left.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question: Would you please tell me again if the bride is responsible for paying for her bridesmaids' dresses, and is the groom supposed to pay for the attire his ushers wear? — Mr. P. A. D., Ridgewood, N. J.

Answer: The answer is no in both cases. The bride chooses the gowns that she wishes to have her attendant wear, but they pay for them. The same rule applies to the bridgroom. Based on whether the wedding is to be formal or informal, he instructs his best man and ushers as to the suits they are to wear, and it is up to them to buy or rent what is needed.

It has been estimated that sales of bakery products in Canada will be more than $500,000,000 in 1961.

Women's Activities

CANNIFTON - CORBYVILLE W.M.S.

There was a good attendance at the Cannifton United Church Sunday School rooms when the president welcomed the members of the Cannifton-Corbyville W.M.S. to the February meeting.

Mrs. Harvey Putman gave a reading on "Prayer", which was this month's roll-call word. Several of the ladies responded with Scriptural verses.

The supply secretary, Mrs. W. Brenton, read a letter which stated that 95 tons of used clothing had been sent to various countries from headquarters.

The Bookshelf was reveiwed by the literature secretary who urged the members to read these informative and interesting books.

MISSIONARY'S LETTER READ

Mrs. F. Furmidge, senior, who is the secretary for Christian stewardship read a letter she had received from Miss Ruth Tillman, a missionary in Newfoundland, which told something of the work she is doing. Miss Tillman is also the missionary for prayer this year.

The Belleville Presbyterial of the W.M.S. will be held in Stirling on the evening of February 20th and in the morning and afternoon of February 21. The leaders of the younger groups are especially invited to the Monday evening session.

The World Day of Prayer for this year will be Friday, February 17th and the ladies were asked to let their friends know. The service will commence in the Cannifton United Church at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Tom Howard was in charge of the worship service and her helpers were, Mrs. A. Boyd and Mrs. John Botting.

The Worship Service was conducted by Mrs. Howard and the Scriptural reading was given by Mrs. Botting. The theme was, "The Bible." The service was taken from January issue of the "Missionary Monthly."

During the service, a duet was sung by Mrs. Howard and Mrs. H. Farnham. Mrs. Botting presented some worthwhile thoughts in a reading on, "Prayer."

The study period was taken by Mrs. Gerald Brenton and those assisting her were Mesdames Roy Pound, H. Farnham and C. Bird. A brief review of the study period brings out the following interesting facts: "What Is a Missionary?" A young missionary in Korea, Peggy Billings, defined a missionary 'as a person called by God to do a specific work.' One cannot believe in Jesus Christ without believing in His mission in the world. The greatest need is for missionaries who will understand the real needs of the people and who will go out to meet those needs.

From every land missionaries issue forth, in answer to a call proclaimed in the language that every Christian understands and still there is a shortage of missionaries. A missionary laid that shortage to the failure of the church to be a vital force in the lives of people. There is a need to set the facts straight about what it really means to be a Christian and what Christ really meant when He said, "Go ye, into all the world."

Following the study period, the lunch conveners, Mrs. A. Boyd, Mrs. H. Putman, Mrs. C. Bird and Mrs. F. Furmidge, Sr., served refreshments of sandwiches and cake.

A social half-hour was spent by the ladies.

BLIND LEARN NURSING — Mae Brown, 24, deaf and blind for the last seven years, has a conversation tapped on her hand by blind Marjorie Drew of Clarkewood, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind's Bayview grounds in Toronto. Miss Brown, a native of Fort William, Ont., graduated from a Red Cross nursing course with the help of Miss Drew, who does volunteer work with the deaf and blind at Clarkewood. Mae works as a braille proofreader with the CNIB and plans to go back to school—to help others who are deaf and blind. (CP Photo).

Deaf, Blind, Mae Brown's Handshake Seeks Friendship In Job as Proofreader

By EDNA BLAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Mae Brown's handshake is a search for friendship. Both deaf and blind, her clasp lingers as she attempts to draw through her fingers what others are able to see and hear.

But the 24-year-old former Fort William girl has no time for self-pity.

She's too busy with a full-time job as a braille proofreader at the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

"As for the future," she says in a matter-of-fact way, "I plan to finish my high school by mail then enroll in university to qualify as a social worker."

Her conversation is sprinkled with witty remarks and occasionally she touches her companion's chin to find out if she is sharing the joke.

"It gives me a good feeling to make other people laugh."

Mae is one of the 300 deaf and blind people in Canada and one of seven who reside at Clarkewood on the CNIB's beautiful Bayview Avenue grounds in northeastern Toronto.

She describes her affinity for other deaf and blind people as about the same as the way a mother feels about her children. "If they don't help themselves I could give them a good kick," she says.

Mae's fair hair is cut short and curled softly around her face. She's as interested in clothes as other girls her age.

By the time she was 15 her eyesight had failed to the point where she had to quit school.

"But people wouldn't give me a chance—not even to do housework. Everywhere I went they asked if I had experience."

Finally she got a job with a family with eight children, including 13-month-old twins. She slept with one of the children who regularly scratched Mae's legs with her toenails.

". lasted eight days. Then I looked for a new job. When they asked if I was experienced I thought, 'Eight days with eight children—13 - month - old twins —scratches on my legs. I was experienced'."

By this time her hearing was getting poor and she came to Toronto where doctors discovered she had a brain tumor.

They have her no longer than a year to live without the operation and a thousand-to-one chance of surviving the operation.

"I trusted in God and God certainly pulled me through."

HEARING GONE TOO

Although she knew she would be without her sight she had not expected to lose her hearing.

"I remembered a verse that a minister's wife had read to me back in Fort William. It was the 54th Psalm, verse six: 'I will freely sacrifice unto Thee: I will praise thy name, O Lord: for it is good.' Then I understood the real purpose in my life. God had work for me —and only me — to fulfil."

That is why Mae is going to school, to help others who are deaf and blind.

When Mae attended and graduated from a Red Cross home nursing course recently she did so with the help of Marjorie Drew, a blind girl who does volunteer work with the deaf and blind at Clarkewood. Miss Drew has particularly befriended Mae and acts as her interpreter by tapping the conversation on Mae's hand using the two-hand manual alphabet.

Some day Mae would like to be a writer and her plans would include marriage "if it's God's wish."

W.I. Marks Anniversary By Banquet

The members of Moira W.I. held their February meeting in the form of a banquet in the Church Hall on Friday evening to celebrate the 15th anniversary.

The president, Bessie Holbert, opened the meeting and welcomed the guests. Mrs. Ken S. Thompson acted as secretary-treasurer, and read the minutes of the first meeting of 15 years ago, and the list of officers elected at that time.

One minute silence observed for the departed members.

Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, convener for agriculture, had charge of the program. Mrs. Elmer Thompson presided at the piano. Mrs. Nelson Welsh, first president, sang two solos, "Sunshine of Your Smile", and "Mansion Over the Hilltop" Mrs. Don Holbert, Mrs. W. Collins, Mrs. G. Thompson, Mrs. K. S. Thompson and Miss B. Holbert past presidents were all present.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Foster gave a musical number on the piano and harmonica, followed by a sing-song.

The project, the cemetery, was mentioned and Mr. Jim Vanderwater moved a vote of thanks to the caretaker, Mr. Clayton Vanderwater.

The first guest speaker was Mr. Russell Sills, vice-president of Federation of Agriculture who spoke on what they are trying to do for the farmers. The second guest speaker was Mr. Fred Elliott, from the Farmers Union, who spoke on why the Farmers Union was formed and what they were trying to do for the farmers, directly.

The third speaker was Mr. Roy Sills of the Hog Producers, who gave the 'ins' and 'outs' of what they are trying to do in the hog business.

The men present asked many questions of the speakers and each was fully explained. These speakers made a real contribution to an Agricultural program.

The proceeds amounted to $45 which was gratifying.

50 Couples Attend Legion Benefit Dance

DESERONTO — The benefit dance for the Legion, sponsored by the Deseronto firemen was not as well attended as had been hoped for. Some 50 couples were in attendance and it was noted that Legion members did not make up too great a part of the crowd. Those who did attend seemed to think that the dance was one of the most enjoyable held in Deseronto in many years. From the beginning until the last waltz, the dancers crowded the floor as soon as the music started. A "Paul Jones" early in the evening was such a success that there was a repeat after intermission. Few left until the dance closed.

The Ladies' Auxiliary handled the lunch counter and their stores of sandwiches and coffee were sold out early.

After the orchestra is paid and other expenses attended to the balance of the money received will be turned over to the Legion for their building fund.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

• • •

Mae F. — We have five youngsters, ranging in age from five to 13, including 10-year-old twins. I know that a certain amount of spatting is natural and inevitable, and I try not to get upset over the shrieks and other sound effects of internecine battle.

But I know that sooner or later I'll have to intervene to rescue Ronnie, our seven-year-old who never fights back and lets the others pummel him. And the baby will need some hugging because the twins have turned the lights off and played Dracula and Frankestein to frighten her.

I want my husband to help me teach them to get along together. It seems to me they're more pugilistic than other kids. They're not really disobedient . . . just warlike! Ernie thinks it's good for them to let off steam, and learn how to give and take a blow. But I think it can be harmful and leave scars.

• • •

Ernest F. — My wife is a gentle soul, a pacifist and a poet. A mere frown on a child's face distresses her, and a few tears melt her down to an embracing - loving kissing Mother, no matter how stern she tries to be.

I've tried to explain to her that this is how children are. It's normal for them to tease and bully and annoy each other. Peace and quiet are what grown-ups want. Not kids. They find ways to get a rise out of each other.

One reason Mae still gets upset by the mayhem is that she grew up practically alone. Her brother is 10 years older and by the time she might have tangled with him, he was either away at school or in the army. If she came from a home like mine, with a Donnybrook every day among us three boys, she'd know there's no real harm done — except perhaps to a parent's ear-drums.

• • •

The Council — "Every little movement has a meaning of its own," went a catchy song of 1909. If these parents could translate the tumbling and bickering, and distinguish what's puppy-play and what's a genuine S. O. S., Mae wouldn't be so apprehensive, nor would Ernest be so complacent.

Ernest's generalizations are dangerous. In addition to adults, there are some children who want "peace and quiet." That there's "no real harm done" by childish set-to's is open to question, years later, in counselling and psychotherapy sessions.

And just as Mae learned, undoubtedly, to interpret infant crying and to understand when it meant "I'm hungry" and when it said merely, "I feel like chatting," so she must try to tell when Ronnie, say, has "asked for it" and when he is being unfairly put upon. In other words, children's fighting reveals truths about children which can be acted upon.

One child, for example, may need more privacy in which to work on a fragile match-stick structure. Others may revel in slugfests, for which a "Battling Corner", complete with mat, might be set up. Sometimes a bored youngster may deliberately "start something," and after the flare-up, it's his boredom that must be investigated.

Here's a long-range idea. What would happen if children were taught elementary human psychology from kindergarten up? The F. children would be aware perhaps, of how Ronnie feels when he's needled. The twins might learn the cruelty of scaring a little one who is already shaky. It's strange how much our children are taught about the needs and behavior of the amoebo and dicotyledonous plants, and how little about themselves and their playmates.

Machine Makes Dog Food From Fresh Fish

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A $25,000 machine which manufactures dog flood from fresh fish is being tested in London this week, in preparation for shipment to Aklavik in the Mackenzie Delta.

A. W. Lantz, senior scientist on the engineer research board of the fisheries research board here, and designer of the machine, explained that the Eskimo trappers in Northern Canada lose a sizeable slice of their income through buying food for their huskies at prices of up to 25 cents a pound. Fish they can catch themselves free, but fish can only be kept frozen. If the weather thaws, the fish are lost.

Mr. Lantz said that the processer will cook the fish first under pressure to soften the bones, and then in a vacuum to boil off moisture. Next step is addition of ground corn or barley, and oil pressed from the fish is put in containers. The Eskimo brings his fish to the unit, has then processed, keeps the oil, which he will later use to mix with the dry feed. The entire outfit will be placed on a scow and floated about the area, under co-operate management, serving the 2,000 Eskimos in the area.

The machinery, assembled by Moore Air Equipment Limited, London has already attracted diverse interests. Mr. Lantz said various fishing interests and co-operatives from Lake Erie will visit the test plant today, and that he has received queries from Newfoundland and from the West Indies.

The Lake Erie fishermen, he said, will be interested in possible manufacture of dog and mink feed. But, he added, the product is a completely balanced diet, and would be quite palatable to human beings as well.

NOT SO FAST

The population of Western Europe is growing more slowly than that of any other major region in the world.

Wall Bracket Light Fixtures Again Popular

Wall bracket lighting fixtures are staging a strong comeback in luxury and middle-priced homes and in modernization projects.

Manufacturers are presenting numerous new designs from cone and bullet-type shades to lines of fluorescent tubes behind valance-type shields which wash the wall above and below with light.

Some dramatically accent the greenery of a planter or the colors and lines of a painting or other art object, in addition to providing an accent pool of light to give variety to the general decor.

Many are coordinated with ceiling fixtures to provide well balanced lighting throughout the area. Wall brackets are permanently attached to the wall, but many can be connected to a convenience outlet to avoid rewiring when they are installed as a part of a modernization plan.

A major reason for the growing popularity of wall brackets is the trend to avoid the clutter of too many tables and table lamps. Another reason is the variety of new designs to fit virtually any basic decorative plan.

Hardest Work on Farm Is Done by Electricity

Electricity has assumed major importance in the operation and mode of living on Canadian farms. To an ever-increasing degree it is contributing toward making farm work easier, faster and more profitable. Farm homes now have electric washing machines, clothes dryers and irons. The problem of food storage is solved by the services of a refrigerator and a home freezer, and when it's time for relaxation, there's radio or television.

The farmer can harness electricity to help milk his cows, feed and water stock, brood young chicks and pigs and grind feed. Adequate yard lighting is another electrical boon.

In efficient workshops electricity provides power for such tools as drills, lathes and grinders. Electric welders are fast becoming important maintenance units for emergency repairs in the farm workshop. Painting machinery and buildings is accomplished in shorter time through the means of a spray gun run by an electrically - operated air compressor; and machinery can be pressure-lubricated. Clean seed is essential in seeding operations on any farm. Electric motors can be a great help in cleaning grain before it is delivered to the elevator. This reduces dockage which is deducted from the gross delivery of the farmer's grain.

According to university tests, an electric pig brooder saves up to 1½ pigs per litter; use of a hay drier increases ton-value of hay $5 to $10; poultry house lighting and water warming can increase egg production 11 to 19 per cent; an increase of 5 to 10 percent in milk production is gained when an electric water system is used; a farmer can save up to 684 hours a year with an electric milking machine; an electric milk cooler handling four 10-gallon cans a day, saves from $4 to $5 monthly, by keeping down the bacteria count.

Hot Water In Abundance

The new, quick-recovery electric hot water heater is a truly dependable means of supplying the family's full range of hot water needs. Needing neither vent nor flue, the electric hot water heater is completely safe. The compact size of the new 40-gallon tank makes it more convenient to install precisely where you want it, near bathrooms, kitchens or laundries. This steady source of hot water can be safely tucked away in closets, handy to points of heavy use.

With the heating done inside the tank, your water storage is fully insulated. The water inside remains hot, thanks to high-speed heating elements, while the outer shell stays cool to the touch.

Quick - recovery tanks are available in attractive table-top models for open use in work areas where plenty of hot water is required. This fits in perfectly with the homemaker's trend towards spreading her laundry tasks throughout the week.

Rapidly Growing Trend To Electric Heating

Surveys show that home owners list cleanliness as their chief attraction for electric heating, by a 9-1 ratio. Present owners of this modern source of heat indicate that they are no longer faced with sooty smudges around hot air registers or behind unsightly radiators.

Drapes no longer have to be sent out to be cleaned so often in electrically - heated homes. Walls and woodwork don't have to be scrubbed as regularly as is required with conventional heat systems.

Non-ducted units are locally heated and controlled, with warmth being furnished through ceiling cable, glass panels, baseboards or wall insert elements.

Small units can be built into a wall or cabinet, some with fans and some without. Some owners prefer portable units that can be carried from room to room and plugged into any outlet.

New Type Freezers and Refrigerators

Today's new electric refrigerators and freezers offer a number of useful features to meet your modernization or replacement needs. Think of your food storage requirements, the size of your family and your weekly shopping routine when you scout the host of new models on the market.

Even a small family should consider an eleven to twelve cubic foot combination refrigerator - freezer, which will only require shopping a maximum of once a week for fresh frozen and less often for frozen foods.

You might want to include or leave room for the addition of an upright freezer in your kitchen plan, when modernizing. A chest-type freezer, of course, can be located in a utility room or basement.

Manufacturers have developed many convenience features for modern refrigerators. New door shelves add storage for eggs, cheese and butter in temperatur - controlled bins, within finger-tip reach.

LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY

Look what ONE CENT Buys ELECTRICALLY

People lament that money won't buy today what it purchased yesterday. That's not true of electricity! Based on average rates in a large metropolitan area in Canada one cent's worth of electricity will run the following appliances for the time stated:

● BLANKET	all night
● CLOCK	two weeks
● COFFEE MAKER	80 minutes
● FLOOR POLISHER	1½ hours
● IRON	¾ hour
● FRYING PAN	half an hour
● LAMP (100 watts)	7 hours
● RADIO (average)	9 hours
● REFRIGERATOR	17 hours
● SHAVER (at 5 min. per)	1½ years
● TELEVISION	3½ hours

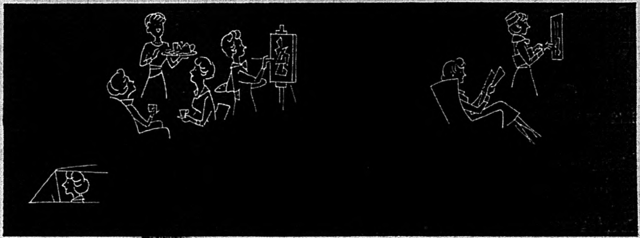
You'll Live better...



Work better...

with "Full Housepower"

In homes . . . in office buildings and plants . . . on the farm . . . electricity is constantly working for you, the user. But many places today are underwired for the ever-increasing demand being placed on electric appliances and machines. Now is the right time to have the wiring checked in your home or place of work, to ensure adequate wiring, with full housepower.

What does "full housepower" mean? Simply that there are sufficient circuits, outlets, switches and adequate wiring to handle the present and future load. It means that you can add major appliances or machines with safety and efficiency.

Your local, Power Company can tell you how to have your home, office, plant or farm checked for adequate wiring. You'll live better . . . work better . . . with adequate wiring and full housepower.

WHEN YOUR HOME IS WIRED FOR SAFETY, EFFICIENCY AND HOUSEPOWER, YOU LIVE BETTER ELECTRICALLY

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Curve balls, thunder, copper atoms and spring trouble coming.

CURVE BALL

A baseball pitched at moderate speed, spinning 30 revolutions a second, can move up to 1½ feet off course by the time it crosses the plate. A slow pitch curves more than a fast one, since it spends more time curving.

Experts say there is no scientific evidence for a sharp-breaking pitch—a baseball taking a sudden change of direction.

MEASURE AN ATOM

Copper atoms behave as if they were tiny round balls—so small it would take 99,500,000 of them lined up to make an inch.

How do physicists know? They use an electric plating device to measure the amount of charge it takes to deposit a certain amount of copper on an electrole.

Physicists say that, if you buy a pound of copper, you are buying 4,300,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 copper atoms.

ANATOMY OF THUNDER

Why does thunder rumble when heard from a distance?

The rumble is partially an echo of the original thunder clap, reflected back from a layer of ice, water and water vapor in the thundercloud itself, a researcher reports.

And what causes the thunder claps heard at short distances? The branching of a lightning bolt. Each point of the branch produces a single explosion heard as a thunderclap.

BAD NEWS

Somehow the severe frost seems to add extra zip to the germination of crab grass seeds, report horticulturists for the Dow Chemical Company. Crab grass dies every fall, but leaves an enormous crop of seeds to sprout in the spring. And the seeds also benefit from the frost break-up of the soil and the added moisture from heavy snows. Crab grass killers prevent new seeds from germinating.

Tweed

TWEED — At the first meeting for 1961 Mr. Cartha Cassidy was re-elected for the 12th term as chairman of Tweed Public Utilities Commission. During that time, Mr. Cassidy has been a conscientious public servant.

William S. (Bill) McCrae was re-elected for his third term as president of Tweed Agricultural Society at the annual meeting. President McCrae reported that the organization is looking forward to another fine year.

Mrs. Tommy Town of White, B.C., has returned to her home after visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Scott for the past week. Mrs. Albert Farrar was also a guest at the Scott home for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James Goldie and Susan and Mr. and Mrs. David Goldie, all of Peterborough, were recent visitors with Mr. and Mrs. John Sager.

Miss Gayle Erwin, seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graydon Erwin, of Tweed, is a patient in Kingston General Hospital where she underwent surgery on her leg last week.

Mrs. Harold Varty is a patient in Belleville Geenral Hospital where she underwent an operation last week. Her condition is as well as can be expected.

Mr. John Varty, who is on the staff of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is visiting at his home for three weeks.

Word was received in Tweed on Tuesday that Mr. I. Henderson of Stoco had passed away at the Belleville General Hospital following a stroke suffered a week ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Moon of Corbyville were weekend visitors at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Moon, Tweed.

The many friends and relatives were saddened to hear of the sudden passing of Mr. Clarence Jeffrey of Napanee, early Saturday morning, at the age of 54.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. McCrea and Mr. and Mrs. William McCrae and two girls were Sunday visitors with the former's daughter, (Joan), Mrs. G. Gilmour, Mr. Gilmour and young son, Timmy, Frankford.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Foster of Chapman's quietly marked their 61st wedding anniversary on Tuesday, January 31. Mrs. Foster likes the indoors during the winter months, but her husband is often seen in Tweed doing the shopping.

HELICOPTER CRASHES

THOMPSONVILLE, Conn. (AP)—A helicopter attached to the Salem, Mass., coast guard base plunged 200 feet into a six-foot snowdrift in a field Wednesday. The two occupants escaped injury. The helicopter was extensively damaged.

Topple Liberals By Kidnapping Three Members

OTTAWA (CP) — The University of Ottawa's model parliament moved into the hands of a coalition government Wednesday as the result of a "kidnapping" which toppled the Liberals.

In recent student voting the Liberals won 16 of the 30 seats, the New Party 11 and the Conservatives three.

But when the four-day session opened Tuesday night three Liberal members were "missing" and the ruling party lost a non-confidence vote to a Conservative-New Party coalition 14-to-13.

The story of the "missing" members came out Wednesday. They were tricked into attending a fake afternoon press conference at Almonte, 30 miles out of Ottawa, where they were wined graciously by supporters of the coalition.

When the 5½-hour press conference ended the three Liberals learned there were no cars available to return them to Ottawa. By the time they had hitched a ride back the Liberal government had fallen.

RECEIVED BY POPE

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John Wednesday received in private audience James Charles Cardinal McGuigan of Toronto. The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano reported the audience without giving details.

Ottawa Valley Water Shortage Relief Unlikely

OTTAWA — Prospects of early spring relief from a water shortage that has plagued Ottawa Valley farmers much of the winter are not promising, according to G.W. Robertson, agrometeorologist at the Canada Departmnt of Agriculture's Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

An unusual combination of summer drought, low autumn rainfall and an early winter freeze-up, he said, has caused many farm wells to run dry. His records indicate that it is the first time in 70 years that such a combination of conditions has occurred.

Mr. Robertson pointed out that last summer 11 inches more water was evaporated or used by plants than was supplied by rainfall. As a result soil moisture was used by September 1 and fall crops expanded the autumn rainfall.

Rainfall from September to December was approximately seven inches, one inch less than the long-term average for the period. Of this, four inches evaporated and the remaining three inches were insufficient to replace moisture in the root zones of many crops.

During the fall, he said, frost penetrated to a depth of 15 inches on open fields before the first fall of snow blanketed the valley. The frost level by mid-January stood at 12 inches in open fields under nine inches of snow.

It is not the first time that dry seasons or deep frost has hit valley farmers, Mr. Robertson said. Extremely dry seasons occurred in 1953 and 1955, but fall or early winter rains prevented water shortages.

Sixteen inches of frost — a record for the month — was recorded at the Central Experimental Farm in December 1957. But again warm rains thawed the frost, eliminating any danger of a water shortage.

Present conditions in the valley indicate that the snow melt, when it comes, will not penetrate the frozen ground. The runoff may, therefore, be greater than usual, leaving the wells still dry or unable to supply enough water for farm and domestic use.

Sunday School Lesson

Let's Stick to the Facts

By ROY L. SMITH

> The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 12: "The Light of the World," John 7 through 9.

It is very unfortunate if we allow ourselves to wander off into idle speculation when we get into the field of religion. Nothing is less profitable. The facts of faith are productive of so much hope, assurance, and strength that we will be well repaid if we stick to them.

Such questions as what heaven is to be like, how long the body lies in the tomb before the spirit rises in the resurrection, and what kind of bodies we will have in the next life—all these are interesting, perhaps, but they have no relationship whatever to the practical decisions that must be made in this life. And all of them can wait until we have had some personal experience with death in order that they may be accurately evaluated and understood.

There are at least some few matters of vast importance about which we have enough understanding that we are able to make wise decisions and make correct progress. The sense of personal guilt, the facts of tensions and inner conflicts, the value of peace of mind and the curative power of faith—these are facts with which all of us have had some experience. And happy is the religious man who treats such matters with respect and understanding, for he shall come to a satisfying experience. And this is what can be called true success in life.

THE WISE IGNORANT MAN

It would be interesting to have even a few more facts about the personal life of the blind man in today's lesson, but even though we do not even know his name, we know enough about him to know that, basically, he was more than an ordinarily wise man.

Among other things, he stuck to the things he knew. When the priests and the theologians of the temple undertook to lead him off into bewildering bypaths, he insisted that they keep to the main stream of the argument. He did not venture opinions in a field of which he was ignorant. Instead, he insisted upon keeping the argument centred on the things he knew. He might know little about the Jewish law, but on one subject he was a world authority. He did not attempt to pass judgment on the question of whether or not Jesus was a sinner. But no one on earth could convince him that he was still blind, for he could see. Taking up his position behind that single and simple fact, he could not be moved. His defence was impregnable.

In our study of comparative Christianity we are apt to lose sight of the central fact of our Christian faith. Every one of the great world religions teaches the central virtues. But Christianity stands alone in its assertion that, under certain circumstances and conditions, the holy Spirit of the Divine will take up a residence within the consciousness of the individual, providing him with wisdom, power, and a sense of security.

The psychologists may say that it is all a psychic reaction, but some of us know the experience. Some of us have found light falling on our way; unexpected wisdom has been given us in the midst of cries, enabling us to make decisions that eventuated in victory; strength far beyond our accustomed powers has been added to our efforts which has been sufficient to turn the tide at critical moments.

The philosophers may try to explain the strong tides that well up in us, and their explanations are interesting. They are not, however, the strength. They are only the evidences of the strength.

Let's stick to the thing we know. We were blind, dull, stupid and weak. But we won out, with the help of God. On that we are world auhorities. And we never need retreat from that position.

Twp. Council Agrees to Cut Reeve's Pay

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London Township council Wednesday night accepted a suggestion by Reeve William Goddard that his $4,500-a-year salary be reduced to $10 a meeting, the same as paid to councillors.

The reeve said councillors have as much work to do as he does, and he felt $4,500 was too much.

Judge Bans Picture-Taking Of Vosburgh, Charged With Murder, Until Trial Ends

In an interview, Mr. Justice Cliche said that any pictures taken of Vosburgh anywhere in the Sweetsburgh court building from now until his trial is over will amount to contempt of court.

The veteran judge said he wants to see the spirit of British justice and fair play return to the case. He said he will deliberately delay his decision on a defence - sought change of venue for the trial until "passions have calmed and obvious mental contagion has had a cooling-off period."

WILL DELAY

His decision on the application Monday for a change of venue likely will be delayed "for months, because I believe the interests of justice will be best served that way."

Vosburgh is charged with the murder of his wife and 11 of his 15 children, whose charred remains were found after their shanty home at Noyan had been destroyed by fire Dec. 9. Vosburgh was the only one in the house to survive.

The judge said he was issuing his warning about pictures because "certain publicity and pictures" have overwhelmed the basic fact that an accused is innocent until proven guilty.

He said he referred particularly to a picture in Montreal La Presse showing Vosburgh behind bars in the jail that is part of the Sweetburg court building. The judge said he suspected that the picture was a fake—with bars super - imposed on Vosburgh after a photo had been taken of him in a corridor the courtroom or elsewhere.

SAYS AUTHENTIC

In a front-page statement in La Presse Thursday, the newspaper's staff photographer Jean-Yves Letourneau states "on my professional honor" that the photo of Vosburgh behind bars was authentic. Letourneau says the photo was taken at the Sweetsburg prisin following Vosburgh's preliminary hearing Feb. 3.

"Whether the picture is genuine or not isn't the real issue," Mr. Justice Cliche said. "The fact is that in the public mind a man behind bars is a condemned man. This is against our form of justice. I now advise the press and all other news agencies to be prudent in their treatment of this case. I will hold in contempt any picture-taking of the accused before his trial is ended."

Gaglardi Says Effort Made to Discredit Him

VICTORIA, B.C. (CP)—B.C. Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi thundered back at his critics in the British Columbia legislature Thursday. He hurled what amounted to an accusation that a Liberal member had made attempts, backed up by money, to discredit him.

Looking directly at J. Gordon Gibson of North Vancouver, Mr. Gaglardi asked:

"Who is behind the approaches that have been made to certain individuals in the province of British Columbia—of offers of $10,000, of $50,000—if they would make any statement that would incriminate the minister of highways?"

A capacity crowd of 200—another 600 had to be turned away—packed the public gallery, attracted by Mr. Gaglardi's promise to tell all the facts.

It was by far the stormiest session among the seven provincial legislatures sitting Thursday.

read in Charlottetown opened

Mr. Gaglardi reviewed the circumstances that led to his recent conviction for contempt of court. While he accepted his responsibility as minister, he said his deputy minister and comptroller, on advice from the attorney-general's department, had taken the actions for which he was cited.

He had not read or seen the court order involved until he was charged with contempt. He expressed personal doubts as to whether he will be able to continue to sit in the House—a question raised frequently since he was fined $1,000 for disobeying a court order in paying out department funds to a contractor.

He spoke of threats to himself and his political life, of abuse to his family and intimidation attempts.

YUKON GROWING

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Rt. Rev. Tom Greenwood, Bishop of the Yukon, Thursday night described the Yukon as "one of the fastest - growing areas of Canada." Bishop Greenwood said the Alaska Highway, the DEW line and recent government policies are encouraging the greatest settlement since the gold rush in 1898, and settlement on a much more permanent basis.

Tito Trying to Win Friends In Uncommitted Countries

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Marshal Tito's forthcoming state visit to Africa is in line with Yugoslavia's efforts to win friends among the uncommitted countries.

As a country that specializes in "communism with a difference," Tito's rugged republic has to tread a cautious path between orthodox Communist countries, which criticize its deviationist tendencies, and a Western world which still isn't sure how much trust can be reposed in the new Yugoslavia.

Thus, not feeling completely at home in either camp, Yugoslavia has been cultivating the smaller independent countries of Africa and Asia.

In the last few years, Tito's treasury has expended more than $100,000,000 in loans and credits to countries such as India, Indonesia, Ceylon, Ethiopia, Sudan and the United Arab Republic. Some Yugoslav technicians have been sent to underdeveloped nations and some students have come from Africa and Asia to train in Yugoslavia.

It seems almost certain that Tito, unquestionably one of the great leaders of the age, will help to consolidate Yugoslavia's growing reputation in Africa.

Tito is 68 and slightly withdrawn from state affairs, but he seems to retain much of the vigor that enabled him to lead the Germans a merry dance during the strenuous days of the Second World War.

Though his apparent unwillingness to grant interviews has tended to keep his name out of day - to-day news, he always makes an outstanding impression in personal contacts. Sir Fitzroy Maclean, in his book Eastern Approaches, writes with evident affection of the partisan leader at whose side he often served.

BRITON PRAISES

Throughout Maclean stresses Tito's independence of mind, unexpected in a man long trained in communism, and his complete lack of servility. The author adds:

"There were many unexpected things about Tito; his surprisingly broad outlook; his never-failing sense of humor; his unashamed delight in the minor pleasures of life; a natural diffidence in human relationships, giving way to a natural friendliness; a violent temper, flaring up in sudden rages; a considerateness and a generosity constantly manifesting themselves in a dozen small ways; a surprising readiness to see two sides of a question."

That was Tito as Maclean, a British liaison officer, knew him in the harassing days of war. In peacetime, with Yugoslavia's independence painfully but surely established and a brighter economic future beckoning, the handsome and personable peasant's son from Croatia will surely win equal acclaim in Africa.

Inquest Jury Criticizes Gas Company

SUDBURY (CP)—An inquest jury Thursday night criticized Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company for "apparent loose operating practices" in connection with a fatal gas explosion Jan. 7.

The jury held the company "and other companies employed by them" responsible for failure to see that good installation practices were observed.

It ruled that Mary O'Connor, 47, died as the result of an explosion and fire in three-storey brick home in Fir Lane. The house had no gas connection.

Leaking gas from a separated service connection of Northern Natural Gas located under the street near the front of the O'Connor home seeped through soil and a defect in the foundation wall.

The connection had not been made "according to good engineering practice" and proper installation was important in an area subject to soil movement by frost. It found the connection failure was caused by frost.

Plumbing and heating contractors J. W. Bell said he detected natural gas near the house Jan. 6 and reported it to the company but was unable to speak to the chief of operations. He left a message and was assured of immediate attention.

The jury recommended the gas company be "severely criticized for the apparent loose operating practices as indicated in this case; that final inspection of all gas mains, laterals and services be made by qualified personnel working under the authority of the provincial government, who shall issue a certificate of approval for each installation."

Two gas company employees invoked protection of the Canada Evidence Act so their testimony could not be used against them.

Pierrette Geoffroy said she received the call from Mr. Bell and immediately notified a serviceman in the area by radio.

Christopher Lucy, a utility man, said he checked the three natural gas meters in the area but detected no leaks. He said he carried no gas detector because he would have been able to smell the gas before it registered on a detector.

Raymond H. Ronald, Sudbury district inspector for the Ontario department of energy resources, said he found the service pipe pulled away from a rubber washer which sealed the connection.

Stan Marcotte, foreman for the natural gas division of Pioneer Construction which installs all gas mains for Northern Ontario Natural Gas in Sudbury, said the installation was adeviation from the usual practice. But, he said, each installation was tested and inspected by an engineer for the gas company.

U.S. Takes Issue With U.K. On Seating China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States took sharp issue Thursday with a British declaration that Communist China should be given membership in the United Nations.

The open disagreement between the two allies on this question raised the possibility that their co-operation of many years to avoid a UN showdown on the problem of admitting Red China to the UN may now be coming to an end.

There was some suspicion in diplomatic quarters here that British Foreign Secretary Lord Home had made the declaration in an effort to manoeuvre President Kennedy's administration toward a different policy on Red China. Washington's reaction was designed to block any such manoeuvre.

Lord Home told the House of Lords Wednesday that "the facts of international life require that Communist China should be seated in the United Nations" — even though Red China has smothered Tibet, resisted conciliation efforts and proclaimed its belief in war.

Asked about this statement Thursday, state department press officer Lincoln White first said: "I would like to make clear that the views expressed by Lord Home are not the result of any consultation between our two governments."

He then reaffirmed U.S. opposition to seating the Communist Chinese in the UN.

U.S. Assures Canada It Will Not Attempt to Seize Markets In Program for Latin America

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States has assured Canada it will not attempt to sieze traditional Canadian markets in undertaking a new food - for-peace program in Latin America.

The assurance was given through George McGovern, U.S. food-for-peace director, in private talks with Canadian Ambassador Arnold Heeney last week. McGovern informed a press conference Thursday that the talks had taken place and that Heeney seemed satisfied with the American pledge.

Canadian informants expressed satisfaction the close cooperation that existed between Canadian and American authorities under the previous Eisenhower administration will be continued and perhaps brought closer under the new government of President Kennedy.

McGovern, who leaves for food talks in Argentina and Brazil Monday, told reporters: "In everything we do, we want to give attention to the export interests of friendly countries."

Both Canada and the U.S. have big grain surpluses. The Canadian concern is that the U.S. may use give-away programs to rid itself of surpluses in areas where normally Canada might be in a competitive position to sell grain commercially.

WILL MAKE STUDY

Kennedy has ordered McGovern, accompanied by special White House assistant Arthur Schlesinger, to make an on-the-spot investigation in Latin America of how American surpluses could be put to better use. McGovern is to report back by March 15.

While McGovern and Schlesinger are in Argentina and Brazil, an American technical mission, headed by James Symington, son of Missouri Senator Stuart Symington, will visit other Latin American countries to determine their food needs.

Argentina is the biggest exporter and Brazil the biggest importer of food in Latin America. Argentina exports a lot of wheat. Brazil at one time was a market for Canadian grain but most of this market now is shared by Argentina and the U.S.

Asked whether the U.S. would supply surpluses to Red China, McGovern said China has not asked for help and that the Chinese are buying grain from Canada. Red China is reported to have suffered a serious crop failure.

UNVEIL PORTRAIT

TORONTO (CP)—Rev. A. W. Downer, Progressive Conservative member for Dufferin Simcoe and Speaker of the Ontario legislature, had his portrait added to those of his predecessors Thursday. Premier Frost, Liberal Leader Wintermeyer, CCF Leader MacDonald and other members of the assembly paid tribute to Mr. Downer at the unveiling of a portrait in the Speaker's office.

Creditors Find Assets Consist Mainly of Cats

The cats cost £17 ($47.60) a week to feed, which is just about what Miss Coton earns playing the piano in various Brighton bars.

Miss Coton, 46, has debts totalling £5,022.

This unpromising state of affairs came to light at a meeting of creditors at the office of the Official Receiver in bankruptcy here. The receiver said Miss Coton was ordered some months ago to sell her cats and apply the proceeds to her debts. The best offer she received was £250 from an animal rescue centre.

Miss Coton regarded this as an insulting reflection of the quality of her beloved pets. Anyway, it would have done little to get her out of hock. She therefore filed a petition to be adjudged bankrupt.

The receiver said Miss Coton appeared to be thoroughly bankrupt. In addition to the cats, about all she could call her own was an interest in a Brighton restaurant valued at £99.

Her principal creditor is G. C. L. Walsh, a theatrical impresario. He said he advanced Miss Coton £1,545 to write the music for a revue and said he is still waiting for it. Walsh added that he would prefer to be paid in sterling rather than cats.

The receiver appointed a trustee to see what can be done about turning the cats into money, or something.

Hog Producers Told to Start Market Scheme

BRODHAGEN, Ont. (CP)—Dr. David Monieson, professor of marketing at Pennsylvania University, warned Perth County Hog Producers Association Thursday against procrastination in setting up the proposed farmers meat packing organization.

He said back-biting and gossip, instead of a concerted and immediate effort to secure 20 per cent of the market, could be disastrous.

Perth county Warden Howard Lowe, a beef farmer, told the hog men he hopes they get a marketing scheme "that can't be kicked around every time some new cabinet minister takes over."

Jobless Picture Causes Kennedy To Act Quickly

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fresh reports of mounting unemployment in big cities Thursday prompted President Kennedy to order a series of on-the-spot inspections of conditions on the hard-hit areas.

The labor department added 48 areas to its list of communities having substantial labor surplus—or an idle rate exceeding six per cent. More than half the major industrial areas in the U.S., or 76 out of 150, now are so classified.

Kennedy directed Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg to make a series of tours into the trouble spots.

Goldberg will be at Chicago, Gary and South Bend, Ind., and Lansing, Mich., today, Detroit and Columbus, Ohio, Saturday, and Pittsburgh Sunday.

INCLUDES BIGGEST

Some of the biggest cities are among the 25 major labor market areas newly-added to the depressed list. They include Philadelphia, Cleveland, Baltimore, Los Angeles, Kansas City and St. Louis.

New York and Chicago remain unchanged from two months ago at three to six per cent unemployed, while Detroit rose to an idle rate of nearly 12 per cent.

Goldberg's initial fact-finding mission will arm the administration with data to present to Congress in support of Kennedy's $1,200,000,000 emergency plan to aid the long-term unemployed and children of idle workers.

A January job report shows over-all unemployment in that month was 5,385,000 with 1,339,000 idle 15 weeks or longer. The report also showed 1,687,000 normally full - time workers employed only part-time.

Employment in January was 64,452,000, a record for the month.

Meat Packers' Council Urges Farm Policy

TORONTO (CP)—A national farm policy to help lift the country out of recession was urged Thursday at the annual meeting of the Meat Packers' Council of Canada.

Prof. D. Ralph Campbell, head of the department of agricultural economics at the Ontario Agricultural College, said the policy should be contained in an over-all economic expansion program.

Prof. Campbell said the problems of agriculture should be dealt with by the federal government on a nation-wide basis.

He called for elimination of the Canadian dollar premium.

Prof. Campbell labelled as disastrous suggestions that Canada's wheat production be reduced and livestock and poultry production stepped up to fill the gap.

He said such a replacement program could lead only to livestock and poultry surpluses more serious than the present wheat surplus problems.

Metro Did Not Get Financial Aid in Ottawa

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto has been told the federal government will not extend provisions of the National Housing Act to help finance Metro's second subway, it was learned Thursday night.

A member of a Metro delegation which met the cabinet Wednesday said the delegation was told any loan to help speed construction of the Bloor Street subway would have to be studied on another basis.

Metro Chairman Frederick Gardiner, who led the executive committee delegation, said Thursday night the federal government promised to give immediate consideration to Metro's request for $58,000,000. The four-man delegation was confident federal assistant could be obtained.

The delegation argued a loan under the National Housing Act would provide an additional 2,000 jobs and allow for completion of the subway in seven instead of 10 years.

Queen's University Research Team Suggests Eating Less Fat to Prevent Heart Disease

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Queen's University research team suggests Canadians should consider eating less animal fat as one precaution against heart disease.

While admitting that more investigation is necessary to determine the exact relationship of animal fat consumption and heart ailments, the research specialists say:

"In the light of all the available information it would seem worthwhile to reassess our lavish dependency for so much of our caloric intake upon the consumption of high - cholesterol foods such as eggs, dairy and other animal fats.

"A minimal recommendation should surely be a lesser use of high-fat, high-cholesterol foods of animal origin and a greater use of foods derived from the plant kingdom."

Scientists here and elsewhere have found that animal fats form cholesterol in the blood stream. A yellowish waxy substance that is chemically crystalline alcohol cholesterol is believed by some to block arteries and lead to heart attacks.

Studies of the role of blood cholesterol in the development of atherosclerosis — hardening and thickening of the walls of arteries — and coronary thrombosis—clotting in the heart arteries—have been going on for years in North America.

"Until further research has clarified these problems it is obviously inadvisable to make more specific dietary recommendations for the general population," the research report says.

Studies with a group of Queen's students showed that dietary cholesterol does in fact affect the blood levels in man. However, there appeared to be an effective control mechanism that operates in normal young subjects to prevent high concentration of this substance, even when large amounts are eaten.

Two of the subjects studied were diabetics. The increase in blood cholesterol level for one was three times the average of th remainder of the group and for the other it was five times the average.

"It may be that such subjects have lost the normal degree of control over blood cholesterol levels just as they have lost the capacity to regulate normally their blood sugar levels," says a researcher. "It is pertinent to add that diabetics are highly susceptible to the development of coronary atherosclerosis."

It was noted that during the war when animal fat consumption in Europe was sharply curbed, there was a significant drop in the death rate from atherosclerosis.

"It must be emphasized," says Dr. J. M. R. Beveridge, professor of biochemistry at Queen's, "that these studies of themselves do not by any means prove the existence of a casual relationship between intake of dietary fat and mortality due to coronary heart disease.

"These investigations simply indicate that the possibility of such a relationship exists. However, a number of other points of evidence do lend weight to the possibility that the relationship between dietary fat, high levels of blood cholesterol and fact, casual."

Captain Says He Was Put "Over a Barrel" by Union

OTTAWA (CP)—Tug Captain William Wharton of Burlington told the Canada Labor Relations Board Thursday he was "over a barrel" and still sore from a beating when he signed a contract with the Seafarers' International Union last August at Norfolk, Va.

American union officials signed on behalf of the SIU's Canadian section, headed by Hal C. Banks of Montreal, the board indicated.

The union, booted out of the Canadian Labor Congress last year, decided at the last moment not to contest the case. The board took under consideration the application by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC)—rival of the SIU—to represent the crew of the ocean tug Melanie Fair owned by Capt. Wharton.

The captain, 38, a former Royal Navy man, said his crew preferred the brotherhood and talks had started at Hamilton with the all-Canadian union before he finally had to capitulate to the SIU.

It was a case, he said, of signing up or being unable to get out of Norfolk harbor towing the refloated tanker African Queen. He said another tug was required and because of SIU influence none would help him.

SUGGESTS SIU PROBE

Maurice Wright, counsel for the brotherhood, said the government or the board should launch a complete investigation of SIU activity within Canada to protect the rights of Canadians.

Capt. Wharton testified that SIU members converged on the tug all the way through the St. Lawrence Seaway. It was "unpleasant but with no actual violence."

Arriving at Norfolk Aug. 2, the tug was met by an SIU motor launch which tied up astern. SIU pickets appeared and union officials warned the captain, he said, that no tugs would help him get out as required by the U.S. Coast Guard.

The night of Aug. 3 he was going back to his tug when he spotted three men.

STRUCK WITH A BAT

"One hit me with what appeared to be a baseball bat"—he pointed to his left shoulder.

"I wasn't knocked out but I fell down. Then one or two started to kick me."

He had not advised police since he didn't recognize any of the assailants. He was not robbed and was satisfied in his own mind that the attack tied in with his SIU troubles.

The next morning he signed with the SIU.

Suggests Huge Colombo Plan to Solve Problem

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial and federal governments should do what they can, but the unemployment problem can be solved only on a world - wide basis, Allan Grossman, minister without portfolio, said Thursday night.

Speaking in the throne speech debate, he suggested establishment of a huge Colombo plan to provide full employment by producing food and manufactured products and giving them to impoverished countries.

"I would say we should do this even if the citizens of the participant countries must gradually lower their standard of living as they do during a war, until the have - not countries catch up a bit," said Mr. Grossman.

He told the legislature the idea was somewhat idealistic but it was the only way to achieve full employment.

He said if Canada attempts to protect all its industry from foreign competition through the medium of tariffs or quotas, the people of other countries are thrown out of work.

The end was trade wars, hunger, revolution, communism or fascism.

He said in his Colombo plan every country would participate, giving what it could afford to give without damaging its economy.

FIGURET

J.A.H. HUNTER

His sisters watched as Ken counted the little hoard of pennies he'd tipped from the old can. "We helped you find them," Molly reminded him.

The boy grinned. "It's not much," he declared, slipping some of the coins into his pocket. "I've taken a third, so you take a third of what I left and then Pam take a third of the rest."

The girls complied without demur, but some coins still remained. "Let's share these evenly," said Pam, dividing them into three equal lots. Ken nodded. "Okay," he told her, arranging each lot into a neat little square. "You're lucky you got any at all."

Maybe she was! So what was the least amount the old can could have contained?

Dry Weather Will Affect Duck Crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Thursday if dry weather conditions continue in major nesting areas, the 1961 wild duck crop will be seriously affected.

"Unless there are unusual snows and above-normal rains in the prairie regions in the northern United States and southern Canada between now and the middle of May, North America's waterfowl resources will be in the most precarious position in the past three decades," the interior department reported.

Officials of the bureau of sport fisheries and wildlife said up to 55 per cent of the annual continental waterfowl crop comes from this area.

The department said Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are all regarded as dry, but the main moisture deficiency is in Saskatchewan.

Soo Whips Kingston 6-4, Hull Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds and Knigston Frontenacs staged a mass brawl that sent seven men to the penalty boxes Thursday night, including a player who wasn't on the ice at the time. Total penalties for the game added up to 60 minutes.

Sault's Fred Hilts scored three goals to run his season's total to 32 and lead the Thunderbirds to a 6-4 victory.

The win fattened Sault Ste. Marie's margin in the Eastern Professional Hockey League to three points over Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers, who lost 5-1 to Hull-Ottawa Canadiens.

The Canadiens have 72 points against 56 for the T-Birds.

SHUTOUT RUINED

Cliff Pennington and Bobby Rousseau scored a pair each and defenceman Al MacNeil got the other for the Habs. Dave Balon ruined Ed Johnston's bid for his 10th shutout.

Ed Kachur, Hilts' linemate, served up two goals for the Sault. Cliff Schmautz scored the other. Bob Attersley, Lorne Ferguson, Stan Maxwell and George Gosselin scored for the visitors.

Barry Ashbee, Dick Meissner and Floyd Hillman of the Frontenacs and Matt Ravlich, Rino Robazza and Kachur of the Thunderbirds drew majors for the big scrap. Jim Farelli of the Sault received a misconduct penalty for hitting a Kingston player from the bench.

It was a bad night all around for Meissner. He hit the goal post three times.

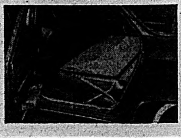
THE 4 DOOR MONZA!

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE

Here's where you get the real feel of this new Monza. And within half a block you know exactly why Corvair is the finest handling, most roadable car in its class.

Just slip into this new 4-Door Monza and you'll find you're travelling in style with deep-twist carpeting and sporty, comfortable bucket seats. (Optional at extra cost.)



Here's the kind of room that means so much on a long trip. Or, if it's cargo you want to carry, the Monza's fold-down rear seat more than doubles luggage capacity in an instant!

If you're this kind of person—
This is your kind of car!!

You may be any age — but you've never grown old! You've never said "no" to change — never accepted the "second best" or the "almost as good". Most of all you respect craftsmanship — and enjoy owning a car that offers more than mere transportation. If needs be, you'll wait until your car comes along.

Now it has! It's the new 4-Door Corvair MONZA! Even the name holds the promise of automotive excitement! . . . the thrill and enjoyment of a car that has had special attention in its making — experienced craftsmanship in its molding. Monza has! And you know it from the moment you sit within its luxury interior — from the first time you take the family for a drive and realize that this wedding of a sports car and a practical family car has indeed been thoroughly successful. Just how successful? See for yourself with a test-drive from your Chevrolet dealer's.

Whitewall tires optional at extra cost.

GIFFORD RETIRES

The Giants said Gifford, who holds numerous offensive records with the club, has notified them he plans to join a CBS radio affiliate here Feb. 27.

Gifford played nine full seasons with the Giants. He scored the most touchdowns of any Giant, 59; the most points, 370; was first in rushing yardage, 3,675, and in passes caught, 256.

May Fine Three Teams

WINNIPEG (CP) — Commissioner Sydney Halter told the Canadian Football League annual meeting Thursday that three teams are "under consideration for disciplinary action."

He said the fines could be as much as $2,000 if the teams are found guilty of violating CFL waiver rules. But with his recommendation to the executive, the league may fine as much as $10,000.

Players waived were: Quarterback Randy Duncan, B.C. Lions; Bill Hudson, Montreal Alouettes; and Larry Hayes, Ottawa Rough Riders.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Isn't it about time Canadians in general and some of the press in particular stopped wringing their hands and mushrooming the headlines over the squawks of European journalists about the sometimes "raw and brutal" play of Canadian world tournament hockey representatives?

Canadian hockey teams in Europe are "copy" with a 64-point "C" for the gentlemen of the continental press. They surge around the hotels where the Canadians are quartered. They haunt the Canadian dressing rooms in little hordes. Like hungry wolves on the trail of a rabbit they search out "incidents."

An English-speaking European journalist—and they are few—is the envy of his typewriter mates. That is probably why a half-dozen newspapers have as many different versions of "incidents." The text is confused in the translation.

Every Canadian team that goes overseas to compete in world tournaments gets the same journalistic treatment. Sometimes the countries vary. In 1959 the Belleville McFarlands' most bitter press critics were the Finnish dailies, weeklies and semi-monthlies. The Germans ran a close second.

It all depends on what team comes in over the blueline, hooking, slashing and with heads down. The Warwicks of the Penticton V's, who first introduced the mayhemic type of body-checking to international rules got the full treatment—and thereby set the standard.

The Kitchener Dutchmen, the Whitby Dunlops and the McFarlands all came in for their share of the screaming headlines that likened the Canadians to gangsters and western hoodlums.

The current Trail Smoke Eaters did not take to the puck-wise Swedish punch and after blaming Swedish high sticks for their initial defeat, lifted their own war-clubs and swung them in convincing fashion.

The Smoke-Eaters' management and the CAHA representatives accompanying the club on the junket are up in arms over the press treatment given by the Swedish journals. Why, we cannot see. It has happened before—and will happen again.

There is nothing to get overly hot and bothered about. The Russian, and Czech teams, who will come up with the toughest opposition, are probably reading the dressed up indignation stories coming out of the land of the smorgasbord with tongue-in cheek.

The McFarlands ended their 19-game pre-exhibition tour in an aura of press condemnation, but were hailed with open arms when they entered Czechoslovakia for the tournament high jinks.

In Bratislava where they played the tournament qualifying round they received hard-hitting criticism of the tourney press, but before the series on the banks of the Danube was completed they were the most popular team in the border city.

They clobbered the home country boys aplenty in that first 7-2 victory, but later when they were showing no favorites in their dispensation of body checks, the inksters in the press gallery were less fiery in their criticisms.

And I'm surprised at the statement of CAHA president Jack Roxburgh after the Czech referees had stated "The Canadians are wonderful skaters, but their play is raw and at times brutal." Said he: "I can assure you that the kind of play that took place between Canada and Sweden (which Trail won 4-0 after the Swedes had defeated them) will not be repeated because we want this Canadian team to leave the best impression in Europe."

What was Roxy trying to do? Admit the Smokies played like "gangsters" and apologizing, or was he just trying to placate the irate Svenska journalists.

I prefer the retort made by the McFarland assistant coach, Billy Reay, mentioned in this column a few days ago. When the president of the German branch of the International Ice Hockey Federation blasted the Canadian style of play at a banquet given the Macs, Reay didn't say it "wouldn't happen again."

Mayhap Billy lacked the Roxburgh diplomacy but he came to the point. "Tell him," he told an interpreter, "to tell his hockey club and his referees that we don't stand for wide-open hooking and slashing."

And to reporters, "Who the hell do these guys think they are, telling US how to play hockey."

ROBINSON ARRESTED

CINCINNATI (AP)—Frankie Robinson, 25, star outfielder-first baseman of Cincinnati Reds of the National League, was taken into custody Thursday on suspicion of carrying a concealed weapon. The arresting officer reported that Robinson's arrest followed a disturbance in a restaurant.

DIMAGGIO RETURNS

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe DiMaggio, retired outfield great, will rejoin New York Yankees March 9 for two weeks of spring training at St. Petersburg, Fla., working with manager Ralph Houk and batting coach Wally Moses in assisting the players. DiMaggio, 46, is taking a baseball vacation from his job with a manufacturers' representative to rejoin his old club.

Harvey-Habs Win, Wings Whip Blues

Blast Bruins, Plante Back

By LAURENT CHIASSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jacques Plante's return to goaltending for Montreal Canadiens might not have been spectacular but it was successful.

The five-time Vezina Trophy winner, in his first National Hockey League appearance since Nov. 24, stopped 20 shots at Boston Thursday when the Canadiens belted the last-place Bruins 5-1. Boston goalie Bruce Gamble had to handle 48 shots.

The victory cut the lead of the idle Toronto Maple Leafs at the top of the standings to three points. The Leafs have 69 points in 54 games and the Canadiens 66 in 52 games.

At Detroit, Gordie Howe and Alex Delvecchio each scored twice to power the Red Wings to a 4-2 triumph over New York Rangers.

The defeat dimmed the fifth-place Rangers' chances of making the Stanley Cup playoffs. They have 42 points, 11 back of Detroit with 17 games left to play.

Plante was called back to the Canadiens this week after the club went into a tailspin that cost them first place in the standings. Charlie Hodge had played in goal in the club's previous 30 games.

In the interval, Plante rested a troublesome knee and played eight games with Montreal Roy- sional Hockey League.

A 25-foot screened drive by rookie Tom McCarthy late in the first period was the only shot that beat him Thursday night.

The Habs defence corps was led by all-star Doug Harvey. Though not fully recovered from a cracked ankle, Harvey's return to the lineup made a big difference.

Harvey fed the puck to Jean Belliveau for a picture goal in the final period. Don Marshall scored two of Montreal's goals. Bernie Geoffrion and defenceman Bob Turner had one each.

The two goals—his 15th and 16th of the season—gave him a career total of 462.

Howe, 32, ranks second to retired Maurice Richard in the all-time scoring list. The Rocket called it quits with 544 goals before this season got under way.

Delvecchio's two goals moved him into third place on Detroit's all-time scoring list.

Delvecchio's pair and Howe's last came while the Rangers were shorthanded.

Camille Henry and Andy Bathgate tallied for the Rangers.

The Canadiens, displaced from the Montreal Forum by an ice show, play at New York Saturday afternoon in one of three afternoon games this season.

Boston will be at Toronto Saturday night.

Larks Want Two-Game Cup Series

WINNIPEG (CP)—Montreal Alouettes are named on the agenda of the annual Canadian Football League meeting here as sponsors of a motion to turn the Grey Cup championship into a two-game affair.

The proposal has come up for consideration by the CFL during the last several years without success. Lew Hayman of Toronto Argonauts has been the main backer of the proposal in the past.

"Now Montreal has been converted and they're making the motion," Hayman said Thursday.

"I've got half-way support from the Toronto club and from Ottawa," he said. "I'm gradually wearing them down."

Delegates Get 'Feeler'

CBS May Telecast Eastern Games

WINNIPEG (CP) — Eastern conference delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Football League are reported considering a feeler from the Columbia Broadcasting System in the United States to telecast seven eastern Canadian games this season.

Lew Hayman, general manager of Toronto Argonauts, said Thursday a representative of CBS had submitted figures to an eastern CFL delegate for consideration.

The suggestion was that the network telecast the five league games and two playoff games played after Oct. 1.

Payment mentioned was about $70,000—or roughly $10,000 a game.

Hayman said no firm offer has been made.

"A CBS man submitted the figures to a CFL member and we're trying to find out whether the eastern league will go for it," he said.

In 1954, another American network, the National Broadcasting Company, paid the Big Four Union a reported $250,000 for the rights to televise 22 games. NBC dropped the program because the four-team eastern league did not provide enough variety.

Moe Hunter Wins Macs Score Title

Moe Hunter, hard-skating right winger on the Macs' veteran line of Goyer, Hull and Hunter, captured the Belleville team scoring championship, according to statistics compiled here today.

Hunter, playing in 19 of his team's 20 regular scheduled games, scored 24 goals and earned 21 assists for a point total of 45.

Gary Goyer, who has won the title for several years and is the play-making centre on Hunter's line, finished second with 43 points. He had 15 goals and 28 assists. Hunter, with his best season ever, was tops in goals while Goyer led the club in assists.

Ronnie Hull made it a clean sweep for the line, taking the third spot with 33 points on 20 goals and 13 assists. Most of the left wingers' points coming in the last half of the schedule.

Larry Mavety paced the defencemen in both points and penalties. He had 27 points, including eight goals and served 105 minutes in the penalty box. That total included one game misconduct and one major penalty as well as 45 minors.

Bill Moxon played all of his team's games in goal and allowed 66 goals for a solid 3.30 goals-against average. He did not have a shutout but drew 31 minutes in penalties.

Gives Commissioner Powers

League Closes Etcheverry Case

By TOM WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League closed the book on the Sam Etcheverry case Thursday, while taking steps to prevent similar contract controversies in the future.

The league voted unanimocaly at its annual meeting to amend its constitution to give CFL commissioner Sydney Halter the power to rule on the validity of all contract matters.

Halter indicated that one of his first moves will be to ban secret agreements between players and clubs, such as the one that triggered the Etcheverry controversy.

Etcheverry created a tempest between the CFL and the United States National Football League by signing with St. Louis Cardinals after refusing to accept a trade that would have sent him from Montreal Alouettes — with whom he starred at quarterback for nine years—to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

CENTRES ON LETTER

The dispute centred on a letter of agreement between Etcheverry and Alouettes that said in part that he could not be traded without his consent.

The letter, although referring to the player's standard contract, was not filed with the commissioner along with the contract.

Etcheverry claimed the Alouettes breached the no-trade agreement, making him a free agent. NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle agreed with him and approved his St. Louis contract. Halter argued that when Etcheverry refused the trade, his contract reverted to Montreal and that Rozelle had violated a gentlemen's agreement between the CFL and NFL to honor each other's contracts.

Halter said: "Rozelle took the stand that he should decide on the validity of the contract—which I considered to be a matter for the courts.

"The amendment passed by the CFL today means I am now in the position to take the same type of action that Rozelle took in the Etcheverry case."

WILL SEEK ACCORD

Halter indicated, however, he would seek to restore the former accord with the NFL.

"In my opinion, the only common-sense procedure is to return to the method of determining the priority of contract and acting accordingly.

"But this can't be a one-way street. If Rozelle insists on interpreting the validity of contracts, I will use my new powers to do the same."

Commenting on Montreal's part in the controversy, he said the Alouettes were not at fault for not registering the letter of agreement with him. He said there was no provision in the league regulations saying that such amendments to contracts must be submitted to the commissioner.

"But there will be," he said.

Halter said he considered the Etcheverry case closed, unless Alouettes decide to take the quarterback to court.

Says Racial Problems Will Be Solved

MILWAUKE (AP) — Brdie Tebbetts, executive vice-president of Milwaukee Braves, predicted Thursday that the problem of housing Negro baseball players training in Florida will be worked out "to everybody's satisfaction." But not, he said, "by pressure methods, and not overnight."

"Baseball cannot be accused of supporting segregation," Tebbetts said. "We've proved our sincerity. Half our club is colored and any player, white or Negro, has an equal chance to make the club and make a living.

"But they want us to tell a hotel in Florida to take all our men, or none, when there is a state law which says the owner of a private hotel can refuse to admit anyone he pleases.

"True, there is no similar problem in Arizona, but there aren't enough diamonds in Arizona for all the big-league clubs to train.

"Everything will be worked out . . . In the meanwhile, we will continue to do the best we can for our players, white or colored, under circumstances not of our making."

Expected to Pay

AFL Cost $2 Million

By AL COLLETTI
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—The American Football league survived its first season with all eight clubs intact, but at a cost of about $2,000,000 to a band of young men who have the money.

However, the millionaire club owners say it was a price they expected to pay to try to break the monopoly held by the rich and well-established National Football League.

AFL commissioner Joe Foss says "most of us regard the American Football League as a four-year venture, considering that the length of time necessary to reach a break-even point."

The All-America Football Conference tried to buck the NFL for four years (1946-49) but folded after losing more than $11,000,000.

But the AFL have more business acumen and better bankrolls than the All-America Conference owners.

And they have a lucrative five-year television deal with ABC that was unheard of 15 years ago. Each team received $20,000 last year and the TV contract calls for a 10 per cent boost each year.

SHOWED GOOD BALANCE

The AFL showed amazing balance in both divisions last season, while the All-America Conference was dominated by Cleveland Barons.

The battle to sign up players next season will be keen, Foss says, but he doesn't contemplate any "football war" with the NFL, and least of all with the Canadian League.

"We enjoy the most amicable relations with the Canadian League.

"Last year there was some movement of American players from the Canadian teams into our league. This is natural and was expected. Among these were Frank Tripucka of Denver Broncos, Jim Colclough of Boston Patriots and Al Dorow of New York Titans. All of them enjoyed excellent seasons in our league and they speak well for the calibre of Canadian football."

Royals Edge Petes 3-2, Wings Beaten

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The visitors had it their own way in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A League Tuesday night.

At Peterborough league-leading Guelph Royals edged fifth-place Peterborough Petes 3-2 and at Hamilton sixth-place St. Catharines Teepees defeated fourth-place Hamilton Red Wings 4-2.

Royals level-pegged with the Petes with a score of 1-1 in the first period and 2-2 going into the third. Scorers were Jean Ratelle, Bob Cunningham and Terry Oliver for Guelph and Wayne Boddy and Doug Senior for Peterborough.

Play was clean until the third frame when a fight broke out between brothers Barc and Bob Plager. Both went to the box for a major.

Scorers for the winners were Joe Brenneman with two and Duke Harris and Murray Hall with one each and Pit Martin and Bob Dillabough tallied for the losers.

A fight in the second ended with four players in the box. Hamilton's Howie Menard and Teepees Paul Popiel were handed game misconducts and Wings' Ron Harris and Teepees' Doug Jarrett received majors.

Last-place Toronto Marlboros visit Niagara Falls tonight. The Royals and Petes have a return engagement at Guelph.

Discobolus, Simple Plaster Cast of Famous Greek Statue, Kept in Ignominy and Shame

BY KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Missing, presumed dead: Joe Discobolus.

Occupation: Discus thrower.

Nationality: Greek.

Identifying characteristics: When last seen was completely nude.

Remarks: Last reported seen by Samuel Butler, writer. Extensive investigation has produced no body.

That's the way a police report could be written about one of the more embarrassing moments in the history of Montreal — not always Canada's city of sophisticated, broadminded living.

For the Discobolus, a simple plaster cast of the famous Greek statue by Myron of a discus thrower, was kept in ignominy and shame, its—uhh, face — to the wall, in a storage room for about 30 years just because it had no pants — or any other clothing, for that matter.

SUBJECT OF POEM

This piece of prudery — the antithesis of the life Montreal now prides itself on — could have passed unnoticed and unknown but for a chance sightseeing trip by Samuel Butler, the English novelist and poet who died in 1902.

Butler saw the plaster cast while visiting a Montreal museum in 1875. He wrote a poem about it, so all the world could know—and Montreal regret.

About three decades after the poem was written, the statue apparently had been destroyed; whether as an example of carrying prudery too far, a desire to avoid further joshing on the subject or just because it was not a particularly valuable piece of statuary is not known.

The statue was being kept in a storage and work room in a museum operated by the National History Society at the time of Butler's visit. The famous writer walked into the room and saw the statue.

"O MONTREAL!"

According to a biographer, Festing Jones, Butler questioned a man working nearby at stuffing an owl. He was told, Jones relates, that the statue was not being displayed, had not been displayed and would not be displayed because it had no pants and so was not a fit object to be seen by Montreal maidens.

"Stowed away in a Montreal lumber room
"The Discobolus standeth and turneth his face to the wall;
"Dusty, cobweb - covered, maimed and set at naught,
"Beauty crieth in an attic and no man regardeth.
"O God! O Montreal!"

In fairness to Montreal, it should be noted that Butler may have been guilty of exaggeration for the sake of a good yarn.

The museum was devoted to showing stuffed animals and birds, samples of minerals and other natural pieces — "works of God," Sir William Dawson called them.

WASTE OF SPACE

Sir William, president of the Natural History Society some years before Butler's visit as well as principal of McGill University, had laid down the dictum that the museum should not waste its space showing works of man, reserving itself for the glories of the One True Artist.

Under this ruling, of course, the Discobolus clearly did not belong in the museum. However other statues and works of man were displayed there—but not the denuded Discobolus.

Edgar Andrew Collard, editorial writer for the Montreal Gazette and authority on Montreal's history, remarks dryly that "there's good reason to believe Butler had at least some justification for his conclusions about why the Discobolus was hidden."

Mr. Collard and other historians have tried to trace the history of the Discobolus.

It apparently was given to the Natural History Society privately and put into hiding immediately. There is no record of it ever being shown at the museum.

LOST IN SUFFLE

Some time after Butler's visit, the museum moved to new quarters. The Discobolus, draped in rough burlap, was carried from his hiding place—to another hiding place in the new building.

Shortly after the beginning of this century, the society disbanded and the museum in time closed its doors. The exhibits were taken over by McGill University, but there is no indication that the Discobolus made the second move.

He apparently had been destroyed in the interim, possibly by an overly modest art critic, but more likely just because he was taking up space.

"The plaster cast had no monetary value," Mr. Collard says. "Its only possible value is its connection with Samuel Butler."

OBJECT OF MYSTERY

This is a drawing of Discobolus, the Greek statue by Myron of a nude discus thrower. A plaster cast of the work was noticed in the storage room of a Montreal museum in 1875 by writer Samuel Butler who was told it was kept hidden because it was unclothed. He wrote a poem kidding Montreal about its prudery. Later efforts to find the copy were unsuccessful and it is thought it was destroyed. (CP Photo).

Luck Charm Works for Gordie Howe

DETROIT (AP) — Gordie Howe is batting .500 on good luck charms.

Several weeks ago, one of Howe's friends — disturbed over the big guy's failure to score goals at his customary clip — gave the Detroit Red Wing veteran a "lucky coin."

The next night, Howe was seriously hurt in a collision with Toronto's Eddie Shack and spent several days in a Toronto hospital.

Before Thursday night's game here against New York Rangers, Red Wing fans who are members of the Crisis Club gave Howe a floral horseshoe for good luck.

Howe promptly scored two of Detroit's goals in a 4-2 triumph over the Rangers.

"I don't go much for good luck charms and the like," said hockey's quiet man, "People have tried all sorts of things for good luck for me, but I guess I'm just not superstitious."

This week, members of the Junior Red Wings gave Howe a hockey stick with a horseshoe fastened to the working end of the stick.

This was after Howe's shots struck the goal posts three times in Sunday night's game here against Montreal.

"If I've had a jinx or something like that, maybe I've broken it now," Howe said after Thursday night's victory.

NEW SCREEN COMEDY MADE ENCHANTING BY NOEL COWARD MUSIC

Some of the most light-hearted and popular music of the last 30 years comes flooding back into memory as a result of a novel experiment by producer-director Stanley Donen for his new Technicolor - Technirama comedy, "The Grass Is Greener."

Instead of following the normal procedure and hiring a composer to create a new musical score for the sparkling comedy which stars Cary Grant, Deborah Kerr, Robert Mitchum and Jean Simmons now at the McCarthy Theatre, Donen elected to revive much of the gay music of Noel Coward.

"It just seemed like the perfect combination," Donen reports.

"The Grass Is Greener," a Grandon Production for Universal-International release, is a funny story of life among England's landed gentry—specifically what happens when one of England's famous stately homes is opened to the public as a tourist attraction. One of Coward's most popular novelty tunes, "Stately Homes of England," actually tells the background of the story.

"Actually," Donen says," we used eight of Noel's old songs and he wrote one new theme that runs through the picture. When I went over the list of numbers that he submitted as his original suggestions, I was amused. It was as if the original play by Hugh and Margaret Williams had been written as a projected musical using the Coward melodies."

In addition to "Stately Homes" the Coward music heard in "The Grass Is Greener" includes such evergreens as "I'll Follow My Secret Heart," "Mad About the Boy," "The Party's Over Now," and "Mad Dogs and Englishmen." Others are 'Sigh No More," 'Poor Little Rich Girl" and "Room With A View."

Another Long Western Occupying Time on Screens

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Something different in the way of western lawmen appeared Thursday night when CBS' new hour-long Gunslinger made its debut. The fast-drawing hero is an undercover agent for the army, a real change from the usual avenging sheriffs, marshals and hired guns.

Aside from that, Gunslinger follows strictly the tried - and - true formula, and if you look closely you can spot a marked family resemblance to such members of the CBS team as Gunsmoke and Have Gun Will Travel. That means, among other things, that it is a smooth, professional show with plenty of action, shoot-outs and dead badmen.

Tony Young, a grim - eyed, slim - hipped young man plays Cord (just Cord, no first name: Does Paladin have a first name?)

It is questionable whether television really needs another western series, but if it does, Gunslinger has all the ingredients to be a popular one.

The premier of Gunslinger conflicted with the last half of NBC's musical special starring Jack Benny. Judging from the first 30 minutes, however, it was a lively and pleasant song and dance show pegged to popular songs of the last two or three decades.

AT THE BELLE — Lucky Partner — James MacArthur gets to dance with lovely Janet Munro, while Tommy Kirk watches woefully, in this Christmas party scene from Walt Disney's "Swiss Family Robinson", blending adventure, romance, humor, a multitude of animals and Technicolor, the film stars John Mills, Dorothy McGuire, MacArthur and Miss Munro, and is continuing at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

AT THE PARK — Make a Wish — Bowery Boys Huntz Hall and Leo Gorcey, watched by Eric Blore, the Genii of the Lamp, hesitate to make a wish in a hilarious scene of their latest Bowery Boys comedy for Allied Artists, "Bowery to Bagdad", at the Park Theatre today and Saturday. On the same program "Abbott and Costello Meet Captain Kidd", in Technicolor co-starring Charles Laughton. Also shown is a Three Stooges comedy. Excellent entertainment for all the family. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

Sterling Mossman, Officer By Day, Club Star at Night

By BOB THOMAS

HONOLULU (AP) — Police detective by day, night club star by night — that's the strange double life of Sterling Mossman.

Mossman works nightly at the Barefoot Bar of the Queen's Surf. The bar, former bedroom of a millionaire's mansion, was packed with people sitting around tables the size of coasters.

The lights dimmed. Playing on the bandstand was a combo of three Hawaiian men and one Waikiki girl. They were joined by Mossman, good - looking thirtyish with a deceivingly dignified manner. He played guitar, sang, told a hilarious history of Hawaii and clowned.

TALKS OF JOBS

Afterwards, he sat down and talked about his two careers.

"I've been entertaining since I was five years old," said Mossman, an island boy who is Scot-Irish - German-Hawaiian. "But I've only been doing it professionally since seven or eight years ago.

"The police work began 20 years ago."

He rises early to be on the job at the police department at 7:45, finishes at 4:30 in the afternoon. He goes to the home he shares with his islander wife and sons, 16 and 12, dines and takes a short nap. He does two shows at the Barefoot Bar, ending at 1 a.m. and gets to sleep about 2.

Y. Basketball

At the halfway point of the YMCA Junior Basketball House League schedule the Globetrotters, paced by Bob Watson, are leading the league with a record of six wins and one loss for 12 points. They are followed by the Hawks with a record of four wins, two losses and a tie game for nine points; next in order are the Celtics seven points; Satellites with six points the Stealers and the Lakers being tied for cllar position, with four points ach.

Top scorer in the league is Bob Watson of the Globetrotters with 89 points, followed by George Hogan of the Celtics with 75 points. Others in the top ten are: Dyson Sargeant (Stealers) 51; Dave Hurst (Globetrotters) 48; Bob Farrow (Hawks) 47; John Murphy (Globetrotters) 44; Richard Woodley (Lakers) 38; Richard Cherry (Satellites) 37; David Beresford (Celtics) 36; and Paul Peoples (Hawks) 33.

WAR RECORD

Morgan Woodward, who plays Shotgun Gibbs on TV's "Wyatt Earp," was a combat flier in the Second World War and the Korean War.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Saturday, February 11, 1961

General Tendencies — Now you have a very good Saturday for whatever has to do with getting rid of all accumulated junk and what is unwanted in your life, and to be just as particular in filling with whatever can be of helpfulness to you in days to come. Fine for every sort of chance to get more solid, secure structure beneath you. Be practical and down-to-earth.

Aries (March 21 to April 19)—This is a very good day to look about for more lucrative outlets and to increase prestige now enjoyed. Get into progressive circles where you can meet the right people. Take notes on anything of major interest. Expand.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)—There is much of inspiration all about you now, so be alert to any new methods of suggestions that can lead to greater success and happiness in the future. P.M. get out socially and increase your circle of friends. Be charming.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—Study well all monetary affairs with others today, and then get a better system in operation for the future. Be sure this evening to show affection for your most beloved ally and get full co-operation you need at this time.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21)—A day to informally find out what your relative position is with all whom you consider to be associates. Also, come to an understanding with those who disagree with your views. P.M. go out socially or just for fun and relaxation.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21)—Be certain to get that myriad of small tasks out of the way early today. Then take any health treatments that are needed and be off to whatever services or activities will help those you love the most. Be altruistic.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—A day for fun and frolic. Plan your day wisely so that you can have a maximum of pleasure with the greatest number of people, yet not be extravagant. Get into some wholesome form of sport that get you into the fresh air.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Now you can handle home affairs more wisely and clear them up quickly. Ask directly what is required of you, then follow through cheerfully. P.M. invite guests in, have fun.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Every opportunity is yours now to purchase exactly what you have been looking for for some time. There will also be plenty of time for visiting or making some important sale. Activity is the keynote for this fine day.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—Be sure you don't waste one moment of today's fine opportunity for getting your surroundings in the finest order possible. Then carry through with whatever duties are impossible to perform during the busy work week.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20). A fine day for riding any hobbies that are difficult to pursue during the work week. Also, look into any new outlets that will be both lucrative and pleasurable. P.M. fine for going out socially and having a wonderful time.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—If you get an early start, you can get rid of all those accumulated small duties that are still important. Then the remainder of the day will be fine for going out to the amusements that beckon. P.M. fine for romance.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20)—A perfect day for getting together with associates informally and mixing business with pleasure. Be dynamic and charming and you can accomplish a great deal. Evening fine for social pleasure — dress at your very best.

If Your Child is Born Today . . . . there will be a great deal of resourcefulness in this chart and your youngster will always want to feel a certain sense of security throughout life. Inasmuch as the nature is a most practical one, be sure early to give the right spiritual training so that the true measure of success can be realized. Also, there is a tendency to be overly-cautious—give the benefit of planned sports.

CHILD FOR ADOPTION

STEVE — is a striking-looking three year old Roman Catholic Indian lad with dark coloring. He is healthy and possesses good average intelligence. His winning smile, sense of humor and liking for people have endeared him to those who have known him. Steve has spent all his life in a children's institution. He is very sensitive to disapproval and has a tremendous need for the love and security which parents would provide. Steve requires a home where he will receive a lot of individual attention and can be the youngest in the family. If you would be interested in knowing more about this youngster with a view to adopting him, please write to:

Crown to Appeal Judge's Decision In Bribe Case

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Roberts said in the legislature Thursday that a notice of appeal in the Crown's case against Magistrate Frederick Hall and Harold Linden has been given to the provincial police for service on the two men.

Magistrate Hall, a former reeve of Suburban York Township, and Linden, a former councillor, were acquitted Jan. 11 on charges of accepting bribes to expedite a building permit.

Grounds for the appeal are that Judge Robert Forsyth erred in law when he directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty because there was no evidence that the alleged offences were committed, Mr. Roberts said.

Judge Forsyth ruled that the alleged demand for a bribe was made after the building permit was approved by the township's committee of general purpose.

The charges were laid as a result of a judical inquiry into the township's affairs.

Old Original Pine

By WILLIAM HALL
Ontario Department of Lands and Forests

When one listens to Ottawa Valley natives discussing the early history of the lumber industry in the area an expression which is almost sure to crop up is "Old Original Pine". The expression conjures up a mental picture of a tree of great age ,one which had been in existence almost since time began.

After discussing the meaning of the term with some of the local residents it became apparent that in order to merit the connotation "Old Original" a pine must combine the following characteristics.

(1) It must be old enough to have been a tree of some consequence when the first settlers arrived in the area.

(2) It must be clear of branches for at least fifty feet. The top of the tree standing in the open above the general level of the stand is often gnarled and lopsided.

(3) It must be sound to the heart and the heartwood must be a light brown color denoting great age.

(4) The bark of such a tree is very thick, exhibits deep grooves and has a scaly appearance.

During a recent cut inspection tour of the Stewart licence in Darling Township a number of pine located in a swamp were brought to our attention. About thirty trees ranging in size from 18" to over three feet in diameter could be seen extending fifty to eighty feet above the cedar and balsam. The tops of the trees were gnarled and in some cases broken, indicating that the trees had withstood the icy northern gales for a great number of years. These we concluded could perhaps qualify as "Old Originals."

After the trees had been marked and duly cut by the operator a second visit to the operation confirmed our earlier conclusion. Inspection of the stumps revealed that of thirty trees only three or four showed signs of decay. The heartwood was in every case a light brown color, a further indication that we were in fact dealing with "Old Originals".

Choosing one of the larger trees, appropriate measurements revealed the following information.

The stump diameter inside the bark was 39 inches.

The tree contained nine twelve foot logs to a 9 inch top for a total merchantable height of 108 feet.

The total height of tree was 125 feet.

The total volume of lumber in the tree was 2,446 feet board measure.

The value of the logs in the tree at an average price of $50. per M f.b.m. would be $122.30.

The market value of lumber sawn from the tree, assuming an average price of $150. per M f.b.m., would be $367.10.

This tree would appear to have been a worthy representative and probably one of the last of the "Old Original Pine".

Construction of New York's Central Park began in 1857, 13 years after the idea was raised by poet William Cullen Bryant in an editorial in The Evening Post.

CUPID NOW

Sick humor isn't new. Back in the 1800s cards known as penny horribles were in their heyday. A typical verse from a penny horrible:

Still you dress, in vain endeavor,
To attract some youthful swain,
But your charms are gone forever,
All your arts you try in vain.

Some of today's most sentimental cards are sold in Quebec. One shows a helicopter pilot dropping flowers to his beloved. The English translation of the verse is:

Over the clouds my heart flies toward you.
Accept the pledge of my love and emotion.

In English-speaking Canada, Valentine's Day ranks second only to Christmas as a time for sending cards. In Quebec Easter is second and Valentine's Day third.

Special cards for teen-agers have been introduced this year. One contains stickers that can be glued to books. They carry cryptic messages such as: "We're too young to be Valentines so let's get married," and "Could I mooch a smooch?"

What of the origin of this day? There are many legends about it. One version is that St. Valentine was beheaded in Rome on Feb. 14 in the year 270 because he heard the marriage vows of Roman soldiers despite a ruling by the emperor forbidding wartime marriages.

Defence Minister Harkness Back to Open-Door Policy

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Around these parts, the sound - proof room is the ultimate status symbol.

The sound - proofing easily outranks the expanse of the table in the room or the thickness of the carpet, though these naturally have a bearing on status as important as the proximity of parking space.

But what is one to make of a door—or lack of one—in a musty corridor in defence headquarters?

The head-shrinkers or status seekers will have to be left the interpretation. All that can be reported here about this on-again-off - again door are the facts.

Defence Minister Harkness has returned to the open-door policy of his Liberal forerunners, the late Brooke Claxton and Ralph Campney, and rejected the closed-door policy of his Progressive Conservative predecessor, George Pearkes.

FOUR CORRIDORS MEET

At national defence headquarters, sometimes known unofficially as the rabbit warren, four corridors in the north end of the building form a large rectangle.

One one corner of this rectangle is the defence minister's office. On the adjacent corner, nearest the main entrance to the building, is a place for a door which can be erected to shut off all pedestrian traffic flowing by the minister's office.

In Mr. Claxton's day, there was no door at this point. But there was a swinging gate. The purpose of this gate was never made clear because it never impeded traffic swinging by the minister's office and around the rectangle.

Mr. Campney had the gate removed.

Mr. Pearkes discarded th's open-door policy.

He had a door put up with a lock on it. At a wicket next to the door was a commissionaire who had photographs of the senior persons allowed in without challenge. Others could get in, when necessary, of course—by appointment.

REMOVES EVERYTHING

Mr. Harkness was in office less than a week — he took over the defence portfolio Oct. 11—when he had the lock, door and commissionaire removed.

He went back to the swinging gate. From casual observation, it now seems apparent that this gate, though fragile, dissuades unnecessary traffic.

s

However, Mr. Harkness has gone even further than Mr. Claxton or Mr. Campney. He leaves the door to his own office open. And the doors to assistant and secretary are also open.

Mr. Harkness' obvious popularity in the department apparntly stems from the moment the door was removed.

The Financial Times declares "The problem indeed is not so much concentration in the press as concentration in British industry generally."

"What impels concentration," says The Daily Herald, "is the desire to maintain profits in the face of mounting costs."

The Daily Mail says: "The press has nothing to hide. It awaits the new investigation with equanimity, believing that the verdict of 1949 still holds true—that the British press is inferior to none in the world."

An earlier royal commission on the press issued its report in 1949. It was responsible for the formation in 1953 of the British Press Council, the industry's ethics "watchdog" group.

ADVISES TO REJECT

Meanwhile, the board of Odhams today advised its stockholders to reject a takeover bid from the giant Daily Mirror newspapers and magazine group. The panel supported a rival merger bid by Canadian publisher Roy Thomson.

Macmillan said Thursday that no useful purpose would be served by an inquiry into the Odhams situation, adding it would not be proper for the government to intervene.

Odhams Chairman Sir Christopher Chancellor in a letter to stockholders said the board and its financial advisers are "firmly of the opinion" that The Daily Mirror offer is "unacceptable."

The proposed link with Thomson newspapers, it said, has "none of the disadvantages of The Daily Mirror proposals," adding that with Thomson, the two groups of publications would continue to function independently.

SEES MONOPOLY

Chancellor said a merger with the Mirror group would create a "situation approaching monopoly in the field of magazines and trade and technical journals" which would not be in the public interest and might invoke government intervention.

Thomson, whose empire includes newspaper and television interests in Britain, Canada and the United States, said he welcomes the probe.

"Nothing but good can come of it," he told reporters, adding:

"The more light an inquiry throws upon the press the better in the public interest—and for those who work in the industry as well as the proprietor."

WOULD BE SMALL

Labor Party Leader Hugh Gaitskell said further mergers might occur in the industry before the royal commission's report is ready, but Macmillan said that he hoped to have a small commission which would operate quickly.

Macmillan made it clear that the newsprint industry would come under the commission's scope.

The last royal commission on the press found the British press "completely independent of outside financial interests and that its policy is the policy of those who conduct it."

Direct influence by advertisers, it said, was "negligible."

Dear friends,

We have seen so many misunderstandings and hardships brought about because the deceased had made no will that we feel justified in mentioning it. Making a will is very simple and inexpensive. It so often saves a family from endless worry and uncertainty.

We know little about legal matters, but we do know that much trouble could be avoided if every person made a will.

Harkness Lashes Neutralists And Disarmers

Montreal Address May Have Cabinet Reaction

MONTREAL (CP) —Defence Minister Harkness lashed out Friday night at Canadian neutralists and unilateral disarmers It was his first major public speech since he became defence minister last Oct. 11.

He said there is no use trying to ignore the fact that the threat posed by "hostile Communist regimes" includes the determination of Russia and China to achieve world domination.

By implication, Mr. Harkness in his speech to the Montreal United Services Institute showed a determination to obtain government backing for new weapons for the armed forces, including a new manned interceptor for the RCAF.

He referred indirectly to the national Liberal rally's resolution that Canada withdraw from the interceptor role in North American Air Defence Command and said:

"Do the proponents of this plan assume that there is no longer a bomber threat to this continent or do they envisage a situation which would call for the establishment of United States air bases across Canada in lieu of Canadian squadrons?

NO REAL DEFENCE?

3Mr. Harkness said other voices propose that because there is no real defence against long - range missiles Canada should have no defence at all and should throw in the sponge.

"Do these individuals seriously maintain that if the U.S. were attacked, Canada would not be involved and Canadian territory and the Canadian people would not suffer the slightest scratch?"

Mr. Harkness said a certain amount of criticism levelled at the Canadian defence program stems from "misguided frustration" because Canada can't build nuclear submarines and intercontinental missiles.

"The government does not want to build these things but rather participate in the defence of Canada and the free world in other ways."

OTTAWA (CP)—Four months ago today, Hon. Douglas Scott Harkness assumed the defence portfolio.

In those four months, he uttered hardly a public word—though he got into political hot water for some private words.

Friday night he came out fighting in a speech before the Montreal United Services Institute.

The hard-hitting speech may have more impact on the cabinet than on the public.

It is generally known that part of the cabinet led by External Affairs Minister Green is against acquisition of new weapons for the armed forces while there is still a prospect that some East-West disarmament agreement might be reached.

Mr. Green almost single-handedly backed the government away from a previous all-but-firm decision to obtain nuclear weapons.

Former defence minister Pearkes tried hard but couldn't withstand Mr. Green's pressure.

The same problem—that a defence minister must battle for the most modern weapons available for his troops—landed in Mr. Harkness' lap.

Mr. Harkness carefully reconnoitred his ground and now has launched his attack.

Here are some of the things he said Friday night in his first major public speech as defence minister:

"We Canadians by geography, by culture, by tradition and by our very sense of freedom are firmly committed to a contribution to the defence of the free world.

"It seems to me that there is very little point of hiding our heads in the sand and expecting someone else to do our job for us. . . .

"The responsible player in the international game makes the most of the cards he has been dealt. We should invite jeers rather than cheers if we attempted to play India's game with Canada's hand. . . .

"Do the proponents of this plan (withdrawl from the interceptor role in North American air defence) assume that there is no longer a bomber threat to this continent or do they envisage a situation which would call for the establishment of United States air bases across Canada in lieu of Canadian squadrons? . . .

"Do they suggest that U.S. squadrons (in Canada) should be equipped with nuclear weapons? This must be the case although I find it somewhat paradoxical in that the same people have fiercely opposed such weapons for the RCAF. . . .

"Do these people really believe that Canada would be entitled to a strong voice in the determination of the defence of the North American continent if we should withdraw our contribution to its air defences?!"

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Friday, Feb. 10

Frank Howard (CCF — Skeena) was suspended from the Commons for the remaining four hours of the day's sitting after being "named" by the Speaker for use of unparliamentary language.

Second reading—approval in principle — was given without recorded vote to a government bill providing a basic 20 - percent increase in veterans' disability pensions.

Hubert Badanai (L — Fort William) criticized present immigration policy as being weighed down with racial and occupational discrimination.

Monday, Feb. 13

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EST to discuss private bills; the Senate is adjourned until 8 p.m. Tuesday.

CYCLE CAUGHT FIRE

BRANTFORD (CP)—A motor cycle burst into flames Friday while traffic officer Ernie Reeves was sitting on it directing a funeral procession. The flames prevented him calling for assistance on his two-way radio, and by the time firemen arrived in response to his telephone call from a nearby funeral home the machine had been destroyed.

FRANK HOWARD MADE TO LEAVE HOUSE, 'NAMED'

Other Business Was Humdrum

OTTAWA (CP) — Variety reigned in the Commons Friday with action ranging from the temporary suspension of Frank Howard of the CCF to the humdrum study of government spending estimates on immigration.

Mr. Howard, a former logger who represents the British Columbia riding of Skeena, was suspended for the day after Speaker Roland Michener ruled he had used unparliamentary language — which Mr. Howard declined to withdraw — in the phase "underhanded and scurrilous remarks."

Veterans Affairs Minister Churchill said the language was directed at himself and at Prime Minister Diefenbaker. Mr. Diefenbaker later said he had no intention—as he said it was alleged by some opposition members—of imputing an opposition "design" to delay veterans' pensions legislation then under discussion.

Liberal Leader Pearson called the prime minister's statement a "withdrawal" that would have prevented Mr. Howard being suspended had it been made in time. CCF Leader Argue agreed.

APPROVES BILL

From that confused and angry episode, the Commons moved on to give second reading—approval in principle—to a bill increasing by 20 per cent the basic pensions paid to disabled veterans.

In an hour devoted to bills sponsored by private members, the Commons shelved a proposal that wholly-owned Canadian subsidiaries of foreign firms be compelled to make public financial statements.

The naming of Mr. Howard was followed—according to parliamentary tradition — with a motion by Mr. Churchill, as government House leader, to suspend the 35-year-old MP for the remainder of the sitting—in this case four hours.

The vote was carried 149 to 7. The only "nays" came from among Mr. Howard's socialist colleagues. He did not vote himself — nor did Mr. Diefenbaker or Mr. Churchill, who were in the chamber but abstained during the roll call.

HAD LEFT HOUSE

Mr. Howard already had left the House—which meant that he was spared the embarrassement of an exit which, under House rules, can be carried out under the escort of the sword-bearing sergeant-at-arms.

It was the first time in 28 years that a member had been named. And it was the first suspension since 1956, when Donald Fleming—then in opposition, and now the finance minister—was ordered out of the chamber during the noisy pipeline debate.

Mr. Fleming's historic exit in 1956 came with the desk-thump-

Mounties Say London Spy Suspect Got Canadian Passport by Fraud

OTTAWA (CP)—The RCMP said Friday that Gordon Arnold Lonsdale, facing trial in London for espionage, is not the Canadian he claims to be.

Lonsdale, who was committed for trial Thursday with four others for theft of British defence secrets, has a Canadian passport which claims he was born at Cobalt in 1924.

The RCMP said, however, that a Gordon Arnold Lonsdale born at Cobalt in that year "had certain physical characteristics which preclude the possibility of his being identical with the man now under arrest in London."

It said this information was sent to British authorities early in the investigation but was not made public previously because Lonsdale's preliminary hearing was in progress.

The RCMP said it had traced these movements in Canada by the man in London:

He appeared in Canada in 1954, after unknown entry, and stayed three months, living in Vancouver, Prince George, B.C. and Toronto. He had bank accounts in Vancouver and Toronto.

At no time was he employed.

While in Vancouver the man obtained a provincial driver's licence and obtained a duplicate birth certificate from the Ontario registrar of vital statistics in Toronto. It recorded the Lonsdale birth at Cobalt Aug. 27, 1924.

In January, 1955, using the birth certificate, he obtained a Canadian passport. The following month he left for New York. The passport was renewed in London in February, 1960. Lonsdale claimed residence in Vancouver.

The RCMP said the real Lonsdale's birth was not registered until September, 1931. The boy attended school at Kirkland Lake and at the age of eight went to Finland with his mother and other relatives. Nothing more is known of him.

The father of the real Lonsdale still lives in Canada but the RCMP declined to give his address.

Snow Drought May Affect Logging Drives in North

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A cold winter of light snow, which has dried up farm wells by the score in Southern Ontario, is causing some worries of a different kind in the North.

While local water shortages exist, the chief concern is what effect the snow drought will have on spring logging drives and summer forest fire hazards. Timber operators across the northland have mixed views.

Four major lumbering companies operating in the North Bay area are worried.

Normally January and February bring the big snows but the area has passed through a 25-day stretch with less than an inch. A check this week showed average snow depth at 14.7 inches, 10 inches below the level at this time last year. Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission hydrographers say the heavily-timbered bushland around North Bay is trapping less than half the amount of water required for a normal spring run-off.

Spring drives are due to get under way in about a month. Loggers fear costly jams that could result from low water and say recent mild weather may make matters worse by melting some of the snow before the big spring thaw arrives.

Farther north, operators in the Lake Timiskaming watershed expect no unusual difficulties. But they have the advantage of trucking logs directly to the lake, and the deep frost has kept bush roads in good shape.

Timber men in the Lakehead region aren't conserned either. They have a good chain of dams on most of the driving routes and feel they will provide sufficient control of the water level. Similar sentiments were expressed by H. A. Supple, log-

Census Questions Will Not Include Canadian as Origin

OTTAWA (CP)— The government has drawn a firm line to separate citizenship and ethnic origin in the information it seeks in this year's census.

It has effectively ruled out "Canadian" as a possible answer to the question on family origin which will be asked of more than 18,000,000 residents of the country starting next June 1.

This is the main change in a revision of the census form distributed to members to Parliament Friday. Some 9,000,000 copies of various forms will have to be reprinted.

The revision was made following protests from French-speaking organizations and Quebec MPs on both sides of the Commons against the original form of the question, which allowed "Canadian" and "U.S.A." as possible answers.

The critics, whose basic aim is to preserve French culture in Canada, said that such answers would be meaningless in trying to assess how their culture is surviving.

The revision changes the wording of the question to make clear that it seeks information only on the ethnic or cultural origin of the paternal ancestors of Canadians when they first came to the New World.

It also drops "Canadian" and "U.S.A." from a list of 28 possible answers that can be ticked off by the census takers.

Instead of the original question asking "origin on the father's side" it asks:

"To what ethnic or cultural group did you or your ancestor (on the male side) belong on coming to his continent?"

A senior official said that for those who don't know, the reply "unknown" will be written in, as in past censuses.

If people insist that their origin is Canadian or American, he said, presumably the census taker would have to write that down. But since that doesn't answer the question, such replies will be tabulated among the "unknowns."

Another revision in the questionnaire involves the query on religion.

The census taker will ask simply "what is your religion" instead of the question as originally drafted: "What religious denomination do you belong to or favor?"

Officials said the original question had been interpreted by some as seeking to learn a person's church preference, no matter what church he belonged to.

Two CCFers Will Resume Divorce Blockade in House

OTTAWA (CP)— A threat to resume last year's Commons divorce blockade was issued Friday by CCF MP Frank Howard even while he was sitting out temporary suspension from the House on another matter.

He and Arnold Peters (CCF—Timiskaming), joint authors of the 1960 session's five - month filibuster against Quebec and Newfoundland divorce petitions, said they will start afresh Monday to deal individually with every divorce bill in the Commons.

"With some 400 divorce bills . . . being considered in various stages it is unlikely that many will pass through all of the steps necessary for divorce to be granted," their statement said.

The statement was attributed to the weekly news bulletin of the CCF-New Party caucus in the Commons, which consists of the eight-man CCF group plus Walter Pitman, elected last Oct. 31 as the New Party MP for Peterborough.

Editor of the bulletin is Mr. Howard.

It said that he and Mr. Peters thought they saw a solution—in part—to the parliamentary divorce question when the Commons on Dec. 12 gave rapid passage to a bill by M. Douglas Morton (PC — Toronto Davenport) in which the House waived its job of approving divorce bills already passed by the Senate.

The statement said the bill has been "languishing" in the Senate since then, with no one to sponsor it.

"It appears obvious now that the Senate is going to do nothing on this matter," the CCF statement added.

Accordingly, Mr. Howard and Mr. Peters would continue to "consider" all divorce bills now before the Commons.

May Reduce Butter Prices 10 Cts. Pound

TORONTO (CP)— The Globe and Mail says a plan that would reduce butter prices 10 cents a pound starting April 1 has been placed before the federal cabinet by Agriculture Minister Hamilton.

In an Ottawa dispatch, the newspaper says the reduction would be in the retail price from the present level of around 69 to 71 cents a pound and would not affect the price support of 64 cents a pound.

The scheme is aimed at reducing Canada's heavy butter surplus by making it more competitive with margarine, the story says. It "involves changes in federal aid for both cheese and milk as well as the sharp reduction in retail butter prices."

The newspaper adds:

"It is estimated the program will require the payment of subsidies to butter producers in Ontario and Quebec alone of more than $42,000,000, the acreage payment made to Western grain growers in the current fiscal year. Although the bulk of the industry is concentrated in these provinces, additional payments will also go to producers in other provinces. The cost may run between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000."

The Globe and Mail adds that Candian butter stocks were 90,000,000 pounds at last count and butter consumption by Canadians has been falling an average of nearly 1,000,000 pounds a month.

BOARD TO BUILD NEW LIQUOR STORE IN CITY

Portable Pensions Report Wednesday

TORONTO (CP)—Results of a year-long study on portable pensions will be presented to a committee of all members of the legislature Wednesday.

The committee, to be chaired by Robert Boyer (PC — Muskoka), will study the report of the committee on portable pensions, appointed by Premier Frost during the 1960 session of the legislature.

The legislature is unanimous in the need for portable pensions, but government sources indicate Ontario will not establish a plan without federal participation. Any future plan would be tied in with private pension schemes.

In the legislature Friday William Collings (PC — Toronto Beaches) outlined the operation of Ontario's code for advertising beer and liquor.

PROHIBITS SCENES

The code prohibits the showing of drinking scenes and bottles on television but permits displays of the label.

"This whole thing is crazy and a farce," said Arthur Reaume (L—Essex North).

The Liberal member asked why billboards cannot be used as an advertising medium when breweries and distilleries can advertise in newspapers, television, streetcars and buses.

Mr. Collings, chairman of the Liquor Control Board, said billboards could not be used because it was an advertising medium not included in the code.

"I know that — but why?" asked Mr. Reaume.

"It shouldn't be and won't be if I can prevent it," said Mr. Frost.

ASKS RE HOTELS

Leo Troy (L — Nipissing) asked if the liquor board was giving consideration to selling beer in hotels for off-premise consumption.

Mr. Collings said the board was discussing ways and means to provide service in the North where persons often have to travel a long way to purchase beer and liquor. He did not elaborate.

He reported the 1960-61 building program includes new stores in Fort Frances, Port Arthur, St. Thomas, Belleville, Stratford, Listowel, Orangeville, Petawawa, and St. Marys.

Building expenditures totalled $733,737 for the current year, with 1961 - 62 expenditures amounting to $2,030,263.

Energy Resources Minister Macaulay told members the system for ensuring safety in the shipment and use of radioactive materials is working well in Ontario.

UNIVERSITY PROBLEMS

Mr. Frost announced that a committee of university presidents will be established to supplement Ontario's university committee and the technical committee for university education.

He said Ontario's 12 universities are faced with an increasing number of problems in relation to co-ordination, planning and expansion. The three committees will work together.

Some Believe Deposed Premier Dead For Days

Massive Search Fails To Find Trace of Him

ELISABETHVILLE (AP) — Katanga province officials today flatly denied rumors they concocted a story that former premier Patrice Lumumba escaped from jail, so they could cover his death at the hands of his political opponents.

The denial came in a communique announcing that searchers for the missing Lumumba had found a car he and two political associates used to escape from a farmhouse prison at Mutshatsa, 220 miles west of Elisabethville, Thursday night.

Some Western observers in The Congo said they suspect Lumumba is dead or that his escape was engineered so he could be shot while trying to escape.

The Katanga government, taking note of these rumors, said in a communique:

"The Katanga government denies it organized the escape. It appears his (Lumumba's) escape was made possible by some fault or intervention by his guards, and this will be subject to inquiry."

IDENTIFY ESCAPE CAR

The communique said the car, a black Ford sedan found about 20 miles north of Kasaji where Lumumba was imprisoned, was identified as the automobile he and his companions seized after overpowering their guards.

Western observers fear that, dead or alive, Lumumba presents The Congo with its greatest threat if all-out civil war. His supporters control about one-third of The Congo.

If Lumumba is dead, observers said, his supporters in Oriental and Kivu provinces almost certainly would embark on a path of vengeance, possibly against the white population.

They said if he is alive he will be able to assume active leadership of his followers and touch off an all-out major civil war.

The Katanga government communique said:

"There was no sign that the occupants of car (found damaged on the road) had been hurt in the crash, and all traces of their movements after leaving the damaged car had been obliterated by rain. . . ."

The feeling here that Lumumba was already dead was strengthened among observers.

TSHOMBE SILENT

President Moise Tshombe of Katanga has shown no inclination to take personal action in the case, or even to comment on it.

In denying it had engineered the escape, the Katanga government said, "The United Nations security council is meeting at present to discuss the Congo situation, and it would be an inopportune time for any escape of Lumumba to be manufactured."

Meantime demands mounted in the United Nations for an investigation of the reported escape.

The Soviet Union and 10 other pro-Lumumba UN members called on Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold to determine

France Hopes Apology Calms Irate Russians

PARIS (AP)—France hoped today its formal expression of regrets would calm Russian tempers over a French jet fighter that fired tracer shots across the nose of a plane carrying Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

France's charge d'affaires in Moscow, Jean-de la Grandville, visited the Soviet foreign ministry Friday night to deliver an apology for the interception off Algeria's Mediterranean coast Thursday.

In Moscow today, there was no outward indication Soviet officialdom would make a great affair of the incident. The Soviet Communist party official newspaper Pravda called the interception "a regrettable incident."

The French foreign ministry said de la Grandville at his own request met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and promised a full investigation.

Reports received so far are incomplete, the French said, but de la Grandville "expressed, here and now, in any case, the sincere regrets of the French government."

Bank Economist Urges Govt. To Spend More

TORONTO (CP) — A bank economist asked the federal government Friday to use deficit financing to expand the economy and finance social projects difficult to undertake in times of high employment.

Dr. Robert MacIntosh, supervisor of investments for the Bank of Nova Scotia, told a study conference on unemployment sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Labor that deficit financing today is the subject of irrational fears.

Dr. MacIntosh said that if unemployment persists at a seasonably-adjusted level exceeding 7½ per cent, a substantially higher deficit will be needed to give the economy a lift.

British Scientists Claim Proof Universe Result of Cosmic Blast

LONDON (AP) — British scientists Friday night claimed to have established proof that the universe resulted from a cosmic explosion and is expanding at a fantastic rate.

They said the parts that make up the universe—of which the earth is a minute element—are moving outward at speeds approaching 186,300 miles a second. The universe, they said, has perhaps 10,000 million years to go before there is another cosmic event as sensational as the original explosion.

The conclusions were reached after a nine-year radiotelescope study of the universe. They were presented in a paper read at a meeting of the Royal Astonomical Society by 42-year-old Martin Ryle, professor of radio astronomy at the University of Cambridge. Ryle lead the group that made the studies at Cambridge.

The theory of an expanding universe has been held by some scientists in opposition to the "steady state" theory that the universe is comparatively stable, with now stars being created to replace dying stars.

Ryle said that as the stars and their planets and whole galaxies move outward, they leave a void in the centre. Our solar system is on the edge of this void, he said.

The solar system, only a dot in the universe, comprises the sun with the planets, including earth, revolving around it.

Ryle's observations were made with the Mullard radiotelescope, one of the largest of its type in the world and capable of detecting objects beyond galaxies that are observed optically. Calculations were made with electronic computers.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

WILL PARTICIPATE IN COMPETITION

Miss Carol Sager, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Sager of 160 Albert Street, will be one of six Canadians participating in a world-wide students' competition in hairstyling to be held in New York City on February 28th. A former student at St. Michael's High School, Miss Sager has been attending classes in hairstyling since last September. She started out under the tutelage of Mr. William Sargeant of the local Vogue Beauty Salon and is currently a student at the Bruno School of Hair Design in Toronto.

CONSERVATION PROGRAMS PLANNED

Work of conservation authorities in the Central Ontario district is to receive both radio and TV coverage within the next two days.

First, the regular "Our Valley" program will be heard over radio CJBQ at 12:40 on Sunday.

Monday at 12:10 on the CKWS TV farm show there will be a ten-minute interview with Moira Authority field officer Michael Chubb showing pictures of both the Moira and Napanee Authority projects, while on CKWS radio an hour later Authority work in general will be discussed with Mr. Chubb.

MAIN FLOW

More than 150,000 immigrants from India, China and Madeira went to Trinidad between 1845 and 1917.

Display Night Will Be Held At Moira School

Belleville and district residents will have an opportunity next Friday evening to see how the district's newest secondary school operates.

The occasion is "Display Night" at Moira Secondary School. From 7-9:30 on the evening of the 17th, the various departments of the school and several student organizations will be putting on displays and demonstrations.

Another feature is the holding of the 1961 Quinte District Science Fair. This is the first such event in the area and will bring together scientific displays prepared by students in Quinte district schools The best exhibits may later be entered in the Ontario finals at Toronto.

The displays and demonstrations will be followed by a free dance at 9:30 sponsored by the M.S.S. Student Parliament.

Senior public school children in the district are to have a chance to see the varied and interesting displays and demonstrations at a special afternoon performance next Friday.

The public is most cordially invited to attend the Display Night Program, commencing at 7 o'clock on Friday, February 17.

Fire Destroys Pump House, Contents

MARMORA — Fire of unknown origin destroyed the electric pumphouse on the farm of Amos Caverley eight miles northwest of Marmora early Wednesday morning. The family was unaware of the fire until arising when it was found the electricity was off.

The pump house was also used as a tool shed and garage. The family car, farm tools, a chain saw and the electric welding equipment and acetelyne tanks of Mr. Ray Caverley, were lost.

There was no insurance other than that on the car. One side of a hen house was seared and, had it caught fire, it is believed all the buildings would have been completely destroyed.

It is thought the fire was due to a short circuit.

Old 'Receipt' Book

1829-1850 Edition Reveals Information "In all the useful and domestic arts"

By GEO. H. CARVER

It is a hoary old tome, its pages yellowed and mellowed with the passing of 110 years

Its title, "Mackenzie's 5,000 Recipts" with an added "in all the useful and domestic arts."

It was published in 1850 by Kay and Troutman, 193 Market Street, Pittsburgh.

The book is in an excellent state of preservation. Its yellowing pages are flat without trace of dog-ear or curl. The fine six-point type is clear and legible.

Its flyleaf states it is "Kay's New and Enlarged Edition." The first edition was published in 1829.

It is, the flyleaf states, "A Complete Practical Library" relative to "agriculture, bees, bleaching, brewing, Calico printing, carving at table, cements, confectionery, cookery, crayons, dairy, diseases, distillation, dyeing, enamelling, engraving, farriery, food, gardening, gilding, glass, health, inks, etc., jewellers' pastes, lithography, medicines, metallurgy, oil colors, oils, painting, pastry, perfumery, pickling, pottery, preserving, scouring, silk, silkworms, silvering, tanning, trees of all kinds, varnishing, water colors, and wines."

Its preface reads, "The present volume has been compiled under the feeling, that if all other books of science in the world were destroyed, this single volume would be found to embody the results of the useful experience, observations and discoveries of mankind during the past ages of the world."

LIVED WELL

That sounds like a pretty broad statement, but even a cursory perusal of "Mackenzie's 5,000 Receipts" will convince a reader that the people of those days lived simply—and lived well.

Their's was no push-button existence. They took their vitamins directly from nature, not pill-boxes. They went to the fields for their food—not a deep-freeze. Their medicines were simple but sometimes fantastic, remedies, not twenty-five letter drugs.

This particular copy of "Mackenzie's 5,000 Recepits" is an American edition, with the majority of the "receipts" taken from English sources.

The book must have been a source of delight, wonder and accomplishment to the families of the mid-nineteenth century. There was something in it for every member from grandmaw to grandchild.

Father could learn the art of assaying metallic ores, brewing various brands of beer and ale, the making of vintages, various phases of agriculture, how to carve a turkey or a hind of beef, tanning hides and a dozen other things.

Mother could learn the care of bees, bleaching, painting, cookery, pastry-making, preserving and above all, believe it or not how to manufacture her own cosmetics.

There are many miscellaneous hints and "receipts" for various things.

For instance there is the "Indian cure for the Ear-ache. Take a piece of lean mutton the size of a walnut, put it into the fire and burn it for some time till it becomes reduced almost to a cinder, then put it in a clean rag and squeeze it until some moisture has appeared, which must be dropped into the ear as hot as the patient can bear it".

And "for deafness in old persons, insert a piece of cotton wool on which a little oil of cloves has been dropped or which has deen dipped into aromatic spirits of ammonia and tincture of lavender. The ear-trumpet likewise to be used occasionally".

Or if they desired a tasty dish of mock turtle-soup, they merely "take a fine calf's head, cut the meat clean from the bones, then boil the bones in a quart of water until the liquor is reduced to a pint, then season with cayene, nutmeg and mace; pour into the gravy a pint of Madeira wine and a little parsley thyme".

LOOK, MOM!

And what modern dentist will tell you in these days of "Look, Mom, no cavities," that the common strawberry is a natural dentifrice. It says in the book that "strawberry juice without any preparation dissolves the tartareous incrustations on the teeth and makes the breath sweet and agreeable."

If Gramps had a touch of rheumatism in those days, Grandmaw used this "receipt." "Take cucumbers, when full grown, and put them in a pot with a little salt; then put the pot over a slow fire and keep it there for about an hour. Remove the cucumbers and press them, putting the juice in bottles corked tight and place them in the cellar where they should remain for about a week. Then wet a flannel rag with the liquid and apply to the parts affected."

And this may or may not be a tip to horse-owning farmer readers. In those days, so the "receipt" says, if a farmer's barn caught fire with horses in it, "throw the harness or saddles to which they have become accustomed, on the backs of the horses, and they will come out of the stable as tractably as usual."

Milady kept her clothes sweet and clean in those days by a simple "receipt." "As clothes, when laid up for a time, acquire an unpleasant odor which requires considerable exposure to the atmospheric air, it will be prevented by laying recently-made charcoal between the folds of the garments; and even when the odor has taken place, the charcoal will absorb it."

The sugar-bush operators of those days got this advice: "Don't gash the tree or bore a hole and insert a tube. At the proper season for the running of the liquor, open the ground and select a tender root about the size of one or two fingers, cut off the end and raise the root sufficiently out of the ground to turn the cut end into a receiver. It will emit the liquor from the wound as freely as by either of the other methods. When it ceases to flow, bury the root again and the tree will not be hurt."

Good Curling Order of Day In Men's Spiel

The boys are "shooting" for the big money at the Quinte Curling Club today as the Men's open bonspiel enters its last day. During the past four days rinks have been eliminated and only the three-game and two-game winners are competing for the prizes in the Primary and Consolation events.

On Friday Charlie Lovett and his rink of Tommy Thompson, Bill Holway Jr. and Dave Duffy qualified in the three-game class along with Manson Robinson and his rink from Perth. The last named rink is one of the real strong rinks in the finals and the play between them and rinks from Unionville, Belleville and Trenton RCAF will be worth watching. The one-game winner was a rink skipped by Frank Creeggan of the local club.

As in the previous days the curling was of a high standard and some excellent games were witnessed by the "Behind-the-Glass" skips and who incidentally crossed up on several occasions on the shot which should be played. The finest of hospitality was seen about the clubhouse as victor and vanquished joined together to talk over the games just played. The draws were kept on time by L.E. McLean, the draw master. Mr. McLean has filled the position every year since the spiel was incepted and a better official would be hard to find. He is considerate of those who have a "beef" but when a decision is made there is no changing.

Again a large gallery was on hand but tonight when the final games are played standing room will likely be at a premium. The results of the draws were:

He is survived by his widow, Yee Gam, two sons, Wing Shung and Ng Chung, and one daughter, Rhea.

Injuries Fatal To Pedestrian Struck by Truck

Struck by a passing pickup truck while walking or standing on the Yerexville Road a mile east of Picton, Mr. Dirk Lammes, 55, of R.R. 2, Picton, died early today 12 hours after the accident.

Ontario Provincial Police at Picton said Mr. Lammes was struck by a pickup truck driven by Ernest C. Benson, R.R. 8 Picton.

Mr. Benson told police that he was driving east on the Yerexville Road when he was blinded by the lights of an approaching vehicle and failed to see the pedestrian on the south side of the road until it was too late to avoid striking him.

The injured man was taken to Prince Edward County Hospital at Picton where he died about seven o'clock this morning.

Picton Coroner Dr. F. W. Murphy said there would be an inquest.

HOLGATE. — Freeman and Helen Holgate are proud to announce the birth of their daughter, on February 9th, 1961, at the Belleville General Hospital. A sister for Brian and Terry.

RITCHIE. — Mr. and Mrs. James Ritchie of 275 George Street, are happy to announce the arrival of their chosen son, David, on Monday, February 6th, 1961.

IN MEMORIAM

GAZLEY. — In loving memory of mother, Mrs. Beatrice Gazley, who passed away February 12th, 1957.

—Always remembered by Ed, Helen and children of Hamilton.

MORGAN. — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Roy McMurray Morgan, who died so suddenly February 11th, 1951.

We think of him in silence,
His name we oft recall;
There is nothing left to answer,
But his picture on the wall.

—So sadly missed, still loved and remembered always by Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters.

PORTT. — Cherished memories of a good husband, Robert Arnold Portt, of Shannonville, who passed away February 12th, 1955.

God gave me a wonderful husband
His memory will never grow old;
He fashioned his smile out of sunshine,
He molded his heart of pure gold.
He needed a new star in heaven,
A beautiful light to shine;
So out of this old world of sorrow,
He chose that dear husband of mine.

—Ever remembered by his wife Anita.

PORTT. — In loving memory of a dear father, Robert Arnold Portt, of Shannonville, who passed away February 12th, 1955.

You were a loving father,
A pal so good and true;
A better father never lived,
Your equals are but few.

—Sadly missed by sons Thornton and Mayhew, their wives Irma and Cecelia.

SEELEY. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, James Moffatt Seeley, who passed away February 12th, 1950.

—Lovingly remembered by wife and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. B. H. Morton wish to express their sincere thanks to all relatives, neighbors and friends for the many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy. A thank you also to Dr. A. E. Miles and Thompson's Funeral Home for their thoughtfulness during their bereavement.

Purchasing Agents Meet In Kingston

The February meeting of the Purchasing Agents Association of Eastern Ontario was held in the LaSalle Hotel, Kingston, Wednesday evening. This meeting was the annual executive night and the Purchasing Agents from the district were accompanied by senior executives of all the companies represented. The meeting was addressed by Mr. J. G. little, Northern Electric Co. Ltd., Lachine, Quebec, and was introduced by Mr. F B. Sheffield, Northern Electric Co. Ltd., of Belleville.

Mr. Little's topic was "Corporate Purchasing Policy." He emphasized the significant role played by the purchasing agent interpreting the corporate policy of his company in his day to day purchasing routine. He drew attention to the fact that since he is, in many cases, the sole contact between the supplier and his company, his professional conduct and behavior must be of a very high standard as he is the guardian of his company's reputation.

Mr. Little also dwelt at some length on the desirability of Canadian companies pursuing a "Buy Canadian" policy, but he emphasized that this consideration should not override the other normal commercial considerations of price, quality and service. Mr. Little was thanked by Mr. H. S. White, Phillips Electrical Co., Brockville.

Mr. F. O'Connor, Canadian Locomotive Company, Kingston, who is booster for the annual C.A.P.A. conference, which is being held in Toronto in May, mentioned that there will be two workshop seminars held at the convention; one on "data processing" and the other on "value analysis for cost reduction."

A forum on purchasing problems was conducted by Mr. Ted Whitney, educational chairman and purchasing agent of DuPont of Canada Limited, Maitland.

SOME BELIEVE

whether Lumumba really did escape or is dead.

There has been no evidence to substantiate the widespread rumors that the escape was manufactured.

HEADING NORTH?

Katanga officials said the fugitives probably are trying to reach the Bukama area controlled by Lumumbists, 200 miles north, a distance men on foot could cover in about a week.

Alexander Quaison Sackey of Ghana, member of a UN commission attempting to bring together the Congo's warring political factions, said bluntly in Leopoldville: "I think this is a cover-up story and that he probably has been shot."

Sackey, whose government supports Lumumba, added:

"If Lumumba is dead, there will be no peace in The Congo for 20 years."

BELIEVE HE'S DEAD

Some diplomats and officials close to the Congolese government privately expressed the belief Lumumba has been dead for days. One Western diplomat said the Katanga government's release of seemingly authentic information on the escape and search could be part of an elaborate cover story.

"It could be an old wartime story of 'Shot while trying to escape,'" this diplomat said.

Yugoslavia's official Communist party newspaper, Borba of Belgrade, said in a Leopoldville dispatch the fugitives safely reached Bukava, capital of Kivu province. Bukava is about 550 miles northeast of the farmhouse prison—a long, rigorous journey through the Congo backlands.

SNOW DROUGHT

ging superintendent at the KVP mills in Espanola.

The paradoxical effect of deep frost and light snow was explained by researchers at the Dominion Experimental Farm in Ottawa.

COULD CAUSE FLOODS

A quick thaw of surface snow before deep - seated frost has melted sufficiently to allow moisture to enter the soil could bring sudden floods, followed by drought later in the summer. If more snow comes before spring, its insulating qualities would cause a gradual sub - surface thaw and a more gradual runoff.

GOT THE TIME? — Jim Jenkins (right) might well wonder just what time it is with that maze of dials and instruments facing him. The latter are just a part of the complete rallyist's kit which were installed in the 1958 Citroen in which Mr. Jenkins and Jack Dodson (left) are competing in the 1961 Canadian Winter Rally. Both are members of the Belleville Chapter of the St. Lawrence Automobile Club. They are shown just prior to their starting time in Toronto yesterday evening. (Staff photo).

Nine District Sport Car Fans Ride in Rally

At 7.44 p.m. yesterday, Jim Jenkins and Jack Dodson were the first Belleville competitors away in the eighth annual Canadian Winter Rally from its starting point at Roote's Motors in Toronto. For the next 48 hours they will be on the public roads, mostly secondary, of the province attempting to cover a 1,200 mile route precisely to the exact second as laid down by the rally organizers, the British Empire Motor Club.

Weather conditions, normally the winter rallyists' worst threat to keeping up to a set average speed over the course, were most favorable to the competitors with a clear sky, clear roads and a dropping temperature in evidence. Much can happen, however, such as the snowstorm which occurred during the last few hours of the 1960 event causing a large number of competitors to abandon any hope of finishing anywhere on time.

Messrs. Jenkins and Dodson are competing in a 1958 French Citroen which was recently fitted out with much complex navigational instrumentation to make their task a bit easier.

The next St. Lawrence Automobile Club member out was Homer Trotter, driving a 1961 Swedish Saab for the official Rover Motor Company factory team. About one hour later the first of the official St. LAC. team entry, a 1961 French Renault, driven by local competitors J. "Sandy" Smith and Jim Williamson, started out on the route which is running east out of Toronto through the Tweed area, turning about near Pembroke and returning through Bancroft before heading north to North Bay and then south again towards Toronto and the finish line.

The next local team car was 82nd on the starting list, a 1960 Corvair driven by Jack Willson and William Charlton of Kingston. They were followed in three hours' time by the last club team car, another Corvair driven by Al Edmunds and Francis Walsh, who were 177th in the starting line-up of 192 cars entered.

The St. LAC team members will be competing both individually for the overall trophy of the event and collectively against nine other club team entries.

J. W. Johnson, 18, Stirling, Killed on Way to H.S. Dance

One Stirling youth was killed and four other Stirling district young people were injured Friday night as the result of a two-car collision on the 6th concession of Rawdon.

Killed in the sideswipe collision on the crest of a hill, was John Wilbur Johnson, 18, son of Harold J. Johnson, 234 Front St., Stirling.

Injured and in Belleville General Hospital, are Alan Johnston, 17, R.R. 1, Harold, (no relation of the dead youth); Joseph Hagerman, 18, R.R. 1, Stirling; Gail Morrow, 16, of Stirling, and Kenneth M. Sine, 27, of R.R. 1, Harold, driver of the second car involved in the mishap.

The injured Johnston youth was said to be seriously hurt.

All four occupants of the Johnson car were students of Stirling High School on their way to the annual formal "At Home" dance at their school.

Their car was proceeding to pick up two other girls north of Stirling when the two vehicles slammed together at the top of a hill, about a mile east of No. 14 highway. The Johnson car was eastbound while the Sine car was going in the opposite direction.

The Johnson auto was said completely demolished, while the left front of the Sine car was crushed. The injured were taken to hospital by Duffin's Ambulance from Stirling and by private cars.

The accident was said to have occurred shortly after eight o'clock and members of the high school student body learned of the mishap as they arrived to attend their annual Valentine formal dance.

Spirits were dampened at news of the tragedy but the dance went on as scheduled.

Provincial police from Madoc investigated.

John Wilbur Johnson was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnson of Stirling, where he was born and had resided all his life. Besides his sorrowing parents, he leaves to mourn his death seven sisters, Mrs. Stanley (Joyce) Williams, R.R. 3, Stirling, Mrs. Gerald (Eleanor) Morrison of Eldorado, Mrs. Carlton (Joan) Phillips of Batawa, Margaret and Mary of Belleville and Karen and Kathy at home, and four brothers, Keith, R. R. 2, Holloway, Ralph, R. R. 4, Stirling, Ronald of Chatham, N.B., and Wesley of Teeswater, Ont.

The dead youth was a Grade 13 student at Stirling High School and a member of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling.

Resting at the Duffin Funeral Home, Stirling; the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this issue.

Film Festival Next Week Worth Seeing

Something for everybody has been the aim of the Belleville and District Film Council in planning for next week's film festival being staged in the auditorium of the Public Library, Feb. 13-18th.

The festival gets under way Monday evening with a flashback from 40 years ago entitled "The Good Bright Days" beginning with the Armistice of 1918 and ending with the great economic boom in the late 1920's. On the same program is a film entitled "Craftsmen of Canada" and a short showing Ontario's winter wonderland for skiers.

Tuesday evening's offering is for the more serious minded with films depicting the scientific progress of the modern day.

"Man in Space" is the feature showing in which viewers are taken on a rocket trip into outer space, experiencing all the attendant problems such as weightlessness, and the problems of good clothes and living conditions. "The Fossil Story" and "Stepping Along with TV," show other scientific progress of the present age.

Thursday is Arts and Crafts night with "Handicrafts of Ceylon" being the feature film. "City Out of Time" and "A is for Architecture" complete the showing.

Friday evening is variety night and winds up the film festival program for the week. Scenic views of Switzerland and romance in Autsria are two of the topics treated while "Adventuring in Conservation" combines the values of outdoor life and camping with the responsibilities for conservation of the nation's resources.

The week's film program is well worth seeing. Everyone is welcome!

Home, School Assoc. Holds Founder's Meet

TRENTON — The annual Founder's Day meeting of the North Trenton Home and School Association was held recently with 52 members, nine guests and 48 members of the school choir present.

The president, Mrs. G. Brown, was in charge of the meeting.

A letter from the Belleville and District Council concerning a leadership training course was read. This event will take place Feb. 24-25.

North Trenton School "Fun Fair" will be held on April 14, the members decided.

A short resume of the film content of "Dangerous Stranger" was given by Mrs. F. Nokes.

Principal Jack Delong introduced music supervisor Mrs. Jane Rathbun to the assembly and she, in turn, introduced members of the choir. Several selections were sung by the choir.

The Belleville and District Home and School Council members present were introduced to the Trenton association members. They were Mrs. Jones, Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Whitaker, Mrs. Stenson, Mrs. Digby and Mrs. Fort.

The Belleville members presented a playette, "Frustrated Home and School."

After the play, the members were separated into groups in which such subjects as program planning, duties of presidents and other executive members, and the value of various committees, were discussed.

Reports were read by Mr. Hoyt, Mrs. Jones, Mr. Cunnell, Mr. Delong, Mrs. Stenson and Mrs. McDonald.

Mrs. Brown thanked all who had contributed to the evening's program and Mrs. H. Brooks specially thanked the "actors" who had presented the playette.

Teacher-Board Group Holds First Meeting

TRENTON— The first meeting of the newly-formed Teacher-Board Relations Committee at Trenton high school was held Thursday. The committee was formed with a view to letting two groups get together for friendly discussion, thus cementing relations between the board members and the teaching staff.

Representing the teaching staff were the principal, W. J. Houston, vice-principal, John Garrett, Mrs. J. Robertson, T. W. Spear and C.A. Wells.

Representing the Board of Education were Mrs. G. Griffiths, L. G. Phinney, Dr. T. A. McNally, George Greer and Rev. Ronald Reid, who, in the absence of J. C. Dobby, acted as chairman.

Mr. Garrett, speaking for the teachers, suggested that more cafeteria and locker space was desirable.

Mr. Houston spoke briefly, stressing the value of maintaining sound educational values in the school.

Mr. Reid assured the teaching staff of every assistance from the board.

Who Will Pay Ambulance Bills Is Not Clear

TRENTON—Councillor N J. McNair said last night that the town will make up the difference in higher prices charged by the John R. Bush Funeral Home of Belleville for providing temporary ambulance service.

But Councillor Lloyd Worrall said the town will pay no part of it.

And Mayor James MacDonald said council would have to decide, although previously he had said at public meetings that the town would not be responsible for individual ambulance bills.

The Weaver Funeral Home, which operated an ambulance service for years, ceases operating at 6 p.m. today. Weaver was reported to have charged $8 per call, but Bush's fee has not been announced. However, it will be higher because of the greater distance involved A usually reliable source said Bush will probably charge about $15 a call.

$2,000 Damage In House Fire

TRENTON — Fire of undetermined origin early today caused extensive damage to the second storey of a large frame house at 16 Cedar Street, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Beauleau and their three children.

There were no injuries, but damage was estimated at more than $2,000.

Mrs. Beauleau and one of the children are visiting in Montreal.

Mr. Beauleau, who rented the house from Walter Wrightman, took his children out of the house as soon as he discovered the fire at 4.30 a.m. They are staying with neighbors.

The downstairs portion of the house was damaged by smoke.

PEARSON TO ATTEND

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson and Paul Martin, Liberal MP for Essex, have confirmed they will attend the March 11 convention here of the Southwestern Ontario Liberal Association, it was learned Friday.

High School Activities

By SANDY BROWN
TRENTON

Two senior plays will go on stage at 8 p.m. Monday. The first, a murder story, is directed by Mr. Winn. The cast of this play, "Shadow Of A Dream," includes Judy Wightman, Eloise Turtle, Lorraine Farrar, Reg Mace and Douglas Sayles.

The second, a comedy, "The Dear Departed," is directed by Miss Davidson. The cast: F. Johnston, Betty Caveny, Sandy Brown, Hubert Campbell, Ian Stirling and Vern Caveny.

Musical interludes will be provided by the school choir. All proceeds from the night's entertainment will go to the Trenton and District Association for Retarded Children.

When the girls' basketball team met Picton last week, sparks flew. We lost the junior game but won the senior.

Scores: senior — Trenton 56, Picton 11; junior — Picton 25, Trenton 20.

We'll win them all, next time.

Our boys' basketball team didn't do as well as the girls'. They dropped games to BCI last week.

Scores: Seniors — BCI 58, Trenton 33; Junior: BCI 57, Trenton 10.

Plans for holding a Valentine's dance at Teenaires have been dropped in favor of a Beatnik Dance on February 24. Those attending are asked to dress as "brats." It is hoped that a well-known Belleville rock 'n' roll orchestra will play for the dance.

There is an old fable which says that if a bird flies across your path on Valentine's Day, you will see your true love before the sun sets. Happy birdwatching, everyone!

Cattle Died As Result Of Rabies

An incidence of rabies in the Ayrshire cattle herd of Ross Ketcheson of Moira, has been disclosed as result of tests by experts at the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

Early in December Mr Ketcheson lost four cattle the animals dying suddenly.

The heads were sent to Guelph by Dr. Keith Harrison, V.S. and the report received recently by The Health of Animals Division of the Department of Agriculture at Belleville, disclosed the four animals had died of rabies.

One of the animals definitely died of rabies and the other three had symptoms, the report stated.

The four cattle were valued at between $800 and $1.000.

It is believed the cattle had been bitten either by a skunk or raccoon which are known carriers of the disease.

TWO SEATS FILLED

PELEE ISLAND (CP) — Two vacant seats on this island township's five-member school board have been filled following the fourth nomination meeting. Henry Verbeck and Laurence Bauhaus both qualified Friday. Three earlier members failed to find nominees to the boarl.

Work and Relief

Chippawa, a Niagara Peninsula village, has decided that all persons receiving relief will in future have to work for the money they receive, unless they can produce a medical certificate that they are not fit to work.

One's first reaction may well be one of applause if one believes, as we do, that it is desirable nobody should get something for nothing, at the expense of the taxpayer.

Older citizens, though, may feel a trifle uneasy. They will remember the "make-work" schemes of the depression, the devices by which relief recipients were required to "earn" the meagre aid received but which so often robbed this work of all dignity because it served no useful social purpose. Lacking such a purpose the enforced labor came very near to being a punishment for poverty.

If a municipality has work which needs to be done, and sufficient funds to pay for it being done, it should hire men and women to do it, at the going rates for such labor. The men and women it hires should be selected from those who are unemployed, without private means and not eligible for unemployment insurance. The money so spent will serve a double purpose—getting work done which needs to be done and providing jobs for citizens who urgently need them.

Chippawa's plan comes close to meeting this standard as far as men are concerned. They will undertake such jobs as snow removal, tree cutting and cleaning catch basins, all useful projects. The rate of pay, though, may be open to question—$1.25 an hour may not be the going rate for unskilled labor in the area.

Chippawa, however, will also require women receiving relief to work for 16 hours a month, washing windows and cleaning the town hall. We presume that the women included will be only the heads of families, or single women on relief. Surely the wives of men receiving relief will not be included. Now many of the women who are the heads of families have a big enough task as it is, raising a family without the assistance of a husband and doing this within the tight confines of a relief budget, which means that they will have to skimp and save, darn and make over clothes and generally labor much harder as a housewife than the wives of employed workers. Surely to require them to put in an extra sixteen hours' work a month is to pile an extra bale of straw on an already overburdened camel.

Relief, unlike unemployment insurance, is not granted as a matter of right. The family which receives this aid must prove destitution. Providing work for those on relief is admirable. Requiring work of those already overworked, as are some women on relief, or forcing the idle to labor at sub-normal wages is far from admirable. The line which distinguishes one policy from the other will sometimes be so narrow as to be almost indistinguishable. That, however, is not a reason for disregarding it, but rather a very powerful reason for extreme caution in devising a policy.

Value should be given for value received, wherever possible; this applies just as much to the municipality giving full value for work done as it does to the unemployed working, where possible, for assistance received from the municipality.

Whetting the Knife?

President Kennedy is getting "a good press" in Canada. This is likely to continue.

The same may not be true of the U.S.

Here are three sentences from sixteen items entitled "Washington Whispers" in "U.S. News and World Report," one of the nation's most influential magazines:

"Richard E. Neustadt, White House aide who has written a book on presidential power, is being described as 'organizer of disorganization'."

"We get this from overseas: Adlai Stevenson, in a talk with a European statesman, dismissed Secretary of State Dean Rusk as 'a technician and bureaucrat'."

"Robert Kennedy, Attorney General and the President's brother, is seeing more of the President than any other official."

There are other items with the same subtle twist, producing a pattern of suggestion that all is not well in the Kennedy administration.

THEORY AND LIFE

"Gambling serves a useful purpose," said Professor J. Cohen of Manchester. "It gives hope to the poor, and those who lose can console themselves by saying that luck smiles only on imbeciles." His students took up a collection to buy him a sweepstakes ticket. The ticket won a small prize. The professor has bought another. (London Daily Sketch).

Dishonesty Spreading

Brockville Recorder and Times

An Ontario school principal pleaded guilty the other day to a charge of theft of $53,593 in school funds. And in Sheldon, Ohio, a woman bank cashier is alleged to have embezzled$2,000,000 of the assets of the Sheldon National Bank.

These might seem like isolated breaches of the law in two seperate communities, if it were not for the fact that they can be more accurately termed part of a trend involving corruption and dishonesty in North American society generally.

Confirmation of this is to be found in the current issue of "Redbook" magazine which contains interviews with eight prominent Americans who spoke out against widespread dishonesty and growing acceptance of it in American life. They are Margaret Mead, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, Fairfax Cone, Phyllis McGinley, Senator Margaret Chase Smith, Judge Leonard Hand, Agnes E. Meyer and Edward R. Murrow. Most of them felt there was more personal dishonesty and more tolerance of it than in previous generations. The idea that some people tend to cheat when they feel cheated was expressed frequently. Those interviewed said that while cheating occurred against such as government, insurance companies, schools, corporations, large department or chain stores, honesty between individuals was as strong as ever. Some related personal dishonesty to prohibition and others to the last war, and the article refers to such public scandals as rigged television quiz shows and payoffs to disc jockeys by record producers (payola).

Advertising executive Fairfax Cone observed: "People today expect to be cheated by easy-credit salesmen for cars, furniture, real estate and a long list of high-cost, long-term purchases." But theologian Reinhold Niebur takes a slightly more tolerant view: "Our whole intricate system of credit—of verbal and written contracts—depends on the belief that most people are honest most of the time." However, on the debit side again, poet and author Phyllis McGinley says: "Honor is no longer a fashionable virtue. Most boys today don't want to grow up to be heros; they want to become wealthy and retire early."

From this we may deduce that as life becomes more complex and impersonal the field is more open than ever for dishonest dealings. In many fields of endeavour people are finding that honesty is no longer the best policy. It is so easy to generalize, though, and to believe that all people and things are cast in the same die. But they are not; there are still people in the world who are honest, who believe in dealings. If there were not we would have descended into social anarchy long ago.

Flying Style Feather Beds

Montreal Star

Whatever inferences may have been carelessly drawn from protests of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association over the size of the crew on TCA's new fleet of Vanguards, the fact is those protests were carefully worded and did not suggest any sacrifice of safety.

The Vanguard is similar in design to the famous Viscount. It is, however, much larger and faster. Because it is, fewer of them are needed to do the work done in the past by the Viscounts, Constellations and North Stars. As a result, fewer pilots are needed to perform the required work.

Thus when the pilots say there should be three of them used on an aircraft built and certified for two, they play a familiar tune. It sounds amazingly like the claim of the firemen that diesel locomotives shouldn't be operated without a man to stoke the boilers which aren't there. There's not even a place on the Vanguard flight deck where a third pilot might handle the controls.

With captain pilots averaging $18,500 per year on domestic service, and first officers $10,000, this looks as though it might be the most expensive bid for feather-bedding we have ever had in Canada.

February 11th, 1931

The Capitol Theatre here, which was built in 1926 by Robert Weller of Trenton, and at that time was a silent movie theatre, has been sold by Mr. Weller to Moorehead and Filman of London, Ont. We are informed that the price paid was $80,000. The new owners now conduct theatres in London, Brampton, Orillia and St. Thomas. The Capitol will undergo extensive repairs and alterations and numerous improvements will be added. Mr. C. Gilpin-Homes of London will be the new manager here.

Mr. W. S. Exley has returned to the city after spending a few days in Napanee.

Miss Luella Young, Reg. N., is the guest of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. James McCreary of Latta.

The Salvation Army Corps in this city celebrated the 47th anniversary of its activities here by engaging in a grand musical festival at which Mr. E. V. Illsey, of the Standard Bank, acted as chairman. The event was graced by the presence of Envoy Burditt, who also preached at the anniversary service.

Miss Helen Palen is home from Toronto on a short visit.

An automobile, the property of Mr. L. Emerson of Thomasburg, was taken from near the Griffin Theatre last evening and was found eventually by the police. It is thought that some boys took it for a joy ride.

Mr. C. Johnson of Boswell Street will be out of town this week.

Mrs. Elizabeth Moxam of this city is visiting Mrs. W. H. Palmer in Brockville.

Mrs. W. W. Knight and son, Harold, are visiting friends in Havelock.

Belleville market prices:—eggs 50 cents to 55 cents per dozen; butter 58 cents to 60 cents per pound; chickens $2.50 to $3.50 per pair; potatoes $1.25 per bag.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

HE BLONGS TO THE AGES

The rare spirit of Abraham Lincoln blooms afresh with every February 12th. Men of great knowledge never live so long in fame as those of great heart. This is not difficult to understand, for we live in a world of feeling.

The most extraordinary character in modern history is that of "Honest Abe." Few men ever came into the world with less opportunity. Born in that log cabin, hidden in the backwoods, the boy was left motherless at age nine. But the impression of his mother's love was placed deeply in his heart. Years afterward he exclaimed that all he was, or ever hoped to be, he owed to her.

To think of Lincoln, in this year of 1961, is to ponder on one of the strongest though gentlest men who ever lived. He was always tolerant, fair, forgiving, mindful of his own shortcomings, though never lacking in courage when he felt the right time had come.

He was always thinking of others. When they nominated him for President of the United States, work reached him at his Springfield law office. Immediately he told his friends, "there is a little woman down the street who will want to hear about this!"

How fortunate for the world today that so many fine portraits of the immortal Lincoln are preserved. There is no more expressive face in history. It is, first of all, a humanitarian face — gentle, sincere, intelligent, sad — yet showing every evidence of humor. We know smiles often played among its deep wrinkles. And sympathy bathed his whole gaunt frame. Such a face will always be studied with keen interest. It is the face for any child to trust, and for strong men to look up to in reverence, and with pride.

As the years continue to roll along, the face and memory of Abraham Lincoln will ever continue to bury their beauty and lustre in the heart of all races and all creeds! Again, in Staton's words, "he belongs to the ages."

Letters To The Editor

Replies to Letter On Donating Blood

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

In answer to the letter "Thinks Donors Should Be Paid For Blood," is is a good thing that not everyone is so narrow-minded regarding the giving of blood or perhaps the writer would not be here now writing such rubbish. The good Lord gave blood to us free of charge; how then can one be reluctant in giving it to someone else free of charge. No one who gives blood is wasting his time, as this life-giving substance is used to save human lives. The compenation comes in the feeling one gets knowing that one is able to give this to prolong life or even save a fellow human from death.

One can't measure this in dollars or cents or material compensation!

Most hospitals (speaking from experience), do not charge one cent for blood, nor is the recipient obligated in any way to repalce this blood used.

Regarding the writer's emergency treatment two years ago; if he was able to stand while the required information was obtained, then I am sure that he and I have two completely different conceptions of the word "emergency."

A loss of blood is quickly replaced by the body, a mere pint, (500 cc) is barely missed as the blood-forming organs are standing by to replace quickly blood lost quickly. I would say that 99 44-100 percent of symptoms attributed to the loss of a pint of blood donated are purely psychological.

As long as there are people who think as the writer does and measure compensation in material gain (or until blood can be replaced by tomato juice), there will be a shortage of donors. However, it seems that recently there has been an increase in blood donors at clinics run compeltely by volunteer workers who receive no material compensation for their services.

You have my sympathy.

Dislikes Criticism Of Concert Here

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

Surely it should not be necessary for your erudite Mr. Lang to assail the reputation of a talented artist in order to establish a point already conceded, viz., that his knowledge of music is profound.

The generous applause offered to Madame Henriot-Schweitzer on Monday evening gave ample evidence that, opposed to an enthusiastic audience, he was in a minority of one.

For my own part, the price of admission was small, indeed, for the sheer delight of hearing this artist's enchanting interpretation of Debussy's "Claire de Lune". It was moonlight in sound and altogether delightful.

By his unwarranted aspersion Mr. Lang has done a grave disservice alike to his reputation as a critic and to the cause of musical appreciation in the city.

Frank J. Leach,
3 Wellington Cres.

Editor's Note: Professional artists, by reason of their calling, expect criticism from press reviewers, and in most instances, benefit from such reviews. A critic must be fair and have an expert knowledge of his subject, whether it be music, the theatre or literature. If a music critic were to gloss over glaring mistakes or a poor performance his value as a critic would be useless, and he would properly be held up to ridicule by those who do have a knowledge of the subject. It is a case of "you're damned if you do, and damned if you don't". In any case, The Ontario Intelligencer welcomes letters of comment such as Mr. Leach has submitted.

Canadian PLACE NAMES

GODERICH

The county town of Huron county, Ont. It was founded in 1827 by John Galt commissioner of the Canada Company. It was named for Rt. Hon. John Robinson, Viscount Goderich, a distinguished member of the British House of Commons. He later became secretary for the colonies and was given credit for a genuine desire to remove all grievances of the Canadian people, even though he received scant support.

To Your Good Health

Bread With Meat, Vegetables Not Essential in Child's Diet

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Would you write about the value of bread as part of our daily meals?

"If you say people can get along without bread, I'll stop worrying, but I have always thought it was one of the essentials.

"Our son and daughter-in-law do not allow their youngsters to eat bread with their meals — they are told to leave the bread alone until they eat their meat and vegetables, and by that time they do not want it. To me, this seems like a form of cruelty to deprive them of bread and butter. — Mrs. Y. Y."

Far be it from me to criticize bread which, with good reason, has been called the staff of life. However, bread doesn't necessarily mean whatever one-pound loaf you happen to prefer.

Bread in the broad sense means grain, and grains furnish the bulk of the world's food supply. More grain could be the salvation of some of the problems. Not all parts of the world are as fortunate as we are.

Bread — or grain — is primarily carbohydrate, which furnishes fuel for the human "engine," along with some vitamins. Although modern refining methods remove vitamins, it is common practice of bakeries to enrich bread to get the vitamins up to par or better. So we needn't worry about that.

The question is whether younsters are being deprived of their rights if they don't have bread and butter along with their meat, vegetables, milk and fruit. No, I don't think so, because the youngsters can fill up on bread afterward, if they want it.

We can also substitute the word cereal for bread. Breakfast foods qualify. So does pastry, whether it be cake, cookies, piecrust or something else.

As a rule of thumb, we say that an adult usually needs three slices of bread a day, in one form or another — stuffing in the turkey, noodles in the soup, macaroni, the bun for a hamburger. For King Alfred it was oat cakes; for somebody in Japan it is rice. Or flour in the gravy, or crackers, toast, or whatnot.

An interesting experiment once showed that children, allowed to choose food as they pleased, would eat carbohydrates (starches, sugars, etc.) until they were too full to care about meat and vegetables. But allowed to eat all the protein they wanted (meat, eggs, fish, etc.) they stopped when they had enough, and then filled up on starches.

In short, the idea of putting dessert at the end of a meal instead of the beginning makes good scientific sense.

So don't worry a bit about youngsters who are told to eat their meat and vegetables first. They'll get enough bread, in one form or another, to fill their needs.

I'd like to add an interesting if not vital point: The "satiety value" (appetite-satisfying ability) of carbohydrate is not very high. Bread contains about 50 per cent carbohydrate and three to five per cent fat. The "satiety value" increase if more protein or fat is added — butter on bread, meat in the sandwich. That's why bread and butter is such a standard combination, and why the sandwich is so popular.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What about removal of adenoids for a child who has an allergy in his nose? — Mrs. J. M."

I wouldn't expect it to do anything about the allergy at all. But if the adenoids are infected or enlarged to the extent of interfering with his breathing, then removal makes sense.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

GOD'S REAL TEMPLES

Twice in the Book of Acts (7:48; 17:24) we find the statement that God does not dwell in temples made with hands. Where then does He dwell?

We know so little about the nature of things material and spiritual that we find it hard to apply words like "where," "what," and "how," when we speak about God. He is spirit; we are part spirit and part flesh. He controls the universe; we live on an insignificant planet presided over by what one of the great American astronomers calls, "a run-of-the-mill pale star" — namely, the sun. Our experience and the divine experience are by their very nature so fundamentally and essentially different that we find it hard to understand divine things save as they are brought to us in the teachings of Jesus and in the continual ministry to our hearts of the Holy Spirit.

But we can say two things about the dwelling place of God. The first is that He is in heaven. What is heaven? We can only say that it is a place consistent in glory and appointment to the power and majesty of God.

But let us never feel that God is removed from us. His most important dwelling place so far as we are concerned is the human heart. We are so constructed by God himself that if we permit Him to do so, the Most High God comes into ouu Most High God comes into our happiness, peace, security, and

BY GREGORY CLARK

A considerable number of us are like blue jays. We resent being shown consideration.

When you put food out for the birds at this time of year, all species save one appear to be grateful. If there are any loose pigeons around the neighborhood, they take it for granted you are thinking of them first and foremost, and they come enthusiastically to the feast and try to get it all before the starlings wake up.

The starlings and sparrows are about evenly matched. There is a humble, slightly incredulous air about them as they arrive, hasty but circumspect, at the outskirts of the feast; and they hesitate a little before intruding on the pigeon. If you try to shoo off the pigeons, it is the starlings and sparrows who assume it is they you are referring to.

The wild birds, the chickadees, nuthatches and other precious wanderers of winter come to the feeding station, even for the hundredth time, as if it were something beyond comprehension, another of the acts of God.

But the blue jay is a character. He doesn't want to accept a gift. It goes against the grain. If he can't steal it, he doesn't want it. Thus he flits furtively around the neighborhood, uttering clandestine calls and darts in to grab a peanut in defiance of you and all generosity. And when he reaches a safe distance, he gives a strident cry of derision. He has outwitted you.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

SNOWY INVADERS

By WINNIFRED WILSON

Very frequently Mother Nature colors birds to suit their surroundings: brown for ground feeders, sand color for shore birds, olive green for tree dwellers, white for those that spend much time in a snowy setting. Certain birds of the north country change with the seasons, as ptarmigans and snow buntings. The big, 25-inch snowy owls of our frigid northland wear the same costume all year round, because the only time they leave their tundra home to visit us our landscape is white with snow. A few are entirely white; most are barred or flecked with dark. Bird students tell us that males are whiter than females, but that all tend to grow whiter as they grow older.

In 1958 members of a Geophysical Year party found snowy owls even at the upper end of Ellesmere Island, near the north pole. We are intrigued by their strange southern migrations. Each late autumn just a few individuals find their way down to civilization, but every four years or so they come down in such numbers that we feel there must be a good reason for the move to settlements in eastern Canada and occasionally the eastern states.

ARE TWO THEORIES

There are two theories. Some authorities contend that snowy owls leave their homes when lemmings, on which they depend for food, fail. Other scientists are just as sure that the supply of lemmings has nothing to do with it. They say that every four years the snowy owl population rises to its peak; then the birds must fan out and forage elsewhere.

More than bird watchers should welcome an invasion of snowy owls. They pick up ducks maimed but not killed outright by hunters, and catch mice in the farmers' haystacks and straw piles. When they get to our settlements they make for city dumps — a paradise because of the rat population.

BETHEL-ZION M.B.

HALLOWAY — The January meeting of the Bethel-Zion Mission Band was opened by singing the Mission Band hymn and repeating the Purpose.

In the absence of Mrs. P. Ray, Helen Chambers acted as pianist. There were 16 members present.

The election of officers resulted as follows: president, Helen Chambers; secretary, Doreen Mellon and treasurer, Sheila Ray.

It was decided to hold the meetings the third Sunday each month.

The study book for this year is "Adventures With the Bible." Mrs. Simmons read the story about how a little Korean boy earned a Bible for his own.

Paul Tummon and Barry Ray distributed the "World Friends" and Sheila Ray received the collection.

The meeting closed with prayer.

St. Andrew's WMS Sponsors Most Successful Valentine Tea

Little rosy cupids occupied strategic vantage points on the tall white pillars, and generous red hearts adorned the walls in the Sunday School room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday afternoon for an attractive St. Valentine tea, sponsored by the WMS of the church.

The focal point of interest was the delightfully appointed tea table with its Scotch lace cloth underlined with red, and centred by a gorgeous arrangement of white and red carnations with sprays of British Columbia huckleberry, flanked by tall red candles in silver candelabra. The silver services and the daintily bordered serviettes with scattered hearts completed a pretty setting.

About the large assembly room the quartet guest tables also had their Valentine motifs in specially made tea cloths of fluted crepe paper, each corner ornamented with a cutout red heart.

GUESTS RECEIVED

Into this cheerful atmosphere the many guests were welcomed by the receptionists, Mrs. M. Barlow, president of the society; Mrs. R. D. MacLean, wife of the pastor, and Mrs. W. H. V. Walker, wife of the assistant pastor.

Those who presided at the tea table included: Mrs. R. Michaud and Mrs S. Hay; Mrs. H. Williamson and Mrs. H. Hutchinson, while those inviting to the tea room were: Mrs. F. Parsons and Mrs. W Mantle.

Replenishing: Miss H. Blair, Mrs. E. Pigden, Mrs. J. Miller and Mrs. J. MacKenzie. Serving were: Mrs. D. Elvidge, Mrs. R. White, Mrs. A. Armstrong, Mrs. P. Bondy and Mrs. G. Shaw; Mrs. R. Jones, Miss J. MacIntosh, Mrs. R. Arnott, Miss L. Burnside and Mrs. H. Scott.

REPLENISHING TRAYS

Engaged in keeping the attractive trays replete with dainty goodies were: Mrs. O. J. Reid, Mrs. R. Carmichael, Mrs. W. Mantle, Mrs. J. Webb, Mrs. A. Taylor and Mrs. A. Murray.

Those in the kitchen were: Mrs. N. H. McConnell, Mrs. F. Brooks and Mrs. F. Douglas; Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. E. Shier and Mrs. J. Browning.

The treasurers were: Mrs. D. Fleming and Mrs. F. Parsons.

DELICIOUS HOMECOOKING

A most enticing table of delicious homecooking drew many customers, and soon the heart-adorned cloth was bereft of its dainties, which included glistening honey-dipped buns, chocolate cup cakes, raisin muffins, individual date loaves, taffy tarts, apple, lemon pies, bran and raisin loaves, a large heart-shaped chocolate cake with walnut meats; angel cakes, oatmeal cookies and jars of peach marmalade and various relishes. In charge of these were Mrs. H. Yorke, Mrs. D. Kane, Mrs. J. Darvell and Mrs. I. Eggleton.

SWEET TOOTH MECCA

A candy table, centred by a lovely white chrysanthemum, had cellophane bags of fruit drops, chocolate fudge, licorice all-sorts, Turkish delight, divinity fudge, maple creams, a real mecca for those possessing the "sweet tooth." Mrs. G. Ryan and girls of the Explorers were in charge.

The tea was well patronized and culminated most successfully, financially.

Grateful to Helpers

By ALMA MASON

This is a grateful tribute to many women, a vast army of them the world over, who are not only housewives and mothers, but the doers of small, kindly deeds for all those within their scope of thought and vision. They are the unsung, untiring heroines of this world. Without them, life would lose its lustre and savor and would be dull indeed.

Today was such a busy day and hours sped by on wings. From dawn 'til dark I packed the day just full of little things, and now I'm weary and the softness of my white bed calls, but there are still some tasks to do before the long night falls. That pudding must be taken to the neighbor across the street. The shoes, too small for Johnny, that will warm his cousin's feet, must be wrapped and sent tomorrow, so he won't feel the cold, or winter snows will freeze his toes (he's only four years old.)

And oh! I promised Nancy I'd lend her my new black dress. She said, "I can't afford to buy one now, I must confess," and Helen has the measles and that book so full of cheer is lying closed and idle; it's much better there than here.

My darning box is full of socks to mend for Bill and Tom. I told them both I'd mend for them while they were away from home. Perhaps my own small boy someday will need a kindness too, and someone else's mother will for him his mending do.

Now, while my hands are busy I must plan a dinner to cook tomorrow evening for six or eight or nine who need a wholesome, tempting meal (perhaps I'll have ice cream, for folks don't get real tasty things when salary cheques are lean).

Oh, dear, my back is aching and I have such a throbbing head. I simply must put down my work and trundle off to bed. Tomorrow is another day just filled brimful of work, and Mother hands are busy hands that must not ever shirk.

When morning sun spreads wide red arms above the snowy ground; the hands of my big kitchen clock start flying 'round and 'round; and as the shining kettle a song to new days sings; I start to do the trivial tasks, the hosts of little things.

I sit and wonder sometimes, if the kindness of our Lord, was taught by doing little things — a smile — a loving word — for He found time in Galilee to break a neighbor's bread; to stop and smile, to talk a while and stroke a childish head. As Jesus is remembered by His simple, loving deeds, these little things were planted in our hearts to grow as seeds, and when they flower into acts of sacrificing love, I'm sure that life is richer and that He smiles from above.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

It was almost five months ago that we were initiated into to be fascinated and amazed the do-it-yourself laundry fraternity and have never ceased by it. If you like to watch people and do not mind being watched by people, this is the place for you.

Last week we saw a new combination of family members, at least new to us. This was a carefree, garrulous grandfather with three grandchildren in tow; from all the evidence. grandfather was having a wonderful time being useful and talking. Minding the children was just incidental. Probably every woman in the building was imagining the mother of the family either having a bit of rest or hurrying to get things done while everybody was out from under foot. Meanwhile the children were in heaven, drinking one soft drink after another.

Then the laundry it was nearly done and grandfather was having difficulty folding the sheets. A large young man, waiting for the dryer, came to the rescue very expertly. This exchange followed:

G.F. "Say, you're good at that."

L.Y.M. "I ought to be, I used to help my mother housekeep for a big family and I've folded lots of these things. Now I have four children of my own. How old are you?"

G.F. "I'm seventy-three."

L.Y.M. "Well, I just hope I'm as spry as you when I am that age."

In jig time the clothes were folded, grandfather gathered the laundry and his brood while the large young man filled the dryer and stood watching it.

The woman on the other side of us turned and said, "Those dryers are as bad as television — I watch the clothes tumbling over and over till my eyes hurt." There we were lined up watching something that moved, much as we would watch a fire, water, movies or TV.

You will find many women from the country using these facilities at this time since water is so scarce all over the vicinity.

Another thought about this particular business was brought out in a conversation with a woman who has done a great deal of work in the community. We were discussing the new series of lectures being conducted by a group of citizens at the Belleville General Hospital in Education Hall, along the lines of marriage counselling in questions of law, finance, food, education, relationship of parent and child etc.

This friend had had some experience with another group of lectures of this kind and said that they could be both preventive and remedial. She said it was so sad and depressing to see couples, many of them married too young, getting into difficulties and not making a go of it. Then she said:

"But, you know, I get some re-assurance when I go to the do-it-yourself laundry and see so many other young couples working happily together and helping each other. It's very warming."

At any rate, the patrons are looking after their own laundry so that Stephen Leacock's words of 'Winnowed Wisdom' may not hold true. He said: "The general idea, of course, in any first class laundry, is to see that no shirt or collar ever comes back twice."

White Shrine Sponsors 'Men's Night'

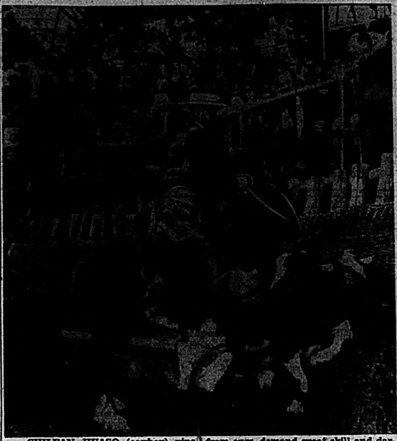
In the I.O.O.F. hall on Wednesday the Bethlehem White Shrine of Jerusalem, held its regular monthly meeting, with Soj. Martha Armstrong, WHP, presiding, assisted by Soj. J. Armstrong, WOS. There was a large attendance.

The ceremonial was conferred on six new members. After business all Sojourners adjourned to the upper hall.

As this was men's night, the program was under the leadership of Soj. Clifford Smith and Soj. Morley Hick. The song contest was won by Soj. M. Smale, who was presented with a box of chocolates.

Refreshments were served most originally by Sojs. Smith and Cooper, who carried a huge iron cauldron, suspended on a pole, from which was ladled succulent Boston baked beans with plenty of pork. This was followed by pumpkin pie, tea and coffe and fancy cakes.

All voted men's night a great success.



CHILEAN HUASO (cowboy) pins steer to wall with horse's shoulder in rodeo exhibition of South American horsemanship. Rodeos, while different from ours, demand great skill and daring. Huaso must now release steer and pin him twice again to gain his points.

Chilean Customs Offer Lift For Worldly-Weary Traveller

By Shirley And Bob Sloane

For those willing to face the obstacles, real and imagined, South America may be the "someplace different" the worldly-weary are always looking for. Take the Chilean rodeo, which will give you something to talk about back in Ontario.

It demands a unique brand of horsemanship. The huaso (cowboy), with a teamate, must chase the bull to the end of the arena and pin it with his horse's shoulder, free it, and do it twice again. Points are awarded on speed and dexterity. If the quarry quits after one or two runs, it goes against him as well as the huaso; marked as an animal of low spirit, it is turned out to pasture instead of to stud.

The huaso, like our cowpoke, is a colorful part of Chilean culture, as is the Argentine gaucho. With his sombrero, multicolored manta (a chest-length poncho that protects him against the copious rains of southern Chile's cattle country), wooden stirrups and huge, ornate spurs that jingle-jangle-jingle for the lively cueca dance, he is an integral part of most folk festivals.

UNUSUAL SOUND

The cueca is a handkerchief-waving affair common to various parts of South America, and is a takeoff on a courtship between a rooster and a hen. In Chile the musical accompaniment, besides the ubiquitous guitars, often includes a harp borrowed from the Irish, symbolic of the many non-Spanish influences on Chilean culture. Its sound in Latin American music is unlike anything you've ever heard.

In both Chile and Argentina, the asado — barbecue — is a feature of the fiesta life. Slow roasted on spits set at an angle over open flames, the meat doesn't taste much like ours. The Argentines stick a hunk between two chunks of bread and their teeth and slice it off with a knife. The technique is not recommended for novices who need their noses and lips.

Chilean wines are among the best in the world, especially the white. Chileans warm their red wines slightly, and some times mix the red with crushed strawberries, the white with a pulpy fruit called cherimoya.

For serious drinking they take to pisco, a highly distilled clear brandy that gringos perfer shaken up in a sour. For a mild and subtle change of pace, we invented something we called the "Pisco Maria," a Bloody Mary with pisco instead of vodka.

It may not change the drinking habits of the western hemisphere but, like South America itself, it's something different.

Our brief visit to Chile and Argentina registered one unmistakable point with us: South Americans are almost desperately hungry for the attention and affection of their "big brothers to the north."

It is an attention and affection they are eager to return without the attached strings that have been called bonds in other parts of the world.

HISTORY AND IDEALS

The sensitive tourist will be impressed not only by the fraternal feeling Latins have for us, but also by the meaningfu lparallels of history and ideals that most of us tend to overlook or forget.

Aside from ineffectual government tourist promotion, the big drawbacks to visiting South America have been the time and transportation cost involved. But like so many things, the jet age is changing all that.

For example, you can now reach Rio de Janeiro from New York in 10½ hours, only 3 hours longer than it takes to get to Rome. Come spring, the 45 day tourist class excusion fare to Buenos Aires, the continent's most distant major city, will be only a few dollars more tha nthe off season 17-day excursion fare to Rome and a few dollars less than the high season fare, economy class.

It's a lot of transportation for the money, what with stopovers permitted in every major South American city coming and going via Panagra and Pan American.

CONDITIONS LIMITED

Unfortunately, tourist conditions to the South haven't quite kept pace with the potential going on at a feverish pace, good accommodations and food are still limited to a comparatively few places in the major cities and resort areas.

The miserable, if fairly harmless, digestive derangement known in Mexico as "Montezuma's Revenge" plagues most visitors and ruins many a vacation; the wise consult their doctors for a preventive prescription before leaving, and stay away from raw vegetables and unpeeled fruit.

It is difficult to convince most people that neither revolutions nor earthquakes present a serious danger, even though few visitors ever get hurt in either. Old Latin America hands know that revolutions are usually a form of politics as stylized as a chess game.

And in Chile they say that if they don't get an earth tremor once a month, that's when they start worrying. We felt one in bed one night; it didn't even make the papers.

Pr. Wales H-S Hears Talk

Last Tuesday night, the Prince of Wales Home and School Association held a successful meeting with Mrs. Ralph Middleton as guest speaker. Her charming delivery held the interest of all 120 members in attendance on the topic; 'The Modern Teen-ager', a subject on which she is well-qualified to speak, being the mother of two sons and two daughters, grandmother of three and a preacher's wife for 40 years. She outlined many causes of juvenile delinquency.

President, Mrs. Kay Bushell, gave details of the coming "Fun Fair", in March. It is to be hoped that funds will be raised to purchase an outdoor speaker to the school, and fanns for the auditorium.

The Home and School Association has just presented three sets of Golden Encyclopedia to the primary rooms, four sets of Junior Atlas to the grades 5 and 6, and will be giving large dictionaires to the grade 7 and 8 classes.

5th BELLEVILLE GROUP

Mr. Lancaster, of the Belleville Boy Scout Association Council, spoke to the members about the 5th Belleville group. The group has a low interest level right now. He felt it advisable to transfer sponsorship of the group from the Home and School Association, to College Hill United Church. A motion was made to that effect. The mothers of the 5th Belleville pack, held a bake-sale after the meeting, to raise funds.

An added attraction of the meeting was an interesting display of the art work of children throughout the school. Each class exhibited several types of work ranging through textural painting in the kindergarten, paper sculpture, painting, posters, papier mache, masks, abstracts, mosaics, chalk drawings, to pencil sketches in grade 8.

Cookies and coffee were served by the mothers of Mr. Emerson's room assisted by Mrs. Andrew Grey.

IODE Marks 61st Birthday Founder's Day

When the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire (I.O.D.E.) observers Founder's Day on February 12, it will not only mark the 61st anniversary of the Order but also identify itself with the Arctic as being the first women's national organization to have a building project in the far north. During the past year the IODE erected a community hall at Frobisher Bay and Mrs. Peter L. Robinson, national president, and Mrs. R. C. Latimer, chairman of the Eskimo Fund, participated in the opening.

Plans are now under way for a second hall, this to be erected in Western Arctic at Tuk-toy-ak-tuk.

Organized in 1900 by Mrs. Clark Murray of Montreal, the order now has 984 chapters reaching from the Yukon to Newfoundland, and is affiliated with chapters in Bermuda and the Bahamas, the Daughters of the British Empire in the United States and the Victoria League in England.

Thirty-one thousand voluntary women comprise the membership which distributes approximately a million dollars annually.

EDUCATION COSTS

One-quarter of this amount ($250,000) is spent on education. During the past year 2,264 schools were assisted and 1649 scholarships, bursaries and grants were awarded. The interests of the order recognize no boundaries, and from the project in the far north, they extend to the Federation of the West Indies and British Honduras where seventeen schools were adopted in the year just passed.

From its First and Second War Memorial Fund, the IODE provided 13 overseas post-graduate scholarships of $2,000 each and awarded 68 bursaries in Canadian universities to the value of Twenty-five Thousand, Two Hundred Dollars ($25,000), to children of Canadian war veterans.

In the field of service, half a million is spent annually, Four Hundred Thousand Dollars ($400,000) in Canada, and One Hundred Thousand Dollars ($100,000) in supplies shipped to Europe, Africa, Korea and the West Indies. Thousands of knitted and sewn articles of clothing and quilts are made by the members and distributed, and chapters have undertaken the sponsorship of destitute and refugee children.

By its diversity of interests, the IODE offers a satisfying outlet to any woman who is a Canadian citizen or a British subject and who would like to identify herself with a patriotic and at the same time non-sectarian organization.

There are two chapters of the IODE in Belleville, the Argyll and the St. Julien. In addition to supporting the national and provincial projects, both chapters do much work on a local level. Their adopted schools are visited on special occasions, at which information, gifts and presentations are made to them. All three city high schools receive prizes or scholarships to children of war veterans, and the school for retarded children is given aid.

On Citizenship Court days, new Canadians are welcomed by the chapter and are given information and assistance to help them become loyal citizens of their adopted country.

Members of both chapters help at Blood Donors' Clinic and at the Cancer Society workrooms. The Argyll and St. Julien Chapters are participating agencies in the United Appeal.

FAN TALES

"My mother once cautioned me never to flirt,
No handkerchief could I drop
Which brings up a question quite bold and impert;
I wonder just how she got Pop?"
—"Conquestion" by Dorothy B. Griswold.

• • •

Everywhere downtown in Belleville, the stores are bright with hearts and flowers to remind us St. Valentine's Day is about due. Cards are filled with messages, old and new; selection is a far cry from simplification.

But, however complicated life must seem to young lovers these days, what must it have been in our grandmother's era when fans flouished as well?

Note, for example, this fan language formula (discovered written in precise Victorian hand writing on the back of an old book) related by Elizabeth Coatsworth who writes about life on the Maine Coast!

"Fan fast: I am independent. fan slow: I am engaged. Fan with right hand in front of face: Leave me. Open and shut: Kiss me. Open wide: Love. Open Half: Friendship. Shut: Hate. Swinging the fan: Can I see you home? Fan by the right cheek: Yes. Fan by the left cheek: No. Carried in left hand: Desirous of getting acquainted. Carried with handle to lips: I will flirt with you." And Mrs. Coatsworth asks: "But what was there left for a poor girl to do when she was merely warm from dancing and wished to fan herself?"

In fact, it as this very predicament that gave birth to the legend of the fan's invention which stems from the Chinese, who say a beautiful Mandarin's daughter once removed a mask of yellow silk, at a party one warmish night in order to feel the cool air on her face. To hide her lovely visage from the stares of the indiscreet, "she agitated the mask back and forward in her hand thus creating a species of veil which sheltered her face." The Mandarins chanted: "If the moon had hands what a fan it would prove for Kan-si the Beautiful!" That night, so say the Chinese, the fan was born.

GUARD RULERS

History's version, however, reveals that Emperor's were guarded from dust by fans also used to sweeten the air, 12 centuries before Christ, while a thousand years before Christianity, the Ming epoch had made fans of pheasant feathers and with ivory handles. The fan brushed away the mosquitoes from Pharoah Haremheb's royal countenance and appeared in frescoes and bas-reliefs in the 19th and 20th Egyptian dynasties. Though lost during the middle ages, the fan became an object of culture preserved by the church, and kept insects and flies away from administering officials performing the church services. These were made of fabric, worked in the form of Seraphim's wings and is a symbol even today of dignity which accompanies the Pontiff when he enters St. Peter's.

During the French Revolution profiles of the hapless king were interwoven secretly and cleverly in the fans's decorative floral patterns. As the art of fan making progressed utilitarian and supplementary sidelines appeared, such as tunnels in the grooved sticks, first encrusted with gold, silver and lapis lazuli. Theses were filled with drops of perfume or poison, which ever occasion suited the owner's demand. And in truth, a fan was a wand of enchantment; "A woman without a fan is like a man without a sword," Addison declared, who lived when swordless men were not imagined. Julio Janin, a Spainard described them a "mechanism of the State manipulated by women." Madame de Stael, the French novelist appraised the fan's owner's distinction: it was a sceptre of her power. Today is another chapter. Once so universally used and storied in history, poetry and song; the fan once served as a signal and talisman not only in the loves of the great and small, but in the affairs of state, of war, of intrigue, even of treason and death, is being discarded (even in Spain, the last stronghold) as a museum piece. Obsolete but not forgotten.

BELLEVIGNETTE: For those of us who holiday, not in sunny climes, but winter in an etching of black and white, with snowy roof-tops and streets, pewter skies interlaced with ebony branches of barren trees, February holds certain consolations. Among them St. Valentine's Day. That, we'll take. So, with greetings: here's a bright red heart to all the children and youth that keep this world young and gay. A special, lacey Valentine for all grandparents who have lived full, fruitful lives and still find each day a new and adventurous affair. To countless thousands of adults, hearts and flowers, that struggle and achieve by the grace of courage and hope, and so keep the world revolving. And a very, [illegible] beautiful one to all who [illegible] our personal lives [illegible] a pleasant place, in [illegible] in which to live.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Shaw

QUESTION BOX

Question: I do hope you will be able to solve a problem which has come up between two aunts and my mother and myself. Each year, for the past nine or ten years, a friend of my mother has sent a Christmas gift to each of us. They are obviously expensive. Last month one of my aunts sent him two dollars when she wrote him a note of appreciation. Needless to say, I was shocked! Now the two aunts think it would be nice to get a $25.00 bond and send it to him.

Mother and I feel that this would be an insult to the man, in view of the obvious fact that he is a person who enjoys giving for the sake of giving. We feel that the gifts should be graciously accepted with a very nice note from each of us.

If you don't feel that this is sufficient, what other way can we replay him, if he must be repaid at all? — Miss J. M. H., Milford, Conn.

Answer: I don't blame you for being shocked! Why in the world should your aunts have this obsession to send money to this man who is obviously merely trying to give pleasure to you all! I agree with you that sending of money, while maybe not an "insult," certainly is most unusual and definitely should not be done! He's probably still wondering what it's all about! You are correct in assuming that the only thing necessary on your part is a note of appreciation. Next Christmas, if you wish, choose a nice gift and send it to the man from all four of you. But money? No!

Stories of Famous Hymns

By HORACE [illegible]

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove"

Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all Thy quickening powers;
Kindle a flame of sacred love,
In these cold hearts of ours.

In vain we tune our formal songs,
In vain we strive to rise;
Hosannas languish on our tongues,
And our devotion dies.

Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers;
Come shed abroad a Saviours love,
And that shall kindle ours.

None of the Church's great poets has contributed more generously or more richly to the world's treasury of sacred song than has the Rev. Isaac Watts, England's distinguished hymnist.

Without his literary effort, we would not have such hymngems as "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross", "O God, Our Help In Ages Past", "Joy To The World", " This Is The Day The Lord Hath Made", and the missionary hymn precious to Christians around the world, "Jesus Shall Reign Where'er The Sun Doth His Successive Journeys Run,,

Dr. Watts published many of best-known and best-loves songs in a collection of "Hymns And Spiritual Songs" which appeared in 1707, more than 250 years ago. In that same volume his hymn, "Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove", was introduced to the public. It has been a precious hymn of Christian devotion ever since in the hymnals of many religious denominations.

Isaac Watts was born in 1674 in Southampton, England. His first poems were written when he was a lad of seven. A few years later, young Isaac began to find fault with the paraphrases of the Psalms which were in use in churches of the day. Invited to "give us something better", he accepted the challenge and produced his firs' hymn, After that he wrote many others which were accepted and used, and his literary career was under way.

A Lift For Living

Trust and Faith Lead to God

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Some time ago, several college students were sitting in their clubhouse when the conversation turned, as it often does, to religion. These young men were in the first flush in their scientific studies. In their classrooms they had been hearing of the age of the earth measured in millions of years and the stellar spaces measured in billions of miles.

"Such figures," said one of them, "do away with a six-foot God." Their childhood pictures of God now seemed like playhouses unfit for man's estate. And so, amid the smoke and upholstery of their fraternity house, these comfortable young men argued about God. "Is there a God?" "How can you prove His existence?" "What is God like?" Such queries made a good discussion; but did not disturb their sleep.

In contrast to that cool, comfortable manner of asking about God, listen to these words of the Psalmist: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my sould after Thee, O God. . .My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God. . .My tears have been my meat day and night, while they continually say unto me, Where is thy God?"

THIRST AFTER HIM

It is one thing to argue about God's existence, quite another to thirst after Him. It is one thing to sit comfortably in a smoke-filled room and discuss, Where is God? It is another to grope after Him amid the dangers of a smoke-filling world of battles as did a soldier during World War I who, just before going over the top, turned to his chaplain and said, "What can you tell me about God — Quick?" It is one thing to believe in a deity, a First Cause who started the universe, and then dismissed it; it is another thing to have a God who is a very present help in time of trouble.

Thoughtful persons are not listening today as loungers, lazily raising questions about God. For the first time in human history we realize that man could commit race suicide. Not matter how bad men were in the past, they had neither the power nor the nearness to their neighbors to kill them off. Now we have both. With our nuclear energy we have the power and with our jet planes and missiles we have the proximity. Is it any wonder the people are turning to the church with a new urgency, asking, "Where is your God, now?"

Some years ago, the minister of a prominent city church sent out a questionnaire to his congregation and a selected list of representative persons outside the church. He asked for some unsigned answers about their attitude toward God. The replies revealed that 92 per cent of those answering affirmed a belief in God, but less than 50 per cent said they had never felt His presence. If church members are to answer the cry for help, they must have a more vital experience of God.

CULTIVATE GOD'S PRESENCE

If we are to feel God as a very present help in time of trouble, we must cultivate His presence in our ordinary days. For more than thirty years Muriel Lester devoted herself to social work in the drab slums of London. Her daily contact with grime, poverty and crime did not take the shine off her radiant faith. Hear her schedule of daily living: "When you wake in morning, immediately greet God as an Unseen Presence close beside you. Picture Him as radiant beauty, creative power, unfailing love. Before you come down to breakfast, make a prayer dedicating your entire day to God and His service. . .At each meal thank God for His mercy in providing food for you and then make a prayer for those who must go hungry. . . .As you go about your work throughout the day, remember that all the persons whom you meet belong to God just as you do. . .At the end of the day, in a moment of silence, let the failures and anxieties of the day pass through your mind and then vanish forever. . .When you finally drop to sleep, let your last thought be this: 'Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit.'"

Try this schedule. It made God real to Muriel Lester.

Also, if we are to find God's presence real we must trust Him. Blondin, the French tightrope walker, visited America in 1859. He performed the amazing feat of walking across Niagara Falls on a tightrope. He even carried a man across on his shoulders. The story is told that he asked a fellow, "Do you believe I can carry a man across the Falls on a tightrope?" The fellow answered, "Yes." Then Blondin asked, "Will you be that man?" The fellow answered, "No."

There you have the difference between belief and trust. We must trust God if we are to find Him and feel Him.

Lincoln did. Let's bring our belief in God to the point of trust as we observe Lincoln's birthday and enter this week the season of Lent.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Editor's Note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Mrs. P. J. — He makes no allowance for what I'm going through.

Mr. P. J. — She blames everything on her "change of life."

• • •

Mrs. P. J: — My husband is 60 and I'm 53. We've been married 32 years and for the past five, ever since our younest child's marriage, we've lived by ourselves in a three-room apartment.

Now that we're alone so much, we can hardly stand each other. This is a sad state of affairs for people who planned to live says I'm a boring companion, and believe me, he's no Dale Carnegie.

Maybe if he showed a little sympathy for what I'm going through physically at this time of life, I could pull myself together and spruce up. But I feel very depressed. And Phil's a cold fish. He grumbles and complains all day, but one peep out of me and he calls me a cry-baby.

• • •

Mr. P. J. — Henrietta is impossible to live with. She takes no interest in how she looks, lets the house go to pot, and blames it all on her "time of life." If I remark that the silver needs polishing, or I'm tired of canned meat-balls, she goes into a tantrum about how heartless I am.

She doesn't seem to realize that middle-age is hard on men, too. It's hard for me to cheer her up when I feel so let-down myself. But I don't make excuses for not doing my work, the way she does. She's just indulging herself, and blaming it on "woman trouble."

• • •

The Council — It takes two to tango, Mr. J., and you're asking your wife to perform solo. In this bewildering interlude in your marriage, the first unrelieved confrontation since bridal days, you must create a new design for your relationship. Yet, each of you is too wrapped in your own problems to see that the solution lies in pooling them.

First, what about Mrs. J.'s menopause? Medical opinion has it that, except for rare cases, a cranky woman is just a cranky woman Hormones are involed, but not necessarily come in handy as an excuse! When a woman uses her femaleness as a weapon, a doctor should be called in as referee.

So let's skip the endoctrine factor, and get on to what Mr. and Mrs. J. can do to relieve an undernourished and emaciated romance. At this point, a little play-acting, as Mr. J. observes, may be just the ticket. Imagine a dinner-date for which Henrietta dresses to the gills, even to a fresh pink satin ribbon drawn through the lace of petticoat! And Phil, holding her chair, and then talking so softly to her that the people at the next table decide it's a clandestine rendezvous. Quite an act. But if it makes her feel cherished, and him, irresistible, — it may well be the Prologue to the real thing.

Mr. J. is right in reminding his wife that he needs reassurance and ego-puffing as much as she. Once she stops wallowing in self, she can hitch her life to his and, through a genuine closess and compassion, raise the moral of the home for both of them.

Marriage is a great achievement. The J.'s despite and investment of 32 years, have not yet reached its true glory. But, excuses aside, they can save and protect their investment by getting to know each other all over again.

Less whining from her, more winning from him, and who knows but that they'll rediscover each other and, after that, the bright world beyond?

QUESTION:

. . . I would now like to ask you for some recipe on how to cook bear meat, especially for roasts or steaks. As I have a friend who killed a bear and he is going to give me some of it and really I have no idea how to cook it and thought perhaps you could help me . . C. C.

ANSWER:

There is one rule you must observe: The fat from bear is very strong. Also there are glands embedded in it under the forelegs and in each thigh that are extra strong. If all fat is removed you can be sure these glands are too. Cook lean bear meat as you would beef. Here is a specific recipe for

BEAR LOIN STEAKS:

2 loin steaks, 2 1-2 lbs., 5-8 to 3-4" thick, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, 1 1-4 teaspoon salt, generous dash of pepper, 1-2 cup boiling water.

Wipe steaks clean with a damp cloth. Trim off all the fat because it is strong flavored. This leaves about 1 1-2 pounds lean steak. Place steak on a hot, greased broiler rack set 4 inches from heat. Combine butter and lemon juice and brush over top of steaks. Sprinkle with half of the salt and pepper. Broil 7 to 8 minutes. Turn steaks, brush with remaining lemon-butter and remainng salt and pepper. Broil another 7 or 8 minutes for well-done steaks. Remove from broiler to platter. Drizzle 1-2 cup water over rack and scrape down the residue into the drip pan. Remove rack. Stir gravy until well blended; reheat to boiling. Pour over hot steaks and serve immediately 4 to 5 servings.

QUESTION:

Would you please put a recipe in the paper for Mexican Hamburgers? I had some last summer at a lunch counter and they were delicious . . . E.A.K.

ANSWER:

I hope the following is what you require.

MEXICAN HAMBURGS:

For 6 meat cakes: One pound ground beef, 1 tablespoon catsup, 1 tablespoon tomato juice, 1 tablespoon grated onion, 1 teaspoon chili powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1-8 teaspoon paprika. Mix ingredients well and shape into 6 flat meat cakes. Sear in a little hot fat on both sides, then reduce heat and cook until pink in centre. Serve hot on hamburg buns with hot tomato sauce or hot catsup.

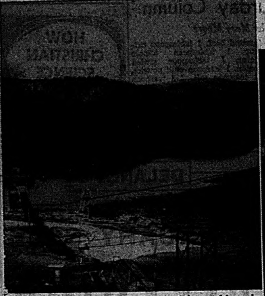
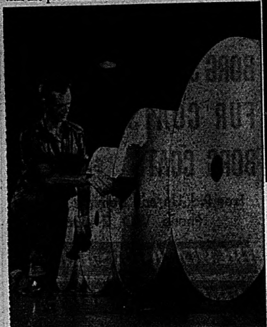
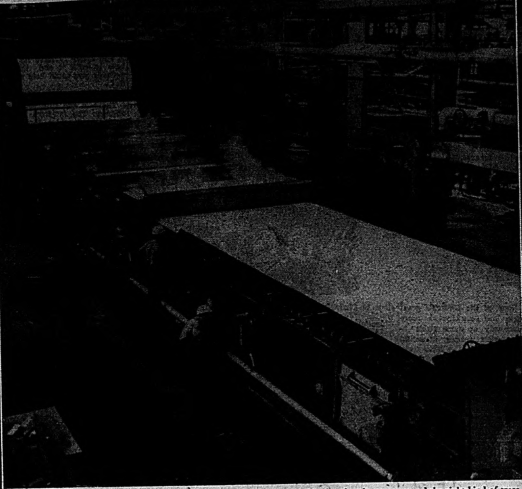
Paper-Producing Capital of the World



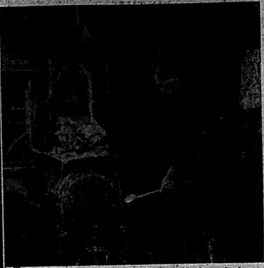
Logs are floated down the St. Maurice River and brought to paper mills by conveyor chain. All lumber is harvested scientifically to avoid depletion of forest reserves. In addition, the Valley's papermaking companies jointly maintain vital fire protection service.



Newsprint is stamped prior to packaging for shipment. Rolls are made according to customers' specifications and vary in weight from 500 pounds to giant five-thousand-pound rolls.

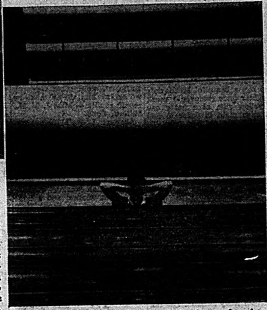


One of the largest papermaking machines in the world (shown above) is located in the town of La Tuque, in Québec's picturesque St. Maurice Valley. The Valley, with its seven paper-producing mills, is today the world's largest newsprint area. The bustling city of Trois Rivières, Québec, halfway between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic, is the metropolis of Canada's largest export product and is known as the newsprint capital of the world. It turns out nearly one hundred and twenty-five tons of paper per hour, twenty-four hours a day. Situated on the busy St. Lawrence Seaway, it serves both the United States and the European market through its port, which is now kept open most of the year. The Valley produces 25% more newsprint in a year than all the mills in Great Britain; its output is equal to roughly half of the entire United States production and represents one-sixth of Canada's total newsprint production. The St. Maurice River, which forms a small delta as it empties into the St. Lawrence at Trois Rivières, flows through an area rich in water and hydro-electric resources and the right kind of trees for the paper industry—balsam and spruce. Its sixteen thousand square miles of wooded wealth yield close to two million cords of pulpwood a year. To operate their mills and keep the supply of pulpwood coming in, the paper companies in the Valley maintain a permanent staff of about seven thousand in seven mills, who share a payroll of some $50 million, with approximately eight thousand seasonal employees. Recognizing its importance as a paper producing centre, Québec's provincial government has established an Institute of Papermaking in Trois Rivières—one of the largest and most modern in the world. Its intricate machinery can duplicate any pulp and paper mill operation. Demand for graduates from the Institute frequently outruns the supply. With essential electrical power available close to each mill, rich woodlands, and increasing world demand for paper, the future of the St. Maurice Valley — the world's largest papermaking area — looks bright.



Grinderman Jules Pichette checks a sample from the huge pulp-grinding machine. One cord of soft wood (see logs top right hand corner of picture) is crushed by one-ton grinding stone in an hour. The wood pulp is mixed with water and acid for transformation into paper.

National Film Board of Canada Photos by Gar Lunney.



Paper is checked for imperfections. Relaxed pose of worker above belies the concentrated attention with which he watches paper coming off rollers. A one-ton roll contains approximately six miles of newsprint.

Whitby Woman Being Plagued By Prankster

WHITBY (CP)—A prankster is sending a stream of unsolicited deliveries and calls [illegible] Mrs. Kenneth Melless.

The mother of three was placed under medical care Thursday night after the strain of saying: "No thank you, I didn't order," to taxi drivers and delivery men from department stores, restaurants, florists and cleaners.

Police were told the succession of deliveries began before Christmas. Someone put an advertisement in a newspaper saying Mrs. Melless had dogs for sale.

Since then cabs, clothes, a Christmas tree, Chinese food and flowers have been delivered to the Melless home.

The distraught woman said: "I don't know why anybody body would do such a thing."

Frankford

FRANKFORD — Frankford Free Methodist ladies, friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mrs. Clifford Smith on February 6th in honor of Mrs. Gerald Haggarty.

During the evening choruses were sung: Mrs. Clarence Lohnes rendered piano music. Mrs. Merle Moore conducted a contest, the winners were Miss Lois Ellen Twiddy and Miss Marguerite Shannon. Mrs. C. Rideout and Mrs. Richard Twiddy gave readings.

Mrs. Haggarty was presented with many lovely gifts and she thanked her friends for their kindness.

Refreshments were served and a time of fellowship was enjoyed by all.

A highlight of the evening was a presentation of gifts to the oldest mother present, Mrs. William Loynes Sr., and the mother of the youngest baby present, Mrs. George McCumber.

Spy Lived In Toronto Says Paper

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says the RCMP has information that Gordon Arnold Lonsdale, a defendant in Britain's espionage [illegible] case, is a trained Russian spy who formerly lived in Toronto.

The Star says Lonsdale has bank accounts in Toronto and Vancouver. It adds:

"Scotland Yard investigators are reported satisfied that Lonsdale is not the Ontario - born Lonsdale who returned to Finland with his mother in his infancy after she had a disagreement with her husband almost 35 years ago.

(A report published here Feb. 8 said a Gordon Arnold Lonsdale was born at Cobalt, Ont., Aug. 27, 1924, the date on Lonsdale's passport, and that his Finnish-born mother later left with him for Europe.)

"If the special branch of the Yard gives its consent, Ottawa authorities may make public why they are sure that the man on trial under the name of Lonsdale was a Russian agent who came to Canada to set himself up as a Canadian by using the real Lonsdale's birth certificate. This he obtained in Toronto.

"By using it, he got a Canadian passport."

RCMP DUBIOUS

The man charged under the name of Lonsdale claims to be a Canadian. In Ottawa Thursday night deputy commissioner George McClellan of the RCMP said the RCMP are "not at all satisfied" he is the Lonsdale born in Canada.

In Kirkland Lake, The Northern News says that a Gordon Arnold Lonsdale was enrolled in Grade One in 1931 and that the same boy was enrolled in Grade Two in 1932 under the Finnish name of Pihlaja.

The newspaper reported that his mother, Olga, had been married to Jack Emmanuel Lonsdale and later appeared to have married a Finn named Hjalmar Pihlaja.

The last known of the son in Kirkland Lake was that he left Central public school in June, 1932, and that about that time his mother applied for a passport for herself and the son to go to Finland.

New Speed Mark Of 2,275 Miles An Hour Made

EDWARDS A.F.B., Calif (AP)—The rocket ship X-15 set an unofficial world speed mark of 2,275 miles an hour in a flight Tuesday, the National Space Agency said on Thursday.

The flight by United States Air Force pilot Bob White was announced at the time as 2,112 but examination of data showed the plane travelled at the faster speed.

The world mark of 2,196 miles an hour was established last Aug. 4 by Joe Walker of the space agency.

Purpose of White's flight was not to set a record, but to give a high-speed test to a new "hot nose" for the X-15. Designed to replace the needle like nose used in early flights the new nose is loaded with instruments to help the pilot re-enter the atmosphere after trips to the edge of space.

The record was set in an X-15 with engines generating 16,000 pounds thrust. With engines four times more powerful, X-15s are expected to fly soon at more than 4,000 miles an hour to as high as 100 miles.

VIOLATE AIR SPACE

NEW DELHI (AP)—Red Chinese planes from Tibet are persisting in violating India's air space despite repeated Indian protests, pro-government Hindustan Times rportd today. Official spokesmen refused to comment. Peking previously denied its planes flew over Indian territory and suggested the intruders were U.S. planes based in Thailand.

Mixed Blood Makes Snow Hard on Bear

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Elmer has enough of the polar bear in him to stay awake all winter and enough of the brown bear to find snow unbearable.

So the three - year - old hybrid longed for a snow plow to come by and clear the snow out of his cage. He waited and waited through three major snowstorms and today he got fed up.

All day he carried chunks of snow in his mouth to the edge of the cage and thrust them through the bars. When his mouth got cold and tired, he used his big paws.

And now Elmer sports the only snowless outdoor quarters at the Philadelphia Zoo.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"Say-Hey" Willie Mays signed his 1961 contract with the San Francisco Giants the other day. The inked parchment called for a seasonal stipend of $85,000, the same amount as last season.

The stylish outfielder with the bucket catch enters his tenth season with the "Jynts." Last season he drove in 103 runs, scored 107, had 190 hits, 29 home runs, 25 stolen bases and finished in third place behind Dick Groat and Norm Larker, with a batting average of .319.

What is Willie worth to the Giants? Nobody but the Giants know. And they're not putting a price on him.

It may sound fantastic but early in the 1960 season Alex Camparis, chief scout for the Los Angeles Dodgers, said "I know we would give a million dollars for Mays right now."

Fantastic is right for there has never been a million dollar offer for the purchase of a single big league player.

Some, however, have been close. A top-ranking New York baseball writer said last fall that Gussie Busch, the beer-baron owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, offered the Dodgers' Buzzy Bavasi $1,800,000 for Frank Howard and five other Dodger rookies and farmhands.

And it was the same Gussie Busch who once tried to buy Ernie Banks from the Cubs for $500,000. The fortune was snubbed by Phil Wrigley, who owns the Cubs, and Frank "Trader" Lane, then the Cubs' general manager, explained "I was told that Mr. Wrigley needs the half-million just about as much as you do."

Busch is reported to have flown into a tantrum. "My G . . .", he screamed, "what kind of business have I gotten into where a firm can't use a half-million dollars? What about a million? Would it be the same answer?"

The Boston Red Sox were reported to have offered a million for the Indians' Herb Score, but later it was revealed it was a publicity stunt.

Dodger scout Camparis' statement the "Bums" would give a million for Willie Mays followed an appraisal by the Dodger scout corps. They evaluated every player in the league under the old Branch Rickey formula—batting, hitting for power, fielding, speed and arm.

"Mays," said Camparis, "is the only player who was marked a perfect score on all counts. I know we would give a million for Willie right now."

In the Dodgers scouts' appraisal, Ernie Banks, Mickey Mantle, Hank Aaron and Eddie Mathews of the Braves were lumped together below Mays.

Beneath this grouping were such as Ken Boyer of the Cards and Vada Pinson of the Reds, Roger Maris on the basis of the season's performance, would have been included in the second grouping. Ted Williams, Stan Musial and Yogi Berra were eliminated because of age.

Pitchers were not rated but there was enough meat in the consesus to finally rate Mays the outstanding big leaguer of this generation.

Back in 1954 after Willie had played one full season with the Giants, the immortal Tris Speaker was a press-box guest at Dallas, the club's spring training centre. A sportswriter asked Speaker what he thought of Mays. Speaker was reluctant to answer.

"This is the first time I've seen Mays," he said later, "I might have something to say in September."

In another expert's opinion, only Joe DiMaggio, in all the two decades he has covered baseball, can stand beside Willie as an equal.

"Mays will join Joe in the Hall of Fame and there can be no quibbling that he'll join Speaker, Cobb, Ruth and Wagner among the all-time greats of baseball."

"Joe was and Willie is," he said, "as close to perfection as you can get in imperfect man and as values are measured in baseball $1 million may be cheap."

Much-Sought Player

Stamps Get Blues Back

WINNIPEG (CP) — Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference were awarded rights to a much-sought University of Toronto fullback Friday.

The fullback, John McMurtry, was declared legally on the Calgary team's negotiation list by CFL commissioner Sydney Halter at the opening of the league's annual draft of college players.

Calgary, the only western team participating in the draft with the four members of the eastern conference, also picked up centre Glen Harding from Toronto as its first-round choice.

Toronto Argonauts, given Hamilton Tiger-Cats rights to first choice in the first round, as the result of a trade between the clubs, selected all - star tackle Casey Wood of Toronto. Argos' own first-round choice was another intercollegiate all - star, Mike Wicklum of Toronto, tied with McMurtry in college scoring.

CFL Solves Western Gate Squabble

Toronto Gets '61 Grey Cup

By TOM WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Canadian Football League mended a few fences as it closed its annual meeting here a day ahead of schedule.

As the two-day session ended Friday, delegates solved the Western Conference's thorny gate-equalization squabble and added more teeth to league regulations covering player contracts.

The meeting also approved several rule changes, awarded the 1961 Grey Cup to Toronto and gave CFL commissioner Sydney Halter a new contract.

The mediation of a couple of eastern delegates was reported to have brought the British Columbia Lions and the other four western clubs together on the gate-equalization controversy — which had threatened to create a legal mess.

The problem started last November in Vancouver when the Western Conference voted 4 to 1 to increase the rate of contribution by rich clubs into a pool aimed to help the poorer clubs — specifically Saskatchewan Roughriders.

The new formula calls for clubs with gate revenue above the league average to pay into pool 40 per cent of the amount by which they exceed the average. Clubs with revenue below the average would be paid 40 per cent of the margin by which they fall short.

The previous rate was 25 per cent. The Lions argued at the time of the change that the new system would place an unfair burden on them because they have the largest stadium in the league and the richest revenue.

The Western Conference annual meeting, which preceded the CFL gathering, broke up without the problem being solved. League officials were threatening to remove B.C.'s vote in league matters and cut off its share of Grey Cup moneys unless it paid into the equalization plan. The Lions were considering court action to back their case.

Friday, as the CFL meeting neared its close, it was reported that the Toronto delegation urged the western group to seek a compromise.

Then the announcement was made that the Lions had accepted the 40 - per-cent gate split for 1961 only. The Western Conference constitution was amended to require that all gate equalization matters in future be approved by unanimous vote of league members.

Contract regulations were altered so that in future no club will be allowed to drop the option clause from a player's contract or make a private agreement with a player that the clause will not be enforced. Violations of the new regulation could result in a fine of $10,000.

The measure apparently resulted from the cases of two players — quarterback Randy Duncan of B.C. and tackle Bill Hudson of Montreal—who joined American Football League clubs without being waived out of the CFL.

TREND IS TO BLOCKING

The changes in playing rules consisted mainly on increasing the trend toward unlimited blocking — a trademark of the American game. The number of potential unrestricted blockers on the attacking team was boosted to 11 with the addition of two backfielders. In addition, unlimited blocking privileges were extended to all members of a team recovering an opponent's fumble, a blocked kick, or a teammate's fumble after an intercepted pass.

Toronto was awarded the 1961 Grey Cup—to be played Saturday, Dec. 2—but lost a bid to get the 1962 national final as well. The Toronto delegation argued that the classic should be awarded two years in advance to made accommodation arrangements easier in the game city.

Indications were that starting in 1962, the two - years-in-advance system will be used.

'No Guts, I'm Through'

Boxer Quits in Ring

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Heavyweight Norman Letcher of Los Angeles quit in the fifth round of his scheduled 10-rounder with Zora Folley Friday night. Letcher announced he is through with the ring for good.

The action meant indefinite suspension and no purse for Letcher.

"No guts," Letcher said in his dressing room later. "I don't have the temperament to be a fighter, I guess."

Then he said he hadn't trained well and knew he would have got fatigued. "I stopped when I still had my senses," he said.

Still later, he said he took too big a step in trying to fight Folley and was too tense. He told the Arizona boxing commissioner, Fred Woodward:

"All the blame is strictly mine. If I don't get paid, that's the way it is."

Folley, NBA's fourth-ranked challenger, had caught him with a couple of stiff right hands but did not appear to have him too badly outclassed when at 1:12 of the fifth round, Letcher turned away and told his startled corner:

"I quit."

Folley weighed 195, Letcher 182.

EAST TO MEET WEST

CALGARY (CP)—Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four league will play a pre-season exhibition game against Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference July 25 in Calgary, the Stampeders announced Friday.

Ont., Quebec Peewees Vie For Title

QUEBC (CP) — The week-long international peewee hockey tournament winds up today with four undefeated teams of youngsters—two from Ontario and two from Quebec—competing for the grand championship.

Toronto Dileo, class AA champion, plays Montmagny, Que., winner of the class B title.

One of the two goes on to meet the winner of the match between the class A champions from Drummondville, Que., and the class C champions from Rockcliffe, Ont.

The contestants won their class titles Friday in four games before more than 11,000 fans in the Quebec coliseum.

In the first match, Drummondville erased a 2-0 deficit to eliminate Noranda, Que., 6-3.

Montmagny romped over Donnacona 9-0 in the B finals.

Toronto Dileo's superior teamwork and hard skating gave them the AA title with a 5-0 shellacking of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Alan Rimmer scored two for Dileo in the second period, with Harvey Copeman, Fred Draycott and Ian Orr accounting for the others.

The struggle for the class C championship between Rockcliffe, Ont., and Amos, Que., was the most evenly - matched contest of the night. Rockcliffe won 5-3.

U.S. TEAM CLOBBERED

STOCKHOLM (AP)—A Swedish all-star team clobbered the United States team en route to the world amateur hockey tourney 13-1 Friday night. The tournament will be held in Switzerland next month.

FLORAL HORSESHOE DID THE TRICK FOR GORDIE — Gordie Howe of the Detroit Red Wings skates off the ice Thursday with a floral horseshoe presented by fans as a good-luck token. For one reason or another Howe's shots have been going badly all season. He is said to have fired more shots at enemy goalies than any other player in the National Hockey League this season but has only 14 goals in 53 games to show for his efforts. The horseshoe must have helped—he chalked up two goals against the New York Rangers in a 4-2 win for Detroit. (AP Wirephoto).

By BILL MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A year ago Friday night Red Kelly stepped into a Toronto Maple Leaf uniform after almost 13 seasons as a defenceman with Detroit Red Wings.

The move was a good one. He's having his best season since he entered the National Hockey League—as a centre.

The hard - digging redhead from Simcoe, known during his years with the Wings as a formidable rusher from behind the blue line, has 56 points on 16 goals and 40 assists. His best previous season was 1950 - 51 when he had 54 points on 17 goals and 37 assists.

In the league's scoring race he's taking a back seat only to Bernie Geoffrion, Frank Mahovlich, Dickie Moore and Jean Beliveau.

At 33, not young for a hockey player, Kelly says he has no definite plans of retiring.

There's no doubt part of Kelly's success this season is due to high-scoring Mahovlich on his left wing. A lot of Kelly's assists have been on Mahovalich's goals.

MADE HIM CLICK

In turn, Kelly seems to have been the key to make Mahovlich click after three seasons during which he didn't turn out to be all the super-star he was touted as in junior ranks.

Kelly played his first game for Toronto towards the end of last season after playing defence for the Wings since 1947.

Three of those seasons he won the Lady Byng Trophy for gentlemanly conduct combined with a high standard of playing ability. He is the trophy's top contender this season.

Mahovlich, with 64 points, is three points behind Geoffrion in the league's scoring race. He has 42 goals, tops in the league, and 22 assists.

Tonight he gets a chance to narrow the margin as the Leafs are at home to Boston Bruins. Montreal visits New York in the other scheduled game.

Sunday night Leafs play in Detroit, Montreal is at Chicago and New York at Boston.

Phoenix Golf Tourney

Palmer Catches Fire

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A part - time tournament professional headed into the third round of the $30,000 Phoenix golf open today with a two-stroke lead and a disturbing thought: The great Arnold Palmer was on the move.

Henry Williams Jr., who spends most of his time instructing club members at Fleetwood, Pa., was the leader at the halfway mark of the 72-hole battle after firing a seven-under-par 63, a course record, Friday.

Dave Marr, from Houston, Tex., was right behind at 133. But it was an excellent guess that, next to the course itself, th big worry of Williams and everyone else among the 71 pros surviving the 36-hole cut was Palmer.

The muscular 1960 golfer of the year, who has a habit of making brilliant finishes, caught fire early in playing what he describes as "my best golf this year" in the second round.

SHOOTS PARS, BIRDIES

After hooking his second shot into a lake for a two-over-par six on the first hole Friday, Palmer shot a string of pars and birdies to end up with a 65. This tied him with Don January at 134, three strokes off the pace. Palmer, who last year won an official $75,262, birdied the last four holes.

Bill Collins, who shared the first-round lead with Marr and Mason Rudolph at 66, carded a 69 for 135 and a tie with defending champion Jack Fleck, Julius Boros, Johnny Pott and Jim Ferrier. Rudolph had 70 Friday and still was within reach at 136.

Toronto's Al Balding, Art Wall Jr. and Jackie Cupid were deadlocked at 137. Stan Leonard of Vancouver shot a 71 Friday for a 36-hole total of 139. The cutoff point for the final two rounds was 144.

Marks Upset In Badminton

TORONTO (CP) — Martin Sample of Toronto upset fourth-seeded Fred Cartmell of Niagara Falls Friday night to advance to the men's single semi-finals in the Ontario badminton championships.

Semple downed Cartmell 15-9, 15-5 to join defending champion Finn Stender, top - ranked Jim Carnwath and Bev Wescott, all of Toronto, in today's play.

Stender ousted Gordon Wade of Niagara Falls, Ontario junior champ, 15-6, 15-3 in the quarter-finals.

Record Field Marks Rally

By HARRY CALNEK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — A record 192 competing cars wound through Northern Ontario today, each seeking the elusive Canadian international winter rally championship.

Treacherous side roads north through Renfrew and Algonquin Provincial Park were expected to begin taking their toll of cars today. Last year 20 dropped out before reaching North Bay Saturday night for the nine-hour stopover.

While road and weather conditions appeared better this year—last year many competitors were stranded in a vicious last-hour blizzard — the competition had stiffened considerably. Thirteen factories have entered teams of three cars each in concentrated bids for the rally title.

A favorite is Eric Carlsson of Sweden in a factory - prepared Saab with navigator Stuart Turner of London. In November they won the 2,000-mile rally of Great Britain in a Saab, and Carlsson was in the money in Greece, Sweden and Finland.

Rah-Rah Boys Share Wins In Ring Meet

TORONTO (CP) —Fred Webster of Royal Military College, Kingston, scored the only knockout Friday night in the preliminary bouts of the intercollegiate boxing championships, held at Hart House, University of Toronto.

Webster, 175 pounds, floored former titleholder Mike Butt of Toronto for a mandatory eight count early in the first round, then pummelled him at will before referee Bobby Laurence halted the bout at 1:21 of the round.

Al Pchajeck survived a first-round knockdown to finish strongly against a tiring Ed Schamerhorn of Queen's University to give RMC their only other win, in the 165-pound division.

University of Toronto boxers, defending champs in the tournament, won two events. Jim McManus won a split decision over Bill Lothian of RMC and Boris Petcoff scored a unanimous decision over Terry Nickerson of Queen's.

In the only other bout Queen's McAdoo won by a decision over English of RMC.

The U. of T. will field eight boxers in tonight's nine - event finals, while RMC and Queen's will each enter five fighters.

Two Shutouts Mark Games In A.H.L.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League are not crying for goaltending help while they have all-star Glenn Hall. But it must be satisfying to know they have such a fine prospect as Dennis Dejordy down on the farm.

The 22-year - old rookie, who joined Buffalo Bisons late in December, turned in his second shutout Friday night as the Bisons beat Providence Reds 3-0 for one of the two shutouts played in the American Hockey League. In the other, veteran netminder Gil Mayer also got his second of the campaign as Cleveland Barons blanked Quebec Aces 4-0.

Dejordy made 29 saves, 17 in the third period. Barry Cullen Billy Dea and Cec Hoekstra handled the scoring as the Bisons moved into third place a point ahead of the idle Hershey Bears.

The Barons strengthened their hold on second place with the win at Cleveland. They have 56 points, 15 behind the league-leading Springfield Indians and three ahead of the Bisons. Mayer, working behind a tight defence, had to make only 16 stops, two in the first period.

It was the Aces' 11th straight defeat on Cleveland ice and they couldn't do a thing about it.

Billy Attwell, Fred Flover, Ed Mazur and Cal Stearns scored for the Barons.

Wolves Blank Kingston 5-0

SUDBURY (CP) — Sudbury Wolves skated to a 5-0 victory over Kingston Frontenacs Friday night in an Eastern Professional Hockey League game.

Sam Bettio was the big gun for Sudbury, scoring two goals and drawing two assists.

Ken Girard, Cummy Burton and Jack Martin scored the other Wolves' goals.

Gerry McNamara turned 24 Kingston shots to score the shutout. John Henderson, in goal for the Frontenacs, faced 30 shots.

Quinte Classic Bowling League

Boulton's Sunoco was top team in the Quinte Classic Bowling League at the Bowl-O-Drome last night. They rolled 3770 for a 10-point win.

Figure-Skating Championships

Canadian Stars Seek N.A. Crowns

ARDMORE, Pa. (AP) —The biennial North American figure skating championship between the United States and Canada opens today, featuring 11 skaters from the 1960 winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Calif.

Six of the 22 - member U.S. squad and five of Canada's team of 19 competed in last year's international games. North American competition is a two-day affair highlighting compulsory figures today and free skating in Sunday's wind-up.

Scoring is based on 60 per cent for compulsory figures and 40 per cent for free skating routines.

Highlight of the event is the keen rivalry for women's and men's singles titles. Laurence Owen, pert 16-year - old U.S. national champion from Winchester, Mass., renews her rivalry with Canadian titleholder Wendy Griner of Toronto. Don Jackson, Oshawa, Ont., defends his North American crown against the challenge of the new U.S. king, Bradley Lord of Boston.

The other events are the pairs, featuring Maribel Owen, Winchester, Mass., and Dudley Richards of Boston, U.S. champions, and Canadian titlists Maria and Otto Jelinek of Oakville, Ont., and dance, sending the recently crowned American pair of Diana Sherbloom of Los Angeles, and Larry Pierce of Indianapolis against the Canadian champions, Virginia Thompson and William McLaughlin, both of Toronto. There are others in the competition but these are the favorites.

The North American championships, like the Olympic games, involves no official team title, merely individual champions. Canada won three of the four events two years ago, while the U.S. won a majority in 1957.

Jackson, third in the 1960 Olympics, defends his laurels against Lord, Gregory Kelley of Boston, Tim Brown of Berkeley, Calif., and teammates Donald McPherson of Stratford, Ontario and Bradley Black of St. Catharines.

Picton, Cobourg Open Series On Feb. 16

Cobourg Rockets and Picton Merchants will open their best-of-seven OBA Junior "C" playdown series in Picton on Thursday, February 16th, it was announced yesterday.

The second game will be at Cobourg on February 17, the third at Picton on the 23rd and the fourth at Cobourg on the 24th. No further dates have been set.

The winner of this series will likely meet Gananoque in the second round. Both Picton and Cobourg played in the OHA Eastern Junior "B" grouping this season, finishing in the last two positions behind four "B" teams. The Picton team was fifth, Cobourg sixth.

OHA convener Jack Devine also announced that the Junior "B" group winner, among Belleville, Kingston, Whitby and Peterborough, will likely meet a team from the Toronto Kinsmen League in the second round. "B" playoffs will get under way some time next week, the dates to be finalized at a meeting here Sunday afternoon at the radio station, at two o'clock.

Royals Thump Petes 6-2, Marlies Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The top half of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league lengthened its lead over the bottom half of the roster in Friday night's games at Niagara Falls and Guelph.

Guelph Royals thumped home a resounding 6-2 victory against Peterborough Petes, giving them a lead of 12 points over the nearest contender for the laurels.

The league - leaders surrendered a 1-0 lead in the first period to the Petes but quickly regained the upper-hand in the second period, ramming the puck home five times. Both sides scored once in the third frame.

Guelph scorers were Paul Andrea, Billy Taylor, Jean Ratelle, Rod Gilbert, and Bob Cunningham, while tally-men for Petes were Claude Larose and Wayne Boddy. Gilbert's goal, his first in four games, was the 47th he has chalked up this season.

BEAT BY FLYERS

Toronto Marlboros bit the dust again Friday night, going down in defeat against third - place Niagara Falls Flyers who gained two points on the idle Hamilton with a 5-2 win.

The Flyers snatched a 1-0 leal in the first frame and stretched their legs to 3-0 in the second with blond speedster Howie Dietrich racking up all three.

The game, rough and tough to begin with, increased in tempo in the last 10 minutes when Gary Jarrett scored for the second time for Marlie with only minutes of play remaining.

Scorers for Flyers were Howie, thrice, Bob Awrey and Frank Tessier. Jarrett notched he Marlies' deuce. It was Howie's first full game since be was relagated to the sidelines for a month following a cartilage operation.

Quinte COSSA Basketball

By PETER CARVER

Belleville Collegiate Institute hoopsters rolled to a three-ply victory over Trenton High School here last night in COSSA basketball action.

The senior team piled up a 56-33 win while the junior squad turned in a 38-28 triumph. The undefeated bantams easily turned back the opposition 47-22 for their seventh consecutive win.

SENIOR GAME

BCI's mastery of the backboards helped them to build up a 14-9 lead at quarter time. Up to this point Trenton's good foul shooting kept them in the game. Belleville really cut loose in the second stanza, racking up 16 points to Trenton's 3.

The third quarter was all BCI's as their good play under their opponent's basket and good ball control gave them a 48-17 bulge at three-quarter time. The winners were outplayed in the final quarter as THS scored 16 points to Belelville's 8, however, it was not enough.

Brian McKenzie played an excellent game for the winners, hitting with consistency on the set shots and also under the opponent's basket. He scored 20 points. Pete Annis hit for eight, while Nelson Banting and Earle MacDonald each had seven points.

Serge Stacatto was the best in the losing cause, scoring 13 points, while Kerr and Whitely hit for 4 apiece.

Line-ups:

BCIVS—Annis 8; McKenzie 20; Banting 7; MacDonald 7; Regensburg 2; Roberts 4; Davis 2; Clarke 2; MacFarlane 2; G. Scott 2; Campbell.

THS—Kerr 5; Whitely 5; Stacatto 13; Kinney 2; Byrnes 2; Thompson 1; Lawrence 3; Bowman 2.

JUNIOR GAME

BCI's fast break worked well as Belleville took a 12-7 lead at the end of the first quarter. Both teams battled out the second stanza fairly evenly as Belleville scored 10 points to Trenton's seven. The pace quickened in the third quarter, the checking became quite close. Both teams, however, were throwing the ball away frequently. BCI held a fairly safe 31-19 lead at the three-quarter time. The final stanza was also close as the teams fought it out on even terms.

David Blakely was the best man in the winning cause as sharp rebounding and set shooting gave him 16 points. Lyle Adams scored eleven with Rob Burr and James Muir each collecting four.

Carl Bowman was tops for Trenton, hitting for 11 points while Robinson scored 7.

The line-ups:

BCIVS—Adams 11; Blakely 16; Burr 4; Deacon 1; McKibbon; Muir 4; Soule 1; Williams 1; Follwell, Bakker; Yorke; Rose.

THS—Rathbun 2; Bowman 11; Beale; Robinson 7; Webb; Parsons; Price; McDonald 6; Gregg 2.

BANTAM GAME

The BCI Bantams took charge of the game right from the opening whistle and never looked back. Their good passing and shooting helped build up a 26-14 lead at the end of the first half. The winners really went to town in the final stanza, scoring 21 points while their strong defensive play held Trenton to 8 points.

Murray Swan brought his total to 118 as his good rebounding and shooting accounted for 14 points. Allan Mott with 8 and Jack Thomson with seven also played well for the winners.

Bob Davis topped the Trenton scorers with eight points, while Perks had four.

The line-ups:

BCIVS—Carver 2; Swan 14, Anderson 6; Athey; Thomson 7; Hurst 6; White; Dolan; Morton; Williams; Hobbs; Desaulniers; Mott 8; MacCormack 4.

THS — Gailbraith; Lisson; Gard;; McGregor; Webb 4; Whitely 1; Davis 8; Perks 4; Alexander 1; Wright 3; Meyers 1.

Timer, R. Herrington; scorer, L. Cornell.

Twin Aces For Golfer, Expects More

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — A young golfer shot two holes-in-one on the same golf round Friday.

The feat by Larry E. Willige on the Lithia Springs course was confirmed by club professional Bob Beavers and three golfers who were in a foursome with Willige.

He used a No. 2 iron to sink his drive on the 185 - yard second hole. On the fifth, his 7-iron shot trickled into the cup, 160 yards from the tee.

Willige finished the 18-hole round with a 73, one over par.

He said he has much more excitement in store. Mrs. Willige is in an Atlanta hospital where the family doctor has said she may give birth to twins.

Briton Roots For Chuvalo Over London

LONDON (CP)— Jim Wicks, manager of Empire heavyweight boxing champion Henry Cooper, will be rooting for Canadian champion George Chuvalo when he takes on Brian London of Blackpool in Toronto Feb. 20.

"Much as we wish London success it would suit us much better financially if Chuvalo beats London. Chuvalo is a new fighting face to the British public and if he beats London in good style he will have proved he is a fighter of the calibre the public would pay to see."

Wicks says he is looking ahead to a possible May 2 bout in which Cooper would put his title on the line against Chuvalo. But it would depend on the Canadian defeating London and Cooper successfully defending his title against Joe Erskine of Cardiff March 21.

Wicks says he thinks a Chuvalo - Cooper encounter would draw 18,000 fight fans in London.

Senior Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Chatham Maroons moved a point closer to first place in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series Friday night when they drubbed Galt Terriers 8-2 while the league-leading Windsor Bulldogs were settling for a 3-3 overtime tie with Woodstock Athletics.

The Maroons, playing before a home-town crowd of 1,100, got off to a fast start, scoring five unanswered first - period goals. Going into the game the two teams had been tied for second place, seven points behind Windsor.

George Montague scored two goals and assisted on two others running his point total to 21 in his last seven games. Linemate George Aitken also had two goals and two assists, while singles went to Fred Pietsch, Joe Malo, Ernie Dick and Mac McArthur.

Pete Kowalchuk and Bill Wylie scored for Galt in the second period.

GET MAJORS

The game produced 11 penalties, including majors to Montague and Galt's Butch Martin late in the final frame. Pietsch drew a misconduct in the same fracas.

The tie produced Woodstock's first point in nine games and moved the cellar-dwelling Athletics to within three points of the idle Strathroy Rockets.

The game, one of the cleanest ever played in Woodstock Arena, saw the A's leading 3-0 going into the third. But goals by Windsor's Joe Zorica, Bob White and Lou Bendo tied the match midway in the period.

For Woodstock Jack Taylor in the first period and Jake Smola and Toby Black early in the second were the scorers.

There wasn't a penalty in the 70 minutes of play.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks defeated Winnipeg Warriors 1-0 Friday night and went into sole possession of third place in the Western Hockey League race.

Centre Larry Popein was credited with the goal.

Victoria Cougars beat the Flyers 6-2 in Edmonton to virtually wrap up the sixth and last playoff spot.

Art Jones, Barney Krake and Larry Leach scored for Portland to offset two goals by Seattle ace Rudy Filion.

George Ford scored twice for Edmonton. Bill Johansen, Leo Amadio, Bert Fizzell and Bill Saunders got singles. Bruce MacGregor, Bob Solinger and Chuck Holmes were the Edmonton marksmen.

Pontiacs Nip Marmora 4-3 In 'C' Tilt

MARMORA (Special) — goal by F. Crouse at the 4.06 mark of the third period gave the Bancroft Pontiacs a 4-3 victory over the Marmora Millionaires in a close, hard-fought OHA Intermediate "C" game here last night.

It was a sea-saw battle all the way with Marmora taking a 2-1 lead after one period and Bancroft tying it 3-3 after twenty minutes of play. The homesters were ahead twice, came back to tie it 3-3 late in the second but still lost it in the third.

Crouse's goal at 4.06 of the third, assisted by N. Crosby, proved the winner but the line of Donaldson, Daniels and Bruce was Bancroft's big line. B. Donaldson scored two goals and one assist, A. Daniels had a goal and assist and W. Bruce drew three assists.

Bob Taylor and Tom Paranuik each had a goal and assist for the Millionaries while Chuck Rowbotham potted the other goal. Harold Maloney and Bill Jones earned single assists.

Referees R. Utman and J. McCurdy handed out a total of 15 penalties with the losers drawing the odd one. Taylor of Marmora had a major, Paranuik earned a major and misconduct, Doug Smith had a major and the team drew a penalty for having too many men on the ice. McMurray of Bancroft also collected a major and misconduct.

First Period

Marmora Rowbotham (Maloney) 2.54
Bancroft Donaldson (Daniels, Bruce) 11.20
Marmora Taylor (Paranuik, Jones) 13.13
Penalty: Maloney.

Second Period

Bancroft Daniels (Donaldson, Bruce) 1.11
Bancroft Donaldson (Bruce) 3.24
Marmora Paranuik (Taylor) 17.47
Penalties: Taylor (major), Severin, Bruce.

Third Period

Bancroft F. Crouse (N. Crosby) 4.06
Penalties: Darrah, Paranuik (Major, misconduct), Marmora (too many men on ice), Rowbotham, Smith (major), Crouse (2), Donaldson, McMurray (major, misconduct).

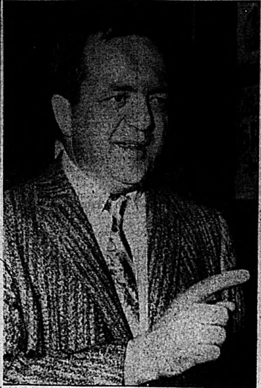
IMPORTS CUT

WINNIPG (CP)—The Canadian Football League Friday reduced the number of American import players that may be carried on a team roster. The new ruling says that by midnight Sept. 10, team rosters must be cut to 34 players — including 15 Americans. Teams have been allowed to keep any number of Americans they wished the 34 players on their official roster. The number of imports which can be used in any game remains unchanged at 12.



HELPS JAZZ — Sammy Berger, owner of the Town Tavern in downtown Toronto, is equally interested in jazz and food. He donates an annual scholarship to a Toronto school of contemporary music. And he personally investigates any complaints about the food in his restaurant. Regular customers who have a baby are likely to get a freshly-cooked lobster delivered to their hospital bed. Tavern Keeper Sometimes Sends Hot, Cooked Lobsters To Toronto Maternity Ward

By JOHN BELANGER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Every so often, the maternity ward in one of Toronto's hospitals is invaded by a waitress carrying a bright red cooked lobster.

It's all part of the service provided by Sammy Berger, proprietor of the Town Tavern, a Queen Street jazz spot and restaurant.

The lobster is presented to all regular customers of The Town whenever they have an addition to the family.

"I give away about a thousand lobsters a year," says Sam.

A quiet man of 49 with a wife and three children, he started as a tap man at Toronto's Prince George Hotel and then moved in as liquor manager. When the opportunity presented itself, he began booking acts such as Lena Horne into the hotel and he was on his way.

Since then he has done a lot to promote and raise the level of jazz in Toronto. He opened the Town in 1949 but did not begin booking jazz until 1954.

"Oscar Peterson walked in here one day in '54," said the dapper Sam, "and mentioned that the room would make a good jazz spot."

MADE HIS POINT

"He offered to come in on any date and at any price I paid just to prove it. So I booked him in the day after New Year's and figured he'd fall flat on his face. The place was packed every night and jazz has been here since."

Berger's love for music manifests itself in other ways. He has donated a yearly $350 scholarship to the Advanced School of Contemporary Music, started by Peterson and Toronto musician Phil Nimmons, and has helped out many a broke and hungry young jazzman.

Mr. Berger has given breaks to a number of promising young men, among them Canadians Hagood Hardy and Norm Amadio. Both have gone on to better things and now are making names in the United States.

But Sam's first love is food.

A good cook in his own right, Sam has instructed his waitresses to tell him when a customer hasn't finished his meal. Whenever one doesn't, Sam goes to the table, hears the complaint, and then pays the check.

The Town's 450-person capacity requires a staff of 110, but Sam says that he has little trouble with his waitresses.

THE LOST SHOES

"I get along a little better with the males," he says, "possibly because the girls are a little afraid of me. I only wish I could get along with the performers. . . ."

In March, 1958, The Town featured drummer Philly Jo Jones and his trio. Sam was spending his usual quiet evening at home when his manager phoned to say Jones refused to go on.

"Why not?" screamed Sam.

"Well," the manager said, "he lost his shoes and he says they're his lucky pair.'

When Berger confronted the shoeless Jones an hour later, the drummer still refused to play.

Sam ordered him out and immediately called in a local group, Moe Kauffman's quartet.

"I found out later that one of the busboys had come upon Jones' shoes in the checkroom and had thrown them out," said Sam.

"You know what? Those damn shoes were over 12 years old. I found them in one of the garbage cans."

The Swedes Should Have Seen This!

TORONTO (CP) — Things were fairly quiet in last night's Metro B Junior Hockey League game until Ron Ellis of Weston Dukes collided with Woodbridge Dodgers goalie Dave Kelly in the second period.

From that point until halfway through the final period there never were fewer than 10 men in the penalty box. The game ended with 224 minutes in penalties.

The collision set every player on the ice to brawling. Referee John Hudson sent all to the bin except the goalies. Weston goalie Bob Perani caught up later, though, with two misconducts. One player on each team got a game misconduct and at one stage no less than 16 men were serving penalties simultaneously.

Our Hockey On the Wane Says "Bunny"

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP) — Gordon Juckes, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, does not agree with some statements made this week by J. F. Ahearne, European president of the International Ice Hockey Federation.

"Mr. Ahearne seems to suggest that recent international hockey events show hockey to be on the wane in Canda," Juckes said Friday.

"Most Canadian hockey observers take the opposite view—that it is an improvement in continental European hockey which is making for closer international competition. Personally, I believe the Canadian observers are closer to the mark than Mr. Ahearne."

Pay-TV Soon to Become A Reality in Hawaii

By BOB THOMAS

HONOLULU (AP) — Pay-TV will become a reality in Hawaii because of a practical dreamer named Henry J. Kaiser.

Kaiser, in partnership with the Teleprompter Corporation, is well along with plans to install an underground-cable TV system in Hawaii Kai, the planned city the industrialist is building near Honolulu. Eventually he hopes to house 100,000 souls in Hawaii Kai, and not one will need a TV antenna.

The residents will be able to tune in commercial programs from Hawaii's three channels. They also might be able to see championship fights and new movies at a price. And students in the various schools will be able to hear lectures by famous savants via classroom TV.

These plans are the result of Kaiser's restless urge to build, plus his fascination with the television medium.

"Television is the greatest instrument ever invented for getting to people," he said.

For a man with huge enterprises in 27 countries, Kaiser spends an uncommon amount of time with TV. He is fascinated with a toy his son Edgar gave him for Christmas. It is a cabinet with a mirror that reflects three TV channels, so he can check all network programming at the same time.

"It's pretty bad," he commented. "We've got to do something about improving the quality of TV. It's all right to have adventure on TV. My own wife loves to watch the murder shows, only she makes me stay in the room with her because she gets scared. It's good emotional release for her.

"But there is too much murder on TV. We've got to give the people something better, too."

Cubs Sign Everyone But Manager

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs have everyone signed—40 baseball players and eight coaches—but no manager.

And that's how it is going to be for the 1961 National League campaign, says President P. K. Wrigley.

Eight coaches and no field manager for a ball club that hasn't finished in the league's first division since 1946 and hasn't won a pennant since 1945.

Who will run the Cubs?

Wrigley has said each of the eight coaches could be at the helm at various times; or one of the eight could emerge as the leader.

Earlier Wrigley said managers are like relief pitchers and should be shuffled around according to how well they are producing.

The Cubs aren't picked to go anywhere in the league race this year. But things could be interesting with eight coaches running the team.

PLAYERS ARRESTED

MANCHESTER (AP) — Four members of the Manchester United soccer team were arrested Friday for shooting — with water pistols—pedestrians who walked near their automobiles. The four, including internationalists Johnny Giles and Wilf McGuinness, are to appear in court Monday on a charge of threatening a breach of the peace.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Sunday, February 12, 1961

General Tendencies: Now you have a Sunday when you would be wise to look to the past and to benefit by exploring the fine example that the Great Emancipator placed before us. Then you can look and see if your own principles are in tune with the finest type of life that you could lead. But be very practical for the aspects are fine for a sturdy stalwart, secure new structure to your every-day affairs.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Acting in such a way that you become an inspiration to others is most commendable today and this evening, which should be spent in the company of both old friends and worthwhile new ones. Be patriotic, absolutely ethical.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Listening to the wise words of the most spiritual person you know can be most helpful today. Later make it a point to cultivate those individuals who live a life based on high principles and emulate their manners, customs. Grow.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Be sure you follow those hunches today which can lead you to live a more happy and successful life. Make practical plans for the future based on the highest precepts you can comprehend. P.M. fine for romance, happiness.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) In dealing with others today and in the future, be sure you live the Golden Rule so that you can make the days ahead most happy and infinitely more successful. Cooperate with others instead of being belligerent. P.M have fun.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) This is the day to be of real service to those who play a vital part in your life so that the future becomes more happy and harmonious, successful. P.M. take health treatments you need and be sure you get clothing in good order.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure you attend church services, then be out and about with those people you most enjoy and who can make your life happier, more satisfying. Have a wonderful time with everyone. Be co-operative and cheerful.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sympathetic to the needs of closest of kin and do everything in your power to make their lives more happy and prosperous. Find new outlets that will assist you to do just this. Be kind, considerate.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure you get together with individuals today whose lives are an inspiration and listen to what they have to say so that your own life can be bettered. P.M. Step out with close ties, neighbors for a celebration.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Concentrate upon the fine standards under which you were reared and add to this the proven principles in own experience so that you can map out the most ideal way of life for the future. Be practical — advance.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) The right day to revert to the highest principles of endeavor so that you can plan the future more wisely and achieve far greater success, whether in personal or business life. P.M. be with high-minded people, those able to help you.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentration upon the most practical and ethical methods of operation for the future will pay off big dividends in the days to come. Don't leave so much to chance, but think out what is to be done in a precise way.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) There is an excellent opportunity now to ally yourself with one of experience and know-how who can best guide you in the future, whether in business or personal affairs of importance. P.M. have fun at club or other meetings for entertainment.

If your child is born today .. he, or she, is one of those intelligent beings who first must know the reason and meaning of an order or suggestion before carrying through with it. And since there is great ability to perform, be sure you give the finest education possible, especially of an academic nature. Then this life becomes most promising and real fame is in the chart. Give spiritual generic training, too.

Monday, February 13, 1961.

General Tendencies: This is a day to get together with as many persons as possible to let them know what your hopes and wishes actually are. Be sure you do open up all kinds of new and improved pleasures and outlets that can be mutually enjoyed and appreciated by you, and by them. Action now of humanitarian nature, also.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Contact as many persons as possible that you wish to have allied with you in the future and talk over matters of policy and remunerations. Among these can be persons you have never met, but are fine possibilities. Be active!

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Contact higher-ups and discuss matters that have been on your mind for a long time. Reach for greater rapport. Take them out to dinner and combine business with pleasure. Be dynamic, charming and nicely dressed. Expand.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Since you are highly inspired right now and have excellent, practical ideas to offer, be sure you contact those persons of means who can best help you to commercialize on them. Use the direct approach and be grateful for all assistance.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Follow through on that idea to put all of your affairs on a more modern basis and have everything streamlined, from the material to the aesthetic. Evening is fine for romance with loves done. Be thoughtful and charming.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) It would be a good idea now to get together with associates and listen to their ideas and suggestions. Later, give your own viewpoints and thusly you reach far greater understanding for the future. Strive for true harmony, success.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A day to be most co-operative with fellow workers so that you can work together in the most efficient way possible. Strive for combined success. P.M. take health treatments you need and add something new to wardrobe. Be happy.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A day for fun and relaxation with those you truly like and enjoy. Put your talents to the test and commercialize on them. Have fun at recreations that are enjoyed by the majority. Become more popular in P.M.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A day to spend making own home the most charming place expressive of own personality and then inviting friends and clients in for a delightful time. Be expansive and generous, charming with everyone. Be proud of your surroundings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get into the fine spirit of some time past by looking up dear and charming pals you have almost forgotten. Renew genial comradeship. P.M. go out to dinner in high style and have a good time. Do whatever work is important later.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Financial matters should occupy the best part of this day, especially repaying any debts you owe, making collections, etc. This could easily lead to more remunerative outlets in the future with the same people. Be shrewd, active.

Aquarius J(an. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate upon the finest people you know and then make the contacts that will bring them within your orbit as quickly as possible. Be practical in your discussions with them. P.M. fine for sociability and meeting worthwhile people.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) A day for research work that will uncover the information you need and that will also be helpful to those near and dear to you. Find new outlets that will be more remunerative, too. P.M. help those who are in need or maimed.

If your child is born today .. he, or she, will be one of the gregarious kind, but with the added advantage of a clear and orderly mind which requires neatness and precision about. So, be very sure you give as fine an education as possible that will permit your youngster to combine the old ideas with the new, business and social life beautifully.

FRANK HOWARD

ing applause of the then Conservative and CCF opposition. There was even a dramatic attempt to make him a political martyr by draping a Union Jack over the desk he had to leave for 1½ hours.

Friday's picture was far different. The vote was greeted in silence. It came only after Mr. Michener made a determined effort to restore peace and order, and gave Mr. Howard seven chances to withdraw before invoking House rules born in Oliver Cromwell's times.

Nor was there any great principle at stake—as in the pipeline debate and its furore over closure. In this case, it was a fuss about second reading of the bill to increase pensions.

It started in the Liberal benches. Opposition Leader Pearson said his bill wasn't numbered as it should have been. Alexis Caron (L — Hull) said the bill wasn't available in English and French as it should have been.

TOOK IT UP

At this point Mr. Howard took up Mr. Caron's complaint and made it a point of order. It was against the rules to proceed without copies of the bill in both languages, he said. He wanted the matter "cleared up."

Mr. Churchill entered the debate to suggest that remarks by opposition members indicated "that they do not wish to proceed with the bill today."

Mr. Diefenbaker was on his feet twice.

"It is apparent that there is some endeavor being made to hold up this matter," he said. The opposition statements indicated "a disregard for the proceedings on the part of the opposition . . ."

Mr. Howard complained, on a point of privilege, that Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Churchill had "imputed motives to myself for having raised this point or order in the first place."

"I refer to the incorrect accusation of both honorable gentlemen that there was something nefarious and underhanded about this point," Mr. Howard said.

ASKS WITHDRAW

Mr. Michener said no privilege was involved. But Mr. Howard said:

"May I rise on a point of order and ask the prime minister and the minister of veterans affairs to withdraw their underhanded and scurrilous remarks."

Retorted Mr. Diefenbaker:

"There is nothing of a scurrilous nature in pointing out that the points that have been raised apparently had a design in mind. If he did not have a design, I am sure no one would suggest that he did, but these latter remarks of his cannot go unchallenged."

Mr. Howard accepted the "withdrawal" of Mr. Diefenbaker. But there were cries of "no, no" in the House.

Later, outside the chamber after his suspension, Mr. Howard said that from this he gathered that Conservative back-benchers wanted him to withdraw but felt the prime minister had no reason to do so.

ALLOW TV COVERAGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Despite vigorous objections by Mayor Charlotte Whitton, the board of control Thursday recommended that television coverage of city council meetings be allowed on an experimental basis. Mayor Whitton said the diversion created by TV technicians would disturb the dignity of the meetings.

Minor Hockey

Barons, Browns, Bruins, Red Wings and Rangers advanced into the second round of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's Peewee playoffs at Memorial Arena this morning.

Barons defeated the Maple Leafs 5-1 to take the round 8-2. John Holgate scored three Barons goals, while R. Brooks and Jim McCreary had the others. D. Clements drew one assist. P. Bishop scored the Leaf goal with A. Bradley assisting.

Browns blanked the Macs 5-0 to capture the series 8-0. T. Herrington scored two goals and helped on another. D. Parsons, A. Rodgers and P. Goodfellow also scored and B. Lusk had one assist.

Bruins won over Canadiens 4-2 for a 9-3 victory on the round. R. Hannah and Ross McDougall each fired two goals and Hannah added an assist. David Muir scored both Canadien goals unassisted.

Red Wings blanked the Black Hawks 3-0 thus winning their series by an 8-1 total. Larry Moore scored two Wing goals and set Bill Long up for the third.

The Rangers dropped a 3-2 decision to Quinte but took the series by a total score of 6-5. They won 4-2 last Saturday. Steven Scott and Dennis Chambers fired Ranger goals with B. Wade getting an assist. Richard Ellis scored one Quinte goal and assisted on the other two, scored by G. Taylor and K. McQuaid.

NO RELIEF FOR FALLS

BOSTON (AP)—Horse players who lose money when jockeys fall off the horses they bet on aren't going to get any legislative relief this year. The state House of Representatives Thursday turned down a bill which read: "A person placing a wager on a certain horse in a running horse race shall be reimbursed to the extent of the amount wagered if the jockey falls or is thrown off the horse on which the wager has been placed."

Quinte COSSA Basketball

By BILL BURLEY

Loud cheering burst through the confines of Prince Edward Collegiate as the Picton seniors upset the Quinte seniors' first-place lead. The Quinte juniors kept up the pride of their alma mater, retaining their first-place position. Picton played an all-round game, kept the odds of the game even. Likewise, as the juniors, the Quinte bantams took their game by a 35-21 score. The Picton seniors eked out a win in a 55-54 tilt.

SENIORS

Quinte took to hooping for the first few minutes but were soon checked by a Picton onslaught. PCI kept the ball from the clutches of the Quinte players as much as possible. The Saints got off a number of shots but their aim wasn't with them Thursday night. Picton's Rick Lee was without a doubt the star of the game. In the last four minutes of play, Quinte edged up to tie the Prince Edwards. PCI then took to another lead but Quinte came right back to tie it up again. The fourth ended with a tied game and a three-minute overtime was called. The overtime was fought violently for the game but Picton pulled off a foul shot in the last two seconds of play and took the game 55-54.

Lineups:

Picton Biolgajewski 2, Lee 27, Robinson, Taylor 7, Burr 5, Prowse 3, Henry, Gerow, Hawker 11.

Quinte: Baker, Rose, Follwell 7, Davis 7, Marriott, Locke 11, Mills 6, Michaud 7, Campbell 14.

JUNIORS

The junior game was wide open as Quinte swamped Picton with a 52-38 win. In the first quarter Quinte hooped up a 12-point lead over the Prince Edward team. In the second Picton crept up on the Saints and tied up the score. The third remained a shooters' battle while the lead was shared by both teams. In the fourth Quinte pulled out and hooped up a big margin.

The Saints took the game and kept their first-place spot with a score of 52 to 38. High scorer was Wayne Gilroy of Quinte with 20 points.

Lineups:

Picton: Brummell 3, Greenfield 2, Narval 18, Detlor 4, Coulter 7, Sutherland 1, Lobb, Willis, Clapp 5, Tubbs.

Quinte: Irvine 4, Burley 6, Onderdonk, McBride, Fair 8, Hall 5, Gilroy 20, Firkin 2, Philips 2, Turner 7, Mathews.

BANTAMS

The Quinte bantams took their game easily in the fourth after a hard struggle in the preceding quarters. Quinte is now creeping towards that first place seat as they take game after game with only two losses to their credit. The first was a toss-up between either team as the only points scored were in the last few minutes of the quarter. Coming back in the next quarters, Quinte built up a substantial lead to keep down the persisting Picton threat. In the fourth quarter the Saints hooped up the extra points to wind up the game with a 35-21 victory over the pride of Prince Edward Collegiate.

Lineups:

Picton: Brown, Reid, Hicks, Farrington, Frederick, Adams, Hobson 2, Smith 7, Kelferty 7, Lennot, Finnegan 5, Rutter, Arnard.

Quinte: Beach 2, Middleton, Fletcher, Reppard 8, Eves 15, Campbell, Leslie 10, Bylsma 2, Flindall, Livingston, Miles.

BOARD TO BUILD

Speaking in the throne debate, Fernand Guindon (PC—Glengarry) criticized the opposition for charging that the government was only paying "lip service" to the unemployment problem in Cornwall.

He said the unemployment situation in his home town was due mainly to circumstances beyond the government's control: the decision to build the seaway away from the city through United States waters; completion of the seaway and power project which had employed as many as 5,000 persons, and the closing of Canadian Cottons Limited because of its incompetitive condition.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Man With $60,000 at Retirement Discovers He Has Problems Too

By THOMAS COLLINS

This is a matter of money. It is the case history of a 63-year-old man who can collect a pension of $184 a month if he retires now (which he wants to do). He has accumulated as estate roughly worth $60,000.

That is a pile of money for most people who retire nowadays but this man's dilemma may be of help to many who retire with less.

In his own words:

"The $80,000 in my estate could be invested in a number of safe places for a return of four per cent — or $3400 a year. This is $200 a month which, when added to the $184 pension, would provide a nice $384 for my wife and myself to play in the surf.

"If only it were that simple.

"The normal fellow who acquires $80,000 acquires it in bits and pieces and at my age has a crazy quilt of investments that won't do his bidding. About $15,000 of what I own is in our house. I bought this house long ago for $8000 so the $7000 profit I will make, if I sell it, will be subject to a capital gains tax of about $1800, plus a 5 per cent commission to the real estate salesman. Immediately then, you can scratch that much from my wealth.

AVERAGES LESS THAN 3 PER CENT

"The remaining $45,000 is invested in (1) the common stocks of a utility company, (2) the common stocks of a steel company, (3) two mutual funds, (4) some savings bonds, (5) a savings and loan association. The income from this pot pourri of investments averages less than 3 per cent so I should really cash in everything and reinvest the $45,000 at the safe 4 per cent I know I could get.

"But if I cash in, I must pay a brokerage commission for part of what I cash, pay another commission for the new investment I buy, and on top of all that, pay another capital gains tax on what profits I have made from my pot pourri over the years.

"However, suppose my present investments were paying me the 4 per cent I now want to receive. I would be in an even worse mess. The utility pays me a divident every three moths, the steel company sends a dividend every month, the savings and loan pays a divident twice a year and the mutual fund comes through every January.

"How can I live on an income which comes in in such bizarre fashion? I'd need a book keeper to tell me when another $15 cheque was due and a warden to keep me from blowing the big annual and semi-annual dividents.

"I don't think it's unusual for many men to reach their 60s with such a hodge podge of wealth as I have, because a man who works on a salary salts away a little here and a little there as he goes along. He hasn't the knowledge or the foresight to store away his dimes and dollars in one neat solid package that he can one day untie for a neat clean $200 a month which I would now like to be able to do.

WILL CRAMP STYLE

"I figure that if I now put my savings into sensible order, my $80,000 estate is worth maybe $48,000. That, I must sadly admit, will cramp my retirement style.

"I tell you all this not to ask you for a solution. I don't think there is one. I tell it merely to cite one of the serious facets of retirement that doesn't get the attention it should."

Apply this man's problem to what savings you have and you may discover things about your future income that have not occurred to you. This man has "divesified" his investments and "to diversity" is a very fashionable phrase in the best investment circles. It can also be a mess for the fellow who has to live on the irregular dividends.

A man approaching retirement, since he must budget his income and outgo on some sort of monthly basis, would be wise to begin channeling his savings into two or three sonservative investments that would all provide him with dividend checks on the same date, or better still, he should acquire three investments which would pay him staggered quarterly divided cheques, ooe each month.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — Several friends and relatives from Thomasburg attended the funeral of Mrs. Mary Morton, of Belleville, Ontario, which took place in the chapel of the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home last Friday afternoon, with the Rev. C. W. Coleman in charge.

Interment was in Moira Cemetery where the graveside service was conducted by the Rev. T. F. Townsend. Mr. Henry Morton of Thomasburg is a son of the deceased.

The sympathy of Thomasburg district is extended to the bereaved family.

Mr. Richard Harvey spent a couple of days last week in Ottawa, where he joined the Canadian Army in the Tank Division. He has since reported to Camp Borden where he will be stationed.

Mr. Lorne Carleton of Ontario Dairy School, Kemptville, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Carleton.

The funeral of Clarence Earl Jeffery of Napanee, formerly of Thomasburg District, who passed away suddenly in Kingston General Hospital, early last Saturday morning took place from the Funeral Parlors, Napanee to the Anglican Church, Napanee with interment in Thomasburg Cemetery on Monday.

The sudden passing of this comparatively young man came as a shock to all who knew him. The bereaved family is extended condolences from all of Thomasburg district residents.

The card party in the I.O.O.F. Hall sponsored by the Crescent Rebekah Lodge on Monday evening, was well attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Post also Mr. and Mrs. Manley Post of Eldorado, were Monday afternoon and evening guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilson.

Your Car

Check Choke If Car Stalls On Cold Days

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Stalling, shortly after the car is started on a cold morning, is generally due to a lean or sticking choke—and the trouble disappears as soon as the engine warms up. There are many possibilities, however, when frequent stalling occurs after engine warm up.

If the engine suddenly goes dead without coughing or sputtering, ignition trouble is indicated and defective or poorly gapped spark plugs or points become the strongest suspects.

When fuel system trouble is apparently at fault, several sources deserve investigation. For example, a sticking choke which causes an over-rich mixture will permit easy starting, but will eventually result in flooding when the engine reaches normal operating temperature. A binding carburetor float needle valve is another common fault.

Check also for a failing fuel pump, manifold air leakage or possible carburetor icing. On carburetors so equipped, the dashpot which retards throttle closing speed sometimes fails and causes constant stalling.

From R. H.: "Does the leanness or the richness of the fuel mixture affect the speed of combustion?"

(A) Yes. Combustion is faster when the mixture is lean.

W. L. asks: "There is vibration in my car which only the driver seems to feel at speeds between 40 and 50 mph. Would this be due to engine or running gear malfunction?"

(A) Try running the engine at this speed range while the transmission is in neutral — then report the results to your mechanic.

S. N. writes: "In our community we get sub-zero weather in winter and I rarely get the car engine well-heated, although I drive a fairly good stretch every day. A high temperature thermostate has helped, but not enough."

(A) Many drivers with this problem remove the fan during winter and get faster warmup as well as better all-around perfomance.

From C. D.: "Gas consumption is greater in city driving than on the open road — but how about oil consumption?"

(A) An engine driven at high speeds will use more oil than the engine which normally runs at low speed.

Garden Notes

Hardy Annuals Are a Good Buy

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Do you know the difference between half hardy, and hardy annuals? Half hardy types must be planted outdoors after all danger of frost passes. This is about mid-May. This means late blooms. Otherwise they must be started indoors six weeks earlier.

The hardy annuals can be planted where it is to bloom outdoors the first week of April. This saves the tiresome job of sterilizing soil, and flats, shifting the flats here and there to get the best light and the constant care of watering and insuring sufficient humidity. Transplanting is eliminated and the weatherman is sure to provide good growing conditions. There is a substantial saving of cash too since a package of seeds will be much less than flats of seedlings.

Prepare the soil to a depth of eight inches to one foot. Break it up well, work to a fine tilth and mix in plenty of humus such as peat moss and a sufficient supply of balanced chemical fertilizer. The old story of annuals doing best in poor soil is a fable.

USE GOOD PATTERN

Don't sow the seeds in rows unless you are planting a solid bed of one kind of plant. Plan your area in irregular plots, circles or overlapping half circles. A three-foot hoop is a good pattern.

Consult your seed catalogue for heights, habits and colors to gain the best effects. Consider also whether the plants like sun or semi-shade, dry hot positions or low damp soil.

Measure your garden and make a plan on graph paper or make your own by marking off paper in half inch squares and allowing half inch to represent a foot. Be sure to arrange for the tall types at the back and low plants for edging.

When the area has been marked off in circles, draw lines like wheel spokes. Deepen these to form shallow drills. Sow seeds and cover to a depth needed for the size of the seeds. Firm down with a piece of board or brick. Have ready a weather proof label, scotch tape will do this and place in center of circle on wodden or wire stake.

When seedlings are up and have their second pair of leaves thin to two inches apart. Later thin to six or more inches apart, according to the eventual size of plants. Excess plants may be transplanted to cutting garden.

SOME GOOD SELECTIONS

Here are some hardy annuals that will grow three to four feet tall; Cleome, spider flower in pink and white, Indian Spring hollyhock, semi-double orange, Nicotiana, flowering in fine shades of pink. Marigolds, African, extra tall in shades of palest yellow to deep tobacco, the new hybrids stay open all day and have lovely shades of lavender, pink and maroon.

In shorter plants you will also find a wealth of fine material. May I recommend Bartonia Aurea, it has big saucer-like blooms with a thick pincushion of bright stamens. This is good for semi-shade and likes peaty, moist soil. It has attractive foliage too. Lavatera, annual mallow has deep rose pink blooms produced abundantly all summer. This looks more like a shrub than an annual plant. Good filler for foundation planting in a new home or for the back of a border. L. Rosea Splendens a new type is just two feet tall, long season of bloom and fine rose-pink blooms.

For a solid bed of low growing plants, or a bight border choose Linaria, Toad Flax, Maroccana Excelsior, mixed colors. This is like tiny snap dragons with bushy compact plants eight to ten inches high. They bloom six weeks from planting and continue all summer if the faded heads are sheared off occasionally.

Look for the many hardy annuals they will give you the quick color you want with the minium of effort.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Two cups of coffee, three-day colds, brainwork and breathing.

COFFEE COUNTDOWN

It takes about 20 minutes for the caffeine in your cup of coffee to reach the peak of its stimulatory effect on you.

Furthermore that second cup will have practically no additional pep-up effect unless you drink it 2½ hours later, a medical journal reports.

THREE DAY COLDS?

Antibiotics can speed your recovery from a cold, British researchers report.

They tested the idea that common cold attacks are aggravated by bacteria that normally inhabit the nose and throat. Antibiotics destroy bacteria, but not the viruses which cause most colds.

Half of the subjects given antibiotic lozenges were rid of their colds in three days—a better showing than untreated patients. But there was no evidence that antibiotics sped the cure of colds starting in the chest.

BRAINS AT WORK

Your brain works 24 hours a day. It regulates the number of red blood cells your body makes (about 3,000,000 a second). It controls blood sugar, body temperature, breathing.

Orders from the brain pass through a three-inch mass of tangled nerves at the base your skull. Eighty-six majo nerves carry the orders smaller nerves, some tini than a hair.

So says a new booklet, E ploring the Brain of Man, published by the U.S. nation committee for research neurological disorders whic points out:

One in every 16 babies bor in the United States suffer some disorder of the [illegible] o nervous system.

BREATHING CRIPPLES

Doctors often see a patien with an obvious nasal deformity. The patient says h breathes well, but he alway sleeps on one side, wakes fatigued, has post-nasal drip frequent headaches or sinu or ear trouble.

Sometimes symptoms are so severe that these persons are in chronic ill health—and can be classed as breathing cripples.

After surgery removes the deformity, the patient sometimes discovers he never actually knew good breathing.

RED ROCKET RACES TOWARD VENUS

Lumumba Slain By Katanga Villagers

Official Story Is Received With Scepticism

'Escape Story' Possible Ruse to Hide Murder

ELISABETHVILLE (AP)—African villagers killed Patrice Lumumba Sunday night, the Katanga government announced today. The announcement brought a new threat of civil war for all The Congo.

Godefroid Munongo, Interior Minister of Katanga Province which has seceded from the rest of The Congo, said the villagers "massacred" Lumumba and two lieutenants just two days after the Katanga government announced their escape from detention.

Lumumba, firebrand of Congo independence and first premier of the new country, was 35.

"We will not disclose the village nor the tribe because we do not want them to suffer any reprisals in the future," Munongo said.

But the place of death was not far from where their escape car had been found, he said. This spot was previously described as 45 miles from the farmhouse the three men fled Friday. This, in turn, was 220 miles west of Elisabethville.

TROUBLE AHEAD

Lumumba's death is bound to have widespread repercussions in The Congo, where tribal rivalries are fierce.

He became premier when the Congo attained independence from Belgium June 30. Soon Soviet technicians and equipment were flowing into The Congo, along with a United Nations peace force of 20,000 men which Lumumba at first welcomed, then repudiated. In September, President Joseph Kasavubu, after weeks of uncertainty, threw Lumumba out of office and sent him to jail for trial on charges of crimes against the nation.

But even in detention Lumumba made his weight felt, and at the time of his death his followers were in control of about a third of The Congo.

The status of the country has become a point of contention between East and West. The United Nations Security Council was assembling in New York to deal with the problem today as the Katanga government made its announcement of Lumumba's death.

Some UN officials had believed the Katanga government's report of Lumumba's escape last Friday was a story designed to cover up his death.

But interior minister Munongo insisted African villagers killed Lumumba and the two lieuten-

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian Zorin charged today that Patrice Lumumba was the victim of a colonialist murder and he scorned a call by UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold for a United Nations investigation.

Zorin spoke at an emergency meeting of the 11-member UN Security Council which convened in an atmosphere of crisis shock following reports from The Congo that Lumumba, deposed premier, was killed by tribesmen after escaping from prison.

Hammarskjold opened the meeting with a call for an impartial investigation—which UN officers in The Congo have already attempted to begin—but Zorin reacted angrily with the statement "we have not the slightest confidence in the secretary - general or his Congo command after all that has been committed in The Congo."

U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, speaking before Zorin, pleaded for a "sober resolve" among Congo elements not to seek revenge but to seek conciliation in an attempt to avoid further bloodshed.

ASKS UN BACKING

Stevenson appealed to all governments to avoid action which might inflame the situation and to continue to give support to the UN to ensure success of its mission in The Congo.

Zorin declared the Katanga provincial government of Moise Tshombe must be made to pay for the killing of Lumumba.

He assailed Hammarskjold, blaming him for permitting such a thing under the flag of the United Nations and criticized other members of the Security Council for turning down a Soviet request for a private meeting on The Congo.

Hammarskjold told the council he had instructed Brig.-Gen. Mengasha Hyassu, chief of staff of the UN Congo command, to insist upon complete co-operation of the Katanga authorities.

WARNS AGAINST INCREASE

OSHAWA (CP)—The United States may reciprocate in kind if Canada increases tariffs on goods imported from the U.S., George Burt, Canadian director of the United Automobile Workers of America (CLC), said Sunday. He told a union education conference that increased tariffs might benefit Canadian auto workers but might not be good for all of Canada.

Charge Woman With Murder

PARRY SOUND (CP)—Mrs. Helen Noganosch, 43, has been charged with murder in the stabbing of her 50-year-old husband, Paul. He was found at the couple's nearby home Saturday.

ENGINEER DIES

KINGSTON (CP) — Matthew Garvie, 48, chief engineer at the Ontario hospital in Brockville, was pronounced dead on arrival at hospital here Sunday night after his car ran into a ditch at the junction of Highways 38 and 401. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis:—A storm in northern Indiana will pass over the Lower Lakes tonight. Mild cloudy weather prevails with strong gusty southeast winds as this storm approaches, but there is little precipitation in evidence. Cooler air moving south behind this storm should drop temperatures slightly on Tuesday.

SUNDAY MORNING FIRE — At the Silver Grill, Front Street, caused an estimated $65,000 damage. The restaurant was gutted and smoke damage was caused to adjoining stores and two upstairs apartments. Picture shows restaurant front following fire.

Fifteen Locked In Bombay Home Burned to Death

BOMBAY, India (AP) — Fifteen persons were locked in a house and burned to death Friday in the grimmest tragedy yet in bitter Hindu-Moslem feuding in Madhya Pradesh state.

Unofficial figures show 47 persons have been killed in rioting and other violence near Jubbelpore in the last eight days.

The latest incident occurred at the village of Sarupa. Twelve members of the band which locked the 15 in the house and burnd it were arrested.

A police announcement did not say whether those burned were Hindus or Moslems.

Religious feuding started in Jubbelpore after the alleged rape of a Hindu girl by two Moslems.

KENNEDY ON TV

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy's next press conference will be held at 7 p.m. EST Wednesday and will be carried on live television by the NBC and ABC networks, the White House announced Saturday.

Fire Marshal Will Investigate $65,000 Fire on Front Street

Fire damage estimated at approximately $65,000 resulted early Sunday morning when flames swept through the Silver Grill on Front Street, resulting in smoke damage to an adjacent poolroom and hardware store and also to second floor apartments.

Origin of the fire, which is still undetermined, will be investigated by Inspector Al Williams of the Ontario Fire Marshal's Department.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said the fire started in the basement of the restaurant.

A city police officer on patrol and a local taxi driver discovered the fire at about the same time and turned in the alarm shortly before four o'clock. Chief Gerald Vance turned in a general alarm at four o'clock, bringing out all fire fighting equipment in the city.

Dense smoke made it impossible for firemen to fight the fire from the inside and it was nearly two hours before the blaze was brought under control.

During the height of the blaze the floor of the restaurant caved in, dumping restaurant equipment into the basement.

Firemen remained on the scene all Sunday morning, guarding against further outbreak and shortly before noon were still pouring water into the restaurant basement. Front Street between the Upper Bridge and Victoria Avenue was cordoned off until noon Sunday.

Building owner James Yeotes is holidaying in Mexico.

Christian Rule Against Polygamy Big Roadblock to Growth in Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the big roadblocks to Christianity in Africa is its rule against polygamy. And a church official, back from that continent, is convinced there should be some changes in the rule.

"Frankly, after a year over there, I changed my mind about polygamy," said Rev. Chester Lee Marcus, of Cleveland, secretary for racial and cultural relations of the United Church of Christ.

At present, African churches deny full membership to families of men with more than one wife—a widespread situation in Africa. They can become only associate members, which means they cannot share in communion.

"In most every church, there are as many non-communicants who would like to be full members, but can't, as there are are communicants," Marcus said.

If Christianity is not to remain crippled by this condition, he said in an interview, the churches must modify the rule to admit such persons on condition that the husband takes no more wives, and that children are taught that monagamous marriage is best.

Marcus, 43, a Negro clergyman, spent last year in West Africa on a special assignment by his church, a recent merger of the Congregational Christian General Council and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

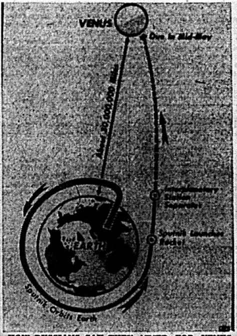
"We accept all kinds of other sinners into the church—assuming that polygamy is sin—and hope that in the fellowship of the church they will develop the sensitivity to see the sin and get rid of it."

However, the idea that polygamy in Africa is sinful is "an assumption I'm not prepared to make."

"Sin has to be tied in with a man's motives, and in this case the motives are the highest rather than the lowest. It does not involve lustful males trying to get as many wives around as possible.

"Polygamy is all these people have known. When they come in contact with Christianity and believe it, they want to be a part of it.

"It is asking too much to say that a man should abandon three of his four wives, especially when this relationship was entered in good faith, with no awareness that a moral question was involved."



HOW RUSSIANS SAY THEY AIMED FOR VENUS — Drawing illustrates roughly how the Russians say they fired an interplanetary station Sunday toward a mid-May rendezvous with the planet Venus. Boxes chart sequence of launchings as a multistage rocket carried a new sputnik into orbit; a rocket was fired from the sputnik, and the rocket then fired the space station. Distance of Venus from the earth varies from 26 million to 160 million miles. Russians are aiming at Venus when it will be about 30 million miles from the earth. (Ap Wirephoto Drawing.)

CANADA'S TRADE POSITION POOR SAYS MINISTER

Must Make Goods Which Can Compete

MONTREAL (CP)—Canada is like a boxer who has let himself get "fat and sloppy and out of condition" and must get back in shape in order to compete, Trade Minister Hees said Sunday night.

In the post-war period, before the west European economies recovered, it was easy for Canada to sell goods and the country got to be like "a boxer who gets to be champ and gets a swelled head," Mr. Hees said.

He was addressing students from about 20 Ontario and Quebec colleges at the closing dinner of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation's two-day Macdonald-Cartier conference.

Mr. Hees said the government was doing everything possible to stimulate Canadian trade abroad, but it was up to management and labor to make goods which can compete.

He said Canadian goods lagged particularly in design, and good design was essential if Canadian products were to compete with lower-priced foreign goods.

Only increased sales can cure unemployment, Mr. Hees said, and it is up to the Canadian people themselves to provide the cure. The government could not do it alone.

Mr. Hees was one of four federal cabinet ministers who spoke to more than 150 student delegates during the conference. The delegates also attended seminars on such problems as external affairs, national defence, unemployment, welfare and dominion - provincial relations.

Saturday, External Affairs Minister Green told them Canada could not take up a neutralist stance without losing her self-respect.

Canada has never been afraid to "stand up and be counted," he said.

If the country adopted a neutralist policy in international affairs "we would lose our self-respecth and if we lost our self-respect there wouldn't be much left of Canada."

He said some Canadian critics suggested Canada would have more influence in world councils if she were neutral, "but we wouldn't have any

Whites, Negroes Join in Protest

ATLANTA (AP)—Hundreds of young people observed emancipator Abraham Lincoln's birthday Sunday with demonstrations against segregated motion picture theatres and in support of the "jail, no bail" stand of some imprisoned Negro students.

Whites and Negroes in both the north and south of the U.S. protested segregated movies. In some instances pairs of white youths and Negroes made unsuccessful attempts to get into all-white sections of southern theatres.

Leaves Sputnik On Three-Month Trip To Planet

Most Sensational Step Since First Satellite

MOSCOW (Reuters)—Russia's spectacular new space rocket hurtled toward Venus today on a 30,000,000-mile journey that may help solve the riddle of whether there is life on the planet nearest earth.

The Soviet Union's 1,420-pound Interplanetary Station was due to rendezvous with the "evening star" in the second half of May following its novel launching from an orbiting earth satellite Sunday.

As Western scientists warmly praised the launching of the Venus probe as a major achievement in space technology, leading Soviet astronomer Boris Kukarin said it marked a "new stage in man's conquest of interplanetary space."

It brought closer "the fulfilment of man's dream to visit and investigate the planets," he said.

The launching also warmed up the space race. Sunday's Venus shot was rated the most sensational achievement in the field since Russia sent the first sputnik into space in October, 1957.

U.S. BEHIND

It was noted that a report from the United States Sunday night said the U.S. did not expect to attempt a planetary launching from an earth satellite for another 18 months to two years. The U.S. has tried vainly to send satellites into orbit around Venus.

Many scientists thought the new Soviet space-vehicle may be carrying telephotographic equipment to send back pictures of cloud-veiled Venus. A report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1959 declared Venus was far too hot for life and that any lakes or seas on its surface would be composed of molten metal.

LIFE JUST STARTING?

However, Soviet astronomer Nikolai Barbashov stated last year that recent discoveries apparently showed Venus, nearly the same size as earth, is in the stage represented by the carbohiferous period on earth. Life might be just appearing there in forms unknown on earth, he added.

NEW YORK (AP) — Russia's Venus-bound rocket is her most spectacular and significant space shot in several respects:

1. It apparently opens a fourth phase in the Soviet space program—to explore the planets. The next and fifth stage could be to put a man into space.

2. Russia created, in effect, a space platform from which to launch the rocket. Orbiting satellites, say some military experts, might also be used to launch nuclear warhead rockets downward at prime targets on earth.

3. It is another dramatic demonstration of the Soviet lead in space capabilities.

AT MOON FIRST

The first phase of Russia's space program was to send three shots concerned largely with the moon. Then three studying effects on animals and other life in space travel around the earth. Now the fourth stage is the exploratory reach toward nearby planets.

Veiled by white clouds, Venus is a worthy first planetary target. The weight of the Venus messenger—1,420 pounds—indicates it carries instruments which could answer puzzling questions about Venus.

En route, the vehicle could add greatly to knowledge about radiation in space, magnetic fields, and the effects of the sun and space phenomena upon life on earth.

One dream for the space age is to rocket up into a precise orbit the prefabricated material which men in space then could put together to fashion great service stations from which big and lightweight space ships, also assembled in space, could take off efficiently on months-long space missions.

Will Circle Sun If Venus Missed

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet scientists said today their new space vehicle will become an artificial planet circling the sun if it does not succeed in hitting Venus.

Either way, they said, the spectacular rocket may unravel some of the secrets of the earth's nearest sister planet—including whether there is life on it.

A shot at Mars is considered a strong future possibility.

Further news of the space vehicle was expected when it has covered about 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 miles. Some scientists here believe Venus will be about 62,500,000 miles from earth when the vehicle approaches it.

Reveal Sino-Russia Split Bitter But Picture Warm Alliance Now

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Chinese and Soviet Communist leaders today painted a picture of warm friendship between their two countries in the wake of reports that the conflict between them during the last 18 months has been far more bitter than previously realized.

A Communist Chinese leader in Peking hailed Chinese-Soviet friendship as "strong as a bronze wall" and said the Chinese people would "remain forever the most faithful and most reliable comrades-in-arms of the Soviet people."

Liao Cheng-chih, vice-president of the Sino-Soviet Friendship Association and chairman of the overseas Chinese affairs commission, made the remarks in an address to a rally of some 10,000 persons marking the 11th anniversary of the Chinese-Soviet friendship and mutual assistance treaty.

Russia marked the anniversary of the treaty Sunday with a message saying last year's Communist party summit meeting in Moscow had "charted the course for further unity between socialist countries."

A commentator for the official Soviet news agency Tass wrote today that the Russian and Chinese people were sincere friends.

The professions of friendship followed the publication in London and New York of documents showing the extent of the rift between China and Russia dur-

Minister Will Not Confirm Butter Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton declined Saturday to confirm published reports that he has submitted to cabinet a plan that would reduce butter prices 10 cents a pound after April 1. He told a reporter following a cabinet meeting that the government's price support program for dairy products "is something we are working on."

Mr. Hamilton did not say whether a proposal has been submitted to the cabinet.

The newspaper said it would involve paying subsidies to butter producers in Ontario and Quebec alone of more than $42,000,000.

Mr. Hamilton has already indicated a program of that nature is under study by his department.

He told the Commons last month that he is trying to find out whether retail butter prices can be reduced to increase consumption while at the same time maintaining incomes of producers.

The government has been holding large stocks of surplus butter purchased under its price support program. Latest figures showed their value at $86,000,000 last Dec. 1.

FOUR "Y" ENTRANTS PASS NEAR TOP INSTRUCTORS' COURSE

Four members of the Belleville YMCA recently passed their Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's course held in Kingston over the past two weekends. The local quartet, which consisted of Glenys Dickey, Julek Bradford, Bob Doogan and John People's, passed very close to the top of a class of 35.

Auto Plunges From One Road Onto Another

TORONTO (CP) — A sports car heading west along Highway 401 at the Highway 27 interchange went out of control Sunday night and:

Careened 300 feet down the centre boulevard—missing two light standards; sped 45 feet across the eastbound lane; landed on an embankment, crossing it and dropping 44 feet to the southbound lanes of Highway 27—almost landing on top of a car; and careened another 300 feet into an earth embankment.

The driver, Melvin Wise and his passenger, Edward Samuels, both 22 and from Toronto, escaped serious injury.

OSD to Convert To Natural Gas Due Soot Bother

A result of continued complaints from area householders about soot nuisance from coal burning boilers, heating at the Ontario School for the Deaf in the west end of the city will be converted to natural gas.

Local officials of Lakeland Natural Gas who will be doing the installation, said the necessary mains were expected to be laid in the "very near future."

W. E. Sandercock, MLA for Hastings West, over the weekend said he was happy that the Ontario Department of Public Works had decided to do something to alleviate the soot nuisance from coal-burning boilers at the school. He noted that in recent years he had received numbers of complaints from residents in the area who claimed soot was getting into their homes and ruining wash placed on clothes lines.

Mr. Harry Gibson, local manager for Lakeland Gas, said conversion units would be installed for the two 125 horsepower boilers at the school. Heating load for the two boilers would be about 12,000 cubic feet of gas per hour, he said.

To bring gas to the OSD approximately 5,000 feet of four-inch gas main will have to be laid from the corner of Dundas and Parker Streets.

The line will be extended along Dundas Street West, then north on Palmer Road to enter the school property on a line with the boiler house.

Just when work will commence on the main laying was not known, except that it was expected to be in the very near future. Depending on frost conditions, the main extension is expected to be completed in a few days' time.

Accident Claims Second Victim Over Weekend

Friday night's two-car crash north of Stirling in which one of the drivers, John Wilbur Johnson, 18, of Stirling, was instantly killed, claimed its second victim over the weekend.

Saturday night Alan Johnston, 17, of R.R. 1, Harold, (no relation), a passenger in the Johnson vehicle, died in Belleville General Hospital of injuries suffered in the accident.

The accident, on a township road east of Highway 14, occurred as the occupants of the one car were on their way to a dance at Stirling high school.

Two other persons in the car, Joseph Hagerman, 18, and Gail Morrow, 16, were injured.

MOIRA SECONDARY SCHOOL

By Gayle McDougall and Sharon Flindall

Loud cheers fill the gym as Moira joins full force in the basketball season. Besides the interform games, there are exciting and thrilling interschool competitions. The junior team is really excelling, leading the league with a clean sweep of victories. The bantams, not far behind, have lost only one game and that by a small margin. The seniors are fighting hard, with three victories to their credit.

The girls' teams have played severel games but without any positive results as yet. The bantam team, that has just been organized, shows great promise.

An added attraction at many of these games is the cheerleaders, resplendent in their new maroon plaid skirts, grey sweaters and big "M's."

An inter-form gymnastic competition has just been completed. Congrats go to the gymnasts of G12B and G, who have proved themselves worthy to be winners.

The gym, one of the busiest places in the school is also the scene of our Friday night dances. Since Christmas there have been well attended ones —the Basketball Bop, sponsored by the B.A.S. and the Drama Club's Beatnik Howl. The latter was the setting for the revelries of many black-garbed finger-snapping members of the "Beat Generation." Congrats go to Dave Brown for his "most beat" costume.

A new organization in the school is the Current Affairs Club, under the direction of Mr. Gerald Boyce. The members discuss topics of current interest, such as President Kennedy's government and Canada's defence policies.

To prepare for the COSSA Public Speaking Contest, a junior and senior representative were chosen. Their speeches prove that Anne Mott of G12B and Bob Ross of G10F will be competition to be reckoned with at the contest.

On January 25 we were honored to have a representative from the Bell Telephone Company at our assembly. Previously many of us thought that this company was concerned only with telephones. Mr. Beaudette showed us computers and other machines invented by the Bell Telephone Company.

Another outstanding assembly was the visit of Air Commodore Carpenter, who convinced us that the RCAF is playing an important part in the defence of all the free world.

Coming events include the Science Fair and Display Night to be held Friday, February 17, at Moira, followed by a dance in the gym. The dance will be sponsored by the Student Parliament and everyone is invited to see the displays and attend the dance.

In the near future also is a gymnastic competition with KCVI in which we are sure that Moira will do herself proud.

Leo F. Buckley Dies Suddenly At His Home

Well known Belleville business man, Mr. Leo Buckley, 110 Victoria Avenue, died suddenly on Sunday at his home. He was in his 47th year.

Son of Charles Buckley and the late Teresa Egan, he was born at Roslin, and for many years had been associated with the grocery business in Belleville.

At one time associated with A. and P. Stores here, he had operated his own food market for the past 17 years, first on Front Street and in recent years at the corner of William St. and Victoria Ave.

He was a member of St. Michael's Church and Knights of Columbus, No. 1008, Genoa Assembly, 4th. Degree Knights, also of the Islam Caravan of Alhambra.

He is survived by his wife, the former Marie Cancilla and by twin sons, Timothy and Denis. Three brothers, Patrick and William of Read and Gerard of Brantford, also survive.

Resting at the Funeral Residence of George F. O'Brien; the funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this edition.

10 and 15-Year Banquet Held By Local Union

The United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers International Union, Local No. 219, at Point Anne held its annual Ten and Fifteen Year Banquet at Club CNRAA recently.

Esmond Ellis, vice-president of Local 219, was chairman for the evening. Don Burshaw, president of Local 219, acted as toastmaster and the invocation was given by Frank Insley, recording secretary.

A delicious turkey dinner was served by the ladies of CNRAA. After dinner Toastmaster D. Burshaw introduced the head table and then called on Nelson T. Bradd, district representative of the District Council, No. 10, to address the gathering.

The main guest speaker for the evening, Fourth General Vice - President Joseph J. Knapik of the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers International Union, was introduced by President D. Burshaw. Mr. Knapik spoke on the need for ladies' auxiliaries in the union group and urged the ladies to support their husbands in their work as union members. He also spoke on the great expansion of unions in Canada over the past few years.

Mr. Knapik was thanked by President D. Burshaw and presented with a suitably engraved cigaret lighter to commemorate his visit to the local union.

Fifteen and Ten-Year pins were handed out by J. Knapik and N. Bradd to the eligible members.

Frank Insley, education director and instructor of steward training of Local 219, presented wallets to members who had completed steward training courses in the past year.

The winners of the door prizes were Mrs. Pranas Seirys and Mrs. Clare Foulkner.

The dinner was followed by a dance which was enjoyed by all.

MRS. JAMES McEVOY
(Marmora Twp.)

Requiem Mass was celebrated Saturday by Rev. W. P. Healey in Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, for Mary Bernadette McEvoy, beloved wife of James McEvoy of Marmora Township.

Bearers were Wilbert Jones, Everett Berry, Peter Quinn, William Shannon, Vincent Lynch and Peter Flynn.

Entombment was in the Marmora vault.

Mrs. McEvoy, a lifelong resident of Marmora Township, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Shannon.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. McEvoy leaves two sons, Michael James of Kingston, and John Joseph at home.

A member of the Altar Society and the Catholic Women's League, Mrs. McEvoy died last Wenesday in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough, after being in ill health for some time. She was 77.

EDWARD LEO BRUYEA
Toronto

Native of Deseronto where he was born 66 years ago, Edward Leo Bruyea, of 106 O'Hara Ave., Toronto, died in St. Joseph's Hospital in that city on February 8th.

The funeral was held Saturday morning at the St. Vincent De Paul Church, Deseronto, with Requiem Mass celebrated by Rev. G. T. Martin. Interment was in St. Vincent De Paul Cemetery.

The bearers were four grandsons, Jack Bruyea, Bob Bruyea, Fred Bruyea, Paul Bruyea and Angus MacDonald and Maurice McGuinn.

Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Bruyea, the deceased was a retired CNR trainman and had been ill only for a short time. He was a member of St. Vincent De Paul Church, Toronto, and also belonged to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lena Martin; one son, Aubrey J. Bruyea, Toronto, and a daughter, Mrs. James (Dorothy) Baker of Toronto.

LEAVES SPUTNIK

The official Soviet announcement said the new rocket's purpose is to "carry out a program of physical observations in outer space."

The announcement said it also would check factors concerning the launching, guidance and communications of interplanetary space stations and take measurements on the size of the solar system.

Late Sunday night the Venus-bound rocket was said to be "functioning normally" and moving along close to its predetermined path under observation from a station somewhere in the Soviet Union.

Nine days ago Russia launched a giant seven-ton spaceship, believed to have been a test run for the latest achievement.

Soviet announcements said a heavy satellite first was boosted into orbit Sunday by an "improved multi-stage rocket." Another rocket then was triggered from the sputnik to send the interplanetary station toward Venus.

The Soviet news agency Tass indicated Sunday night that the station's radio transmissions were on the frequency of 922.8 kilo cycles.

It added that at noon Moscow time (4 a.m. EST) Sunday the station was about 78,930 miles from the earth "over the point on the earth's surface at 85 degrees 40 minutes eastern longitude and six degrees 04 minutes northern latitude"—or over the Indian ocean near Ceylon.

Costly Fire On 'Skeena' At Victoria

VICTORIA (CP) — A fire which raged unchecked for nearly four hours Saturday obard H.M.C.S. Skeena, destroyed costly radio equipment, the Royal Canadian Navy disclosed Sunday night.

A formal navy inquiry is to begin today.

The destroyer-escort was in drydock for a propeller check when the fire broke out in a radio room.

Aboard the $20,000,000 vessel were large amounts of ammunition which were threatened during the blaze.

"It is impossible to make an estimate of damage," a navy spokesman said after a preliminary check. "But there was a lot of top-notch equipment in those radio rooms."

Neither would officials comment on the possible cause of the fire, the amount of ammunition moved or how long the Skeena would be out of action.

There were between 120 and 125 crew members aboard the vessel at the time of the fire.

Two Children Are Suffocated

OTTAWA (CP)—Fire Saturday night claimed the lives of Debra, 2, and Patricia, 3, daughters of LAC and Mrs. Kenneth Schmidt.

The father, 27, is in RCAF hospital here recovering from injuries suffered while attempting to rescue the children who succumbed to suffocation, firemen said.

St. Lawrence Club Member Possible Winner

TORONTO (Staff) — Despite very icy and rough secondary roads during the latter part of the 1,300 mile Canadian Winter Rally, St. Lawrence Automobile Club member Homer Trotter, driving a Swedish SAAB for the Rover Car Company team, arrived here Sunday evening in a position to duplicate his win of two years ago, pending the decision of the protest committee of the rally which is faced with a three-way tie for first place out of the 192 entrants who started off.

Belleville entrants Jim Jenkins and Jack Dodson, in the former's 1958 Citroen, lost only 25 points according to the provisional results, which places them very well up towards the top of the private entries. With the exception of making more than a nodding acquaintance with a ditch on two occasions, the Jenkins-Dodson crew experienced no difficulties.

A Renault, piloted by Jim Williamson and Jim Smith, of Belleville also navigated the course within the alloted time but mised a route control point which cost them 500 points and put them and the St. Lawrence Automobile Club's team entry out of the running for a good position to receive some of the trophies available.

The two other club team entries, two Corvairs, piloted by William Charlton of Napanee and Jack Willson of Kingston and by Francis Walsh of Messena, N.Y., and Al Edmunds of Kingston, put up a very creditable showing, with relatively few points lost. All of the club members' cars passed the mechanical and safety inspection at the end of the rally with clean slates.

Sandy Brown Judged Top Senior Speaker

TRENTON — Sandy Brown, grade 12 student at Trenton High School, and Hubert Campbell, a grade 13 student, were the winners in the senior division of the Lions Club public speaking contest at the high school Friday night.

Miss Brown will be sent to the regional finals.

Other entrants in the senior division were Gerald Hunter and Paul Lonergan.

Winners in the junior division were Robert Harris and Lesley Joby. Robert Harris will be sent to the regional finals.

Other entrants in this division were Jim Bonn, Joe Donato, Maureen Coker and Alice Marie Harrison.

Miss Brown's address was based on the exploits of swimmer Marilyn Bell.

Robert Harris chose "Time" as his subject.

Nostrand Sprague acted as chairman for the event and the judges were Duncan McGregor, F. Clifford Phillips of Belleville and Rudolph Woodward of Batawa.

The high school choir, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Spencer, sang several selections.

Don't Monkey With Fires Says Ellis

TRENTON — Fire Chief Cecil Ellis today warned residents against do-it-yourself firefighting.

Saturday afternoon fire broke out in the kitchen at the home of a Trenton resident. The family had left the house for a short visit. The rangette in the kitchen had been left on. The heat from the element melted grease in a container on a shelf over the stove. The melted grease dripped onto the hot element, sending blue flames licking up the wall at the back of the stove.

By the time the householder returned, a fair sized hole had been burned in the kitchen wall. The fire was put out and the occupant of the house notified his landlord.

The owner, in turn, notified the insurance agent, who, realizing the seriousness of the situation, called the fire department. Firemen found that the wall was still smouldering, close to the ceiling.

Chief Ellis said that serious consequences might have been the result of this action on the part of the householder. He urged the public to put in a call to the department when any kind of a fire occurs, large or small.

Also on Saturday, the department was called to a hotel where a fire had broken out in mattresses stored in a large linen cupboard. Although the exact cause of the fire is unknown, the fire chief warned against employees in large establishments, using store rooms for smoking purposes.

Elementary School Total Is up by Two

TRENTON — In his January report, V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of public schools in Trenton, notes that the enrollment in the elementary schools is 2,015, an increase of two over December, 1960.

The report said the two new teachers on the elementary staff Mrs. Kastner at Dufferin and Mrs. Woodbeck at Queen Elizabeth, were carrying on their work in good order and fitting in very well.

During the early part of January, 22 student teachers from the Peterborough Teachers' College spent a week teaching, under supervision, in Trenton schools. At College Street school 14 student teachers taught classes and at the Marmora Street senior school, eight teachers received and gave instruction.

According to the report, all school principals speak highly of the school janitors. Their work is well done and they are co-operative with the teaching staff.

Several school principals have submitted suggestions for improvements to their schools. These are expected to be dealt with when the Board of Education meets tonight.

The skating rinks at the schools are being well patronized and the boys' hockey games are held at the arena every Wednesday and Friday for an hour after school.

Mentioned in the report are the facts that new kitchen cupboards have been installed at Marmora Street Senior Public School and lockers are being built for the senior girls at Prince Charles public school.

Mr. Carswell will discuss classroom space and teacher requirements for September, 1961, with the school board at tonight's meeting, which will be held in North Trenton School at 7.30.

LOCAL RALLYISTS — Jim "Sandy" Smith and Jim Williamson of the Belleville Chapter of the St. Lawrence Automobile Club, participate in a welcome cup of coffee following their arrival at the finish line of the Canadian Winter Rally in Toronto yesterday evening. All went well for the local entry except for missing one route control of the close to two dozen checkpoints over the 1,300 mile route.

It Pays to Be a 'Neatnick' When It Comes to Figures

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D.,
with HARRY KARNS

(Article 11)

Neatness and orderliness can help you make better grades in arithmetic and mathematics.

Unhappily, many students neglect these simple rules because no one has explained how important they are.

Let's face it. Modern education many times neglects the individual student. This is not necessarily the fault of the schools. It is a consequence of an exploding school-age population and shortages of teachers and classrooms.

Teaching techniques are designed for classes of 35, 40, 50 students. Potentially good students get into bad habits and are not exposed to good habits. Training in neatness is drastically curtailed by punch-card tests made for rapid grading. All tests cannot be of this type, however, and when the student faces new situations, he is in trouble. Good scholarship becomes impossible.

Recently on grade card day, a father brought his 10-year-old son to us.

Jimmy's card bore a hard and uncompromising needs to improve behind Arithmetic. Translated to the less compromising language of 20 years ago, the grade was F— standing for failure.

The boy seemed bright enough. We decided to experiment. We wrote out some columns of addition, some subtraction, and some multiplication. He worked the problems rapidly and faultlessly!

We asked Jimmy to return the next day and bring some of his arithmetic papers with him. He did, and the source of the trouble was immediately apparent — so obvious that you would wonder why the teacher or the parent hadn't seen it.

Jimmy, who understood the intricate processes of arithmetic perfectly, had never learned to copy numbers down in straight columns. He had been applying the right principles to the wrong numbers because of a purely physical mistake!

"What does your teacher say about your papers?" we asked.

"She says they're wrong".

We're afraid we would have to give that teacher a B — for Blindness. Or maybe that is unfair. Poor lady — perhaps she didn't have the time to say more.

TWO EASY SYSTEMS

After learning to be neat and orderly, Jimmy started turning out perfect papers in school.

We simply cannot stress too strongly the importance of details. A small error, a small omission can destroy completely the effect of a large amount of otherwise flawless work.

You should do these things as a matter of course:

1. Arrange your work neatly on the paper.
2. Use the correct symbols.

Neatness Adds
100%

3. Make sure that plus and minus signs, equal signs, fraction lines, exponents and other marks are neatly and correctly placed.
4. Make sure that everything you write on the paper is actually true.
5. Do scratch work on a separate piece of paper so that your mind is not distracted from the actual steps of the problem.

As you get into more advanced work, you will find that problems no longer can be solved at a glance. Then you must make use of a special technique. It is based on this fact: Nearly all complex problems in math can be solved piece by piece.

Let's run through the steps that will help you.

1. Write the problem correctly on the paper.
2. Look at the problem, searching for some small part of it which you know how to simplify.
3. Simplify it.
4. Rewrite the problem with that work shown on it.
5. Now look at the problem again. Is there another little part of the problem you can deal with?

STEP AT A TIME

Usually there is. This process normally results in the solution of very complicated problems — without a single complicated move on your part.

Superior and gifted students too often are able to solve simple problems without the use of these techniques. They are shocked when their grades suddenly drop from "A's" to "C's" or lower when they reach college-level math courses. Ironically, their brightness is a curse to them until they discover or are shown the simple learning processes which will permit them to do the work of which they are capable.

Many thousands of boys and girls in public schools and colleges do not know how to solve problems. They are the sad victims of an age that knows how to measure 1-100,000th of an inch but neglects to tell boys and girls how to arrange numbers in a neat and orderly column.

But now you know a secret that can help you avoid the pitfalls which await hte careless and unwary.

In the next chapter we are going to tell you some more secrets that will help you on examination day.

(Tomorrow: How to prepare for examinations).

"A FOOL CONVINCED AGAINST HIS WILL IS OF THE SAME OPINION STILL"

Do you still think you can make money trading the stock market from day to day?

This statement you probably won't believe but never the less it's true

YOU CAN'T

Any fool can make money during a bull market but when the situation reverses itself the same fool continues to try and pick them with the inevitable result that not only does he lose what he made, but he also loses all or most of his original capital.

CAN I BACK UP THESE STATEMENTS?

Well I have been in the Brokerage business for 27 years and I love to play the market.

Have I made money over the years?

The answer is yes, but, not trading from day to day. I have bought what I thought was the right stock and gave it a reasonable chance to make good. Not the next day, but within a few months or in one particular case, Denison Mines, a couple of years. I bought Denison at $1.32 and still have it. I say and know that you cannot go wrong buying an Ore-body. But it takes time to develop it.

- I can analyse your present holdings. You may not like my report, but it will surely be the truth.
- I mail a weekly market letter to my clients at no cost to them.
- If you want it ask for it. It costs you nothing.
- What have you to lose—a postage stamp maybe?

The Seven-Day Work Week

One strike regarding which we have mixed feelings is that at Chemical Developments Ltd. at Longford Mills, Orillia. On principle, we dislike the existence of a situation in which men are refusing to work, apparently at fair wages, at a time when so many other men desire a job above everything else.

But this strike involves a principle which, though in this dispute it effects directly only 49 men, may eventually involve us all.

Following mediation efforts by the Ontario Department of Labor, management and union officials reached a settlement. The workers rejected it. The reason—it included a provision for Sunday work, the issue which led to the strike in the first place.

Now a great many people work on Sundays and we think it is likely that a larger, rather than a smaller, percentage of workers will have to do so in the future. It is the price which will have to be paid for the growing demand for the provision of increased recreational facilities on the Sabbath.

It is quite logical to oppose this trend, for the very reason that it will involve Sunday work for many. By and large, though, it is likely the trend will continue and that most of those who find themselves working on Sundays will accept this development as one of the occupational drawbacks of their particular jobs.

The case of Chemical Developments Ltd., however, is different. The firm is not providing a service on Sundays. The report of the strike gives no indication that its manufacturing processes are such that they cannot be interrupted without loss or inconvenience. The reason the firm wishes to operate on a seven-day week is that it maintains continuous operation is needed to meet demand.

Few industries find themselves in this situation today. But, if a few such plants operated Saturday, Sunday, Monday and always to meet demand, it would not be long before other manufacturers, faced with an increased demand were struck by the large savings which would be possible if present plant and equipment were operated seven days a week, instead of additional plant and equipment being provided and operated only five days.

This system of continuous operation is, we believe, followed in Russia and there is no question but that it represents the most efficient and economical method.

But are efficiency and economy of operation our only standards? Altogether aside from the religious aspect of this question, will not our civilization lose something of great value if the time comes when the majority of our people do not have a common day of rest and recreation? What will happen to family life if father, mother, Junior and Sis are never all off work on the same day and if this problem faces most families, rather than a small minority, as it does today?

This question needs to be answered and it needs to be answered by governments. The company threatens to move to another community if the seven-day week is not accepted. This is not a question which should be decided on a "local option" basis, forcing the depressed areas to accept conditions rejected by the more prosperous regions. There should be one set of rules for all.

If the Lord's Day Act isn't strong enough to prevent this type of thing, of what use is it?

Urges More "Social Investment"

At least a couple of times in recent months we have mentioned the need for an increase in what, in recent years, has come to be termed "social investment" in hospitals, schools, roads and similar facilities which are essential to an expanding economy, but which do not lie within the province of private enterprise.

The other day, before the Senate manpower committee, R. M. Fowler, president of the Pulp and Paper Association, voiced his conviction that an increase in such expenditure was needed. In doing so, he agreed with an earlier submission by the Canadian Congress of Labor.

When capitalist and unionist agree in this manner, one might almost expect that action would be likely to follow. Unfortunately, however, agreeing on the need is one thing, agreeing on a method of financing the work is another It would involve either higher taxes or higher deficits and both of these methods of financing have strong opponents.

There is an alternative—reducing government expenditures in other realms. Only one source appears likely to yield savings sufficiently large to finance any significant increase in "social investments." That is the defence fields, and here savings must wait on international developments.

Prefer Bad Mate to None

Guelph Mercury

Most unmarried American girls would rather be unhappily married than happily single. This is the key finding o. a nation-wide survey of the United States. Thousands of single women were questioned by "Parade" magazine to find out how they felt about marriage.

The majority agreed on these two points: They were "ashamed to stay single"; they'd do anything to get married — even to the "wrong man."

The survey also disclosed widespread disenchantment with the "magic of romance", and the fairy tale promise of living "happily ever afterwards."

• • •

The articulate among those questioned blamed out of date "social conventions" for putting such a high premium on matrimony that any marriage was considered far better than none. One girl said bitterly "just think what the words 'old maid' and 'spinster' mean to most people. They're dirty words".

Another blamed the family. "Mom and Dad worry plenty about me not being married. I think they'd rather see me married to a wife-beater than stay single.."

Said a third: "If you're married, fine; if not, the nicest thing they can call you is 'an extra woman'. That sums it up. If you're not married, you're out."

• • •

Most of the girls interviewed would not allow their names to be revealed. Those who did, often expressed different views.

Actress Lauren Bacall, for instance, insisted that an unhappy marriage could never be a good thing.

"Nothing hurts me more than to see people together who really don't like each other". "Mutual respect and regard are the strongest bonds of a good marriage".

This sentiment was echoed by Miss Patti Page the songstress of "I Came to Your Wedding" fame.

A good marriage, she says, must be planned". You must be willing to keep on looking and waiting for the right partner.

But to get married just to have "Mrs." added to your name is wrong. Marriage is built in confidence in your love for your mate.

• • •

"Of the two alternatives — bad marriage or none — I believe bad marriage would be better. It is a bitter experience and a high price to pay for fulfilment, but it is the better alternative".

A more synical view comes from a teenager, who said: "You have to get married, even if you marry a man with two heads. Anyhow, you can always get a divorce."

Much to their sorrow, marriage experts agree that such is the attitude of most young girls.

The marriage philosophy prevalent today is 'I'll try it, and if it doesn't work, I'll get a divorce," said Mrs. Dickinson, executive director of the Family Service Association of Florida.

It's just like the attitude toward cars — I'll get a new model next year," she said.

Strictly Personal

Link Smokers And Heart Attack Deaths

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There is no question that men who smoke have a higher mortality rate from heart disease than men who do not smoke. These figures are unchallenged by anyone.

Does this mean, therefore, that smoking "causes" heart disease, just as smoking is said to "cause" cancer of the lung?

Researchers at the University of Minnesota have recently completed exhaustive studies of more than 1,000 men divided between smokers and nonsmokers. Both groups were put through the most rigorous tests — for pulse rate, blood pressure, oxygen consumption, heart responses.

The scientists found "no striking differences in any of these comparisons." Smoking apparently, does not affect the functions they measured enough for the effects to be "underlying causes of the increased mortality rate among smokers."

What then, can be the answer to this puzzle? I think we have cause and effect twisted around — the type of men who take up smoking, and smoke heavily are those most likely to suffer heart disease. Smoking is a symptom of a nervous, highly-geared constitution and such constitutions are more prone to any kind of disease.

Heavy smokers tend to be less placid than non-smokers. They are often tense, either from aggressiveness or shyness. They desperately require the oral and manual gratifications obtained in smoking. To some extent (and I speak as a heavy smoker myself) they are immature personalities who are unwilling or unable to give up the infant's nipple.

Smokers probably have more afflictions of every kind than non-smokers do. They get more headaches, sore throats, gas pains, colds and muscular pains because they are more aware of their bodies, more absorbed with the self than non-smokers are.

It is not improbable, therefore, that this type of personality should more often fall victim to heart disease and perhaps even to cancer of the lund. haps even to cancer of the lung. Certainly smoking is a "contributory" cause of the latter but I find it difficult to believe that it is the principal cause.

We are learning, more and more, that many so-called "physical" ailments are psychogenic — that is, they originate in emotional states. The basic way to combat these diseases is through a national program of mental health, beginning in the homes, extending through the schools, offices and factories. Much more than the mind is thrown out of balance by mental perturbation.

Firms Move Underground

Financial Post

United States industrialists are moving underground. Alarmed about the safety of vital company records in the event of nuclear war, 675 major firms have transformed remote limestone pits and disused mine shafts into subterranean vaults.

There seem to be few such corporate cavemen in Canada. Canadian Westinghouse, to be sure, has a records centre near Galt, Ont. And Shell Oil's head office in Toronto rises high above a huge catacomb to which access is barred by a 10-foot steel door.

In both of these cases, the reasons are said to concern protection against fire hazards.

We cannot help wondering what purpose this underground movement is supposed to serve.

The length of time company documents need to be preserved is mostly governed by Statutes of Limitations affecting the legal aspects of business life. If companies, for their own reasons, are determined to preserve their papers indefinitely, then thousands of miles of expensively microfilmed records would undoubtedly survive a nuclear attack.

But who would be around to use them?

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO MAN

Of all the sins of mankind throughout the Christian era, perhaps the most grievous has been man's cruelty to his fellow. It is not a phenomenon merely of the "have not" economic state, for we see the evil in the Communist relegation of men and women to the position of slaves of the godless State We witnessed man's cruelty to man reach its widest wholesale manifestation in the genocide carried out by the well-fed, well educated Nazis.

What is the cause of this?

Basic causes are, above others, two: First, man being born of sinful potentiality, and being by his Creator's plan captain of his fate, he shows how thin the veneer of civilization: how near the savage we remain when our greed, ambition, or pride is crossed. Second, the beast in so many men, — and women, too, — is loosed when we ignore or deny the explicit teachings of Christ Jesus. Philosophers and psychiatrists have developed scores of other causes of the evil, such as the fanaticism of political leaders and clerics of all branches of all churches. However, we also see the hope how these are being exercised slowly, and painfully perhaps, as men become enlightened in Christian teachings. Is there any better reason for continuing and strengthening the Christian missionary movement?

Only when Christ is King (Christus Rex) will His mercy and love everywhere prevail.

The Patriotic Fund Committee of Hastings County Council at its inaugural meeting of the current year, yesterday granted $500 to the Navy League of Canada, and a substantial amount to the County War Savings Campaign scheduled to open here on February 17th, with a recommendation that the amount be increased at such time if necessary.

Classed as one of the largest employers of labor wih a payroll comparable to some of the largest industries in Belleville, Gordon A. Friesen, Administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, gave one of the most interesting addresses on that institution that the Kiwanis Club has listened to in some time.

Mr. Friesen explained to his listeners that the taxpayers of Belleville did not contribute one cent to the maintenance of the hospital, but the city had to pay at the statute rate of $1.75 per day for indigent patients. "The hospital is owned by the Women's Christian Association of this city", said Mr. Friesen and "run by a board.... six members appointed by the W. C. A., two from the City Council, one from the Belleville Medical Association and one from the County Medical Association."

"In 1937 the hospital operated at a loss of $6,368 while in the past year the institution was operated on a balanced budget," said the speaker. There are a number of reasons for this fine change, one being the Board of Governors; they define the policy and it is left to the administrator to carry out the orders without fear or favor.

Eskimo Rink Curls Well

Fort William Times Journal

Canadian curlers might well raise their eyes and look to the frozen North. For it was revealed the other day Eskimos at Resolute Bay in the North West Territories are becoming adept at the game. The team, having that amazing co-ordination of hand and eye, common to their race, is developing into a top-notch rink, according to Squadron Leader Eric Tuckey of London. Ontario, senior military commander at the DEW line site.

About a hundred curlers use the curling rink which was built with timbers salvaged from discarded construction huts. Over the frame a heavy canvas was stretched to form the roof and walls. Water was hauled from a lake to make the sheet of curling ice and in 39 degree below zero weather, the water froze as fast as the Eskimos could pour it.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOVE AND FEAR

I hardly think there are two words more opposed than the two little words above — love and fear.

The one always building, the other always tearing down. Love the light which guides us all like a star — fear, always trying to pull us out of this light into darkness.

Love always warming, fear always chilling us to the very marrow of our bones.

It is the love of life, of nature, of beauty, of friends, of books, that enables us to see the futility of fear.

From the day that I read God was love, I wanted to know Him — to love Him.

It is in the Bible somewhere the statement is made that "perfect love casteth out fear."

We are unafraid when we love much.

The more I love the snowclad hills of winter, the flowers of the field in summer, and all the multiple marvelous manifestations of Nature, the less I am afraid of the tempers of Nature in her storms and stresses.

When we look some great test in the face and say to ourselves: "No, I am not afraid!" then it is that strength rises within us to bear us through. It's love that does it. Fear can bring nothing but prostration.

If you love your work, it matters not what that work may be, it's a vital part of you — it forms and fashions what you are, what you most desire.

If you love enough, you can wipe fear from your life!

Great Many 'Staph' Carriers, May Infect Less Resistant

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard a lot about 'staph' lately and would like more information. — E. E. S.'

And I think there are some things that ought to be said about staphylococous (staph) germs.

There are various kinds of bacteria. Staph, in its various forms, is one category. Some o forms, is one category. Some of us suspect that there have not been any entirely new germs since the Creation — but germs are cagey beasts and they change their ways. Maybe you could call it a form of evolution.

Anyway, with the advent of antibiotics, it looked as though one or another of them would be the answer to staph.

We soon learned better. Some if not all varieties of staph developed an immunity to the antibiotics.

The net result is an increase in the number of staph infections which are difficult to suppress.

As I said, there are different varieties of staph germs, some causing little concern, some much. It so happens that a vicious type of the germ is resistant to antibiotics, and is also very prevalent.

One calculation indicates that perhaps half of us carry this form of staph germ around with us. A great many of us are, technically, "carriers". So long as we are in good health, the germ does not cause any particular trouble to us, yet we can pass it along to other people who may not have our perticuler resistance to it, or who may be ill, or have low resistance.

We may carry it, but not have any trouble unless the germ can get into the skin or into the body tissues.

I suppose I must be familiar with a dozen or more products developed specifically to control staph in hospitals. Various kinds of soaps, antiseptics, filters and drugs have been developed with the hope that they would be the answer to staph. The remedies have been ingenious and well-made, but none has been the complete answer.

In the operating rooms, surgeons and nurses do not depend on drugs or chemicals to get rid of staph. Rather, they depend on the old stand-bys, letting only completely sterile instruments or sponges or dressings touch the patient. (You can, of course, destroy staph by use of an autoclave — bathing bandages, scalpels, retractors, etc., in super-heated steam under pressure. But you can't do that to people!)

There's not much you and I can do, of course, to solve the problem as it exists in an operating room. But we can do quite a bit, individually, to reduce the staph peril to our friends and loved ones.

We can realize that we all have a 50 per cent chance of being carriers. The germ likes to lurk in the nose, moist skin, armpits, genitals, etc. We can spread it by sneezing coughing, ruffling the bed clothes of an ill person,— or at times, no doubt, by sitting on the bed of a hospital patient, or by sweeping the floors so we send swirls of dust and germs flying. We can wash our hands and faces oftener, and not breathe in the faces of invalids, and remember that we can, in fact, be living bombs when we visit friends in the hospital.

There are hopes that new antibiotics, now being developed, may be the "answer".

Blood Donor Finds Giving Satisfying

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I feel I must reply to Mr. Lodur's letter. While one can appreciate the feelings of the unemployed, giving blood is one of the very few things left to give willingly to help mankind. As a donor, it gives me great satisfaction to think I may be saving a life.

I myself have only just recently been grateful for the blood transfusion given me.

As for injuring one's health, you should know yourself if you are able to give; also a doctor or nurse usually checks one before donating blood. As for charging for blood I always understood it was free.

More people might give if a clinic could be held downtown during lunch hours. It takes only a short while, and after a day's work many people are too tired to turn out at night.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

A politician of my acquaintance lost a lot of ground recently in an area where he hoped to gain important influences in his behalf. It all resulted from a banquet he attended, at which he was seated between two ladies, the wives of prominent local celebrities. It was observed by many at the banquet that he paid much more attention to the lady on his right than to the one on his left. But to no one was this more apparent and more humiliating than to that quiet little lady on his left.

And the sad part of it is that the quiet little lady on his left was much the more important of the two, politically.

After the banquet, someone had the sagacity to mention the matter to the politician. He was horror-stricken.

"Why," he said, "I merely talked most to the one on my good ear side. I can hardly hear at all with my left ear; and she spoke so softly I hardly knew what she was saying. The other had a good loud voice. . ."

When this explanation was spread around, the lady who had been on his right heard it.

"Oh," she said, madder than the other lady, "so he thinks I am a loud talker, does he?"

To be a politician, it is best to be deaf in both ears, I guess. And a little dumb.

BCIVS

By SUSANNE PALMER

"Friends, Romans, Countrymen!"

On Monday and Tuesday of this week our auditorium was the scene of one of the best oratorical contests yet held at BCIVS. The setting, a bare stage under many bright lights, made one think that the contestants were about to be questioned by the police, but instead they launched into discussions on such topics as "segregation" and "education for the future." Winner of the junior division was Norris Scott of 9F who spoke about "The International Plowing Match." Wayne Soble, who last year won the junior championship at COSSA, took the senior division with his topic, "Canadians In the World Today."

BASKETBALL

They did it again! On Thursday, Napanee's bantam, junior and senior teams travelled to BCIVS with high hopes of winning. Their hopes were shattered, however, when all three BCI teams came out on top. This means that our bantams are still undefeated.

Meanwhile, back in Napanee, spirits were beginning to rise for their junior team defeated our girls in a very close game. BCI seniors saved the day, though, by chalking up still another victory over Napanee's senior girls' team.

ASSEMBLIES

"If you don't stop that, I'll tell." This is, according to Alan Barkley, the way a prefect creates order out of the chaos in the cafeteria. Don't be alarmed! Alan is not spreading unfavorable propaganda about the prefects. The above was merely one of the remarks made when Alan and Bill Nemtin teamed up to poke gentle fun at such BCI institutions as Gentlemen's Day and the prefect system, in last Wednesday's assembly.

Following this routine, Patti Bradford, Elizabeth Linscott and Eric Deacon inspected the maze of ropes, wires and lights above the stage from their vantage point on a trampoline. They demonstrated "seat drops," "swivel hips" and "front ¾'s" with the greatest of ease, but this seemingly simple bouncing took much practice and skill. Congratulations, Library Club, on an excellent assembly.

Wednesday we had with us Lieutenant Brace of the Royal Canadian Navy who discussed opportunities for careers in the Navy. He illustrated his address with colorful slides and many boys (and a few girls) interested by his lecture remained to question him further.

PING PONG ANYONE?

Those who delight in batting a small white ball (not a golf ball), at somebody across the table from you, take heed. The boys' Hi-Y is once again sponsoring a tournament to determine who is the best "ping ponger" (?) —pongest (?) Regardless of what the winner is called, this promises to be an exciting and amusing contest.

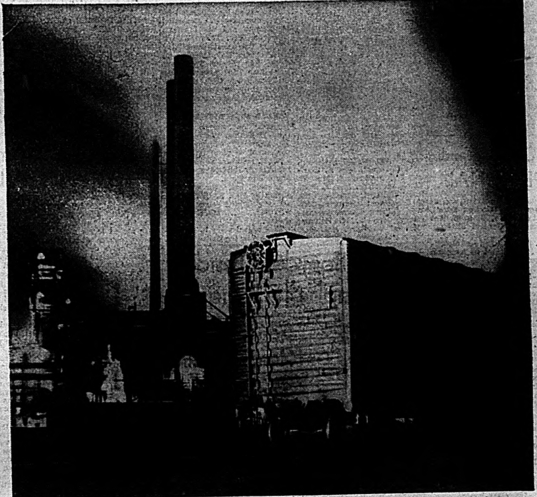
Shell reveals how $1,000,000 worth of platinum catalyst puts extra mileage in today's Super Shell —to give your car top performance

Among the 9 ingredients in today's Super Shell is a special component called Platformate. It packs more energy per gallon than the finest 100-octane avation gasoline. This extra energy turns up as extra mileage.

Read how Shell isolates this extraordinary ingredient by re-forming gasoline with pressure, heat—and platinum.



This is where Platformate is made. The "platforming" reactors are primed with a carload of platinum catalyst. During the re-charging process, a tent is erected at the reactor to protect the catalyst from wind and rain. At half-a-million dollars a carload, it is precious stuff.

TODAY'S SUPER SHELL promises to deliver top performance. It could not keep that promise unless it contained Platformate.

It takes Shell one million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst to produce this extraordinary ingredient. But, fortunately for your pocketbook and ours, this precious catalyst can be used over and over again.

Frightful ordeal adds mileage

The whole platinum re-forming process, which gives Platformate its strange name, puts gasoline through a frightful ordeal.

Pressures up to 600 pounds per square inch and temperatures up to 1000 degrees literally tear it apart and then re-form it into super-energy components—such as benzene, toluene and xylene.

These three components, between them, release seven per cent more energy per gallon than the finest 100-octane aviation gasoline.

But make no mistake. This is not raw, untamed energy. Far from it.

The super-energy of Platformate is harnessed by the eight other ingredients in Super Shell, where it behaves so well you scarcely know it's in your tank—until your extra mileage begins to register. After that, there is no doubt.

So much for one extraordinary ingredient in today's Super Shell. Here are some interesting facts about the other eight. What they are, what they do—and how they do it.

"The fifth wheel." Shell test drivers add a fifth wheel to their cars for precise distance measurement, during mileage tests. It helps them record performance to a decimal point.

Ingredient #2 is TCP for power, mileage and longer plug-life

Super Shell now contains an even better version of this famous additive. It was originally developed for use in aviation gasoline.

TCP additive can give your car up to 15 per cent more power; 17 extra miles per tankful; and make your plugs last twice as long.*

Today's aviation-grade TCP does this by neutralizing the harmful effects of engine deposits. It stops them from glowing when hot—a major cause of power loss.

It also stops them from diverting your spark—a major cause of "missing."

Ingredient #3 is "cat-cracked" gasoline for power with a purr

This is petroleum that has actually cracked under 1000-degree heat and catalytic action. Its heavier molecules have been shattered into livelier, lighter ones.

The result is a high-octane ingredient that makes your engine purr with power the moment you put your foot down.

Shell man checks furnace which pre-heats petroleum before it goes into cat-cracker. Stand near, and the roar sounds like Hades.

NOTE: "Cat-cracking" refers to the use of a catalyst—a substance that has the mysterious ability to alter molecules without changing itself.

Ingredient #4 is heavy alkanes —for both power and economy at all speeds

Shell scientists will tell you that gasoline can be too sensitive.

That's their unflattering description of a "touchy" gasoline that performs well enough when you're driving slowly, but causes knock and loss of power when you speed up.

So they put heavy alkanes into Super Shell. This ingredient is prized for its insensitivity. It keeps octane ratings high enough to give you plenty of knock-free power at all speeds.

NOTE: Heavy alkanes also have the advantage of lowering your fuel consumption. Your engine can use them up slowly—and still give you all the power you need.

Ingredient #5 is anti-knock mix for extra resistance to knocks

You might suppose that two high-octane ingredients are enough to give you knock-free performance. But Shell scientists have ears like musicians.

They insist on adding a special anti-knock mix. A mix, so effective, one teaspoon per gallon can boost anti-knock rating by seven points.

This mix has the tricky job of regulating combustion so that Super Shell gives each piston a firm, even push—rather than a sharp blow which would cause a knock.

Ingredient #6 is butane for quick starts on icy mornings

By itself, butane is so volatile that it would actually boil in your refrigerator. In Super Shell, it helps your engine fire in seconds. Think what this means in cold weather. Your battery is relieved of strain—and so is your patience.

NOTE: Super Shell is primed with butane all year round. In winter, Shell scientists simply increase the quick-start dose.

Ingredient #7 is mixed pentanes for fast warm-ups on cold days

Pentanes are made by tearing gasoline apart, much as you split logs into kindling to start a log fire.

In this case, the "logs" are petroleum's heavier hydrocarbons. A special process transforms their molecules from slow-burning "logs" to quick-firing "kindling."

NET RESULT: Fast warm-up and top performance in a hurry.

Ingredient #8 is an "anti-icer" to stop stalling due to carburetor icing

Super Shell's formula is adjusted up to eight times a year for your area to beat the weather. Whenever the temperature is likely to be less than forty-five degrees, an anti-ice ingredient is added.

Why add anti-icer at forty-five degrees? Because, even then, frost can form in your carburetor just as it does in your refrigerator. It can choke your engine dead.

Arrow shows where ice forms inside your carburetor. Frost particles block the air-intake when the throttle plate is in idling position. Result: your engine suffocates and dies.

Ingredient #9 is gum preventive to keep the fuel system clean

Even the purest gasoline can form gum when stored. This can clog carburetors, fuel lines, pumps. With Super Shell you needn't worry. A special gum preventive does the trick.

It acts like a policeman controlling a mob. Keeps an eye on unstable elements—stops them from clotting and forming gum.

Super Shell makes gummed-up engines a thing of the past.

Test Super Shell for yourself

Try Super Shell next time you fill up. You'll soon feel and hear a difference in the way your engine runs.

That difference is top performance.

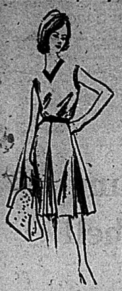
Smart Simplicity



By VERA WINSTON

Smartly sensible resort dresses pertain this season, with vivid color offsetting the simplicity of design and line. But whatever the color, be it bright pink, sunshine yellow or cyclamen — three favorite shades this winter — white is always right.

Textured cotton and silk and fabric in white is used for this resort dress.

The high V-neck is bound in navy as is the belt and also the armholes. The frock is slightly bloused above the double box-pleated skirt, which has slit pockets hidden in the seaming at the sides.

St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. Installs Officers, Makes Grant

The annual meeting of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E., was held on February 6th, at the meeting room. The regent, Mrs. R. M. Patterson, presided. The reports of officers and conveners showed there had been much interest in the work during the past year.

In the field of education it was reported that a bursary of $100 had been awarded to an outstanding student, also a $25 award to a student having the highest standing in English. The adopted school had been the recipient of monetary awards as well as books for their library, and I.O.D.E. calendars had been placed in the city schools.

Many articles of sewing and knitting had been forwarded to headquarters for distribution overseas. Food hampers were distributed at Christmas time.

The highlight of the chapter's activities was an International "Food Fair" and "Exhibit of Crafts" held in October, when Mrs. Douglas Jennings, National Immigration and Citizenship convener, was present. The fair was the culmination of many months of planning and working with New Canadians from nine countries, and brought about contacts between new fellow-countrymen which members found rich and rewarding.

In conjunction with the Argyll Chapter, new citizens are entertained after Citizenship Court, at the armouries.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The 1961 slate of officers was presented by Miss M. Sherman, and duly installed by Mrs. G. Vince, as follows:

Hon. regent, Mrs. G. Vince; regent, Mrs. R. M. Patterson; 1st vice-regent, Miss E. Coulter; 2nd vice-regent, Mrs. G. Vince; secretary, Mrs. E. Doolittle; assistant secretary, Mrs. G. MacEwen; treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Gilbert; educational secretary, Mrs. K. M. Putnam; "Echoes" secretary, Mrs. Geo. Watkin; services at home and abroad secretary, Mrs. R. Taylor.

Standard bearers, Mrs. E. Sutton; conveners: Commonwealth relations, Mrs. C. Biship; democratic action, Mrs. J. Reynolds; Empire and world affairs, Mrs. Vera Wilson; films, Mrs. F. Carscallen; hospitality, Mrs. J. M. Parrott; immigration and citizenship, Mrs. George Hume; public relations, Mrs. R. Ellis; civil defence, Mrs. E. Rutherford; membership, Miss M. Sherman; flowers, Mrs. N. Pinder; marathon bridge, Mrs. H. Thompson; cancer society, Mrs. C. Mott; social, Mrs. P. Jeffreys.

$25 GRANT

A short business meeting followed, when Mrs. Wilson brought in a recommendation, which was adopted, that a $25 grant would be given in each of the four secondary schools, to a student of Grade XII whose parent or parents are naturalized Canadian citizens; the basis for each grant being the greatest progress made in the Grade XII English.

Applications for three new members were unanimously accepted.

A report on the smallest telephone directory was presented by Empire and world affairs convener, Mrs. Vera Wilson. This is the directory covering the Frobisher Bay, Gagnon and Goose Bay district. There are more than 1,500 telephone subscribers listed, from near the Arctic circle to the bushlands of northern Quebec and Labrador.

ESKIMO SUBSCRIBERS

Among the subscribers are some 25 Eskimo families in the Frobisher Bay settlement — a settlement of great interest to I.O.D.E. members as they have recently established a community centre there.

A social half hour was conducted by Mrs. P. G. Jeffreys, and a delightful lunch served, with Mrs. G. MacEwen in charge.

This organization is supported in part by the United Appeal.

Former Boarders Tender Ma Campbell a Banquet

ENGLEHART, Ont. (CP)— Ma Campbell's boarding house is closed.

For 30 years Mrs. Annie Campbell, widow of James Campbell, maintained a home away from home for unattached young men who came to work in this thriving railroad town some 25 miles south of Kirkland Lake.

Among her guests were railroaders, bank clerks, school teachers, doctors, barbers, policemen and student ministers.

Her boarding house catered to those who appreciated a wholesome environment, along with generous helpings of good home-cooked food. Many of her "boys" found life partners in Englehart and established their own homes here. Others moved on.

But they never forgot "Ma," as she was known affectionately to all who lived at her home.

Advancing years have taken toll of Ma's health. When it become known she had decided to close up shop and return to her former home at Apple Hill, her boys, many of them now fathers and grandfathers, arranged a testimonial banquet in her honor.

Invitations were sent to former boarders. Many who were unable to come in person responded by mail or telegram.

Jimmy Houston, a former boarder now living in North Bay, Saturday night led the procession to the table with the bagpipes as Dr. John I. Higgins, another of her boys, escorted her to the place of honor. Dr. H. J. Richardson of Ottawa presented her with a gold wrist watch and a purse of money.

The boys took full charge of the banquet from the preparation and serving of the food to the washing of the dishes and the cleaning up afterwards. Some 110 guests were present.

BLAMES BOOK

LEICESTER, England (CP)— A 16-year-old youth was charged by a juvenile court here with making an indecent phone call. Said his mother: "He got hold of that Lady Chatterly book and now we don't know what to do with him."

Congregation Honors Retiring Organist

THOMASBURG — Last Sunday evening at the close of the regular service of Thomasburg United Church, the pastor, Mr. George Dyson, and the congregation, gathered in the vestry to honor the organist of many years, Mrs. Ross Wilson, who recently retired from active service although still ever-ready to be of use if needed. Following an address in which appreciation was voiced to Mrs. Wilson for her fine work with the choir, she was presented, on behalf of Thomasburg congregation, with a platform rocker, which was hoped would afford the recipient with relaxation and rest. The address was signed by the pastor, Mr. George Dyson, the W.A. president, Mildred Preston, and the chairman of stewards, Everett Prindle.

Although much surprised Mrs. Wilson, graciously thanked the pastor and congregation for the gift. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

DDP Pays Minerva OES Official Visit

On Friday evening the presiding District Deputy of District No. 12, Order of the Eastern Star, Mrs. Cecilia Rawcliffe of Cobourg Chapter, paid her official visit of inspection to Minerva Chapter, O.E.S., No. 138.

A large number of visitors, including presiding matrons and patrons from the chapters in the surrounding district, were also present and were warmly welcomed by the Worthy Matron Mrs. Pauline Clare and Worthy Patron Mr. George Garrow.

The meeting was held in the auditorium of the Masonic Temple, which was decorated in keeping with a Valentine theme.

The degrees of the order were conferred on Miss Sue Haggerty and the District Deputy commended the officers for the excellence of their work.

The social hour following the inspection was convened by the special refreshments committee and the group in charge for the month of February.

Club Activities

KUM DOUBLE CLUB

HALLOWAY — The regular meeting of the Halloway Kum Double Club was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Stanley with 24 in attendance.

Reg. and Betty Workman were the conveners and for the worship service, used the theme, "As you sow, so shall you reap." A worthwhile address on the subject "Success," which had been recorded, was played. "Success" was defined as the progressive realization of a working ideal and the goals one sets for oneself determines largely the success. Life should be an exciting adventure, not a bore. "As you believe so shall it be done unto you."

Mr. Harry Morgan presided over a brief business period. The trusteees of the church were named to see about purchasing church doors. It was moved that a donation of $10. be given toward the retarded children's fund. New communion plates are to be procured.

"The Howler," was read by Mrs. Gordon Roth after which Mrs. Coleman Townsend was appointed to auction off the lunch boxes and $25. was realized from the sale of these.

Tea and coffee were served by the hostess and a pleasant social time spent.

FULL GOSPEL C.A.

FRANKFORD — Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle C.A.'s met on Friday evening with President Mr. Keith Helm in charge, with Vice-president Mr. Gordon Smith assisting.

Prayer was given by the pastor, Bob Donnan of Stirling. Mr. Gordon Smith read the Scripture from Psalm 19. Favorite choruses were sung and testimonies given.

The quartet, Mrs. Gordon Smith, Miss Sandra Purvis, Mr. Glen Post and Mr. James Curry sang "If I Could Live Over."

Miss Ronda Payne gave a piano solo.

Miss Gail Walker rendered a vocal solo, "He Washed My Eyes with Tears." Mrs. Mary Patrick conduced a "Sword Drill" on "Blessing", with James Curry's team defeating Glen Post's team 9-4. The quartet rendered another selection, "I'm Bound for the Kingdom of the Free." Miss Mary Ella Grant read an article on "Girls, Goals and Grace" in "Keeping Your Standards High."

The service closed with a season of prayer.

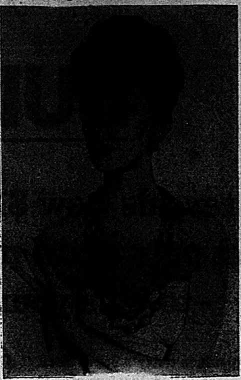
Bright Bubble Beads



By ALICE ALDEN

From the itsy bitsy caviar beads we have turned to big bubbly beads for our costume jewelry necklaces. And the bigger, more bubbly the bead, the better.

Designed to delight and dazzle, and perfect for sunny winter resort wear, is this big bead necklace that comes in a variety of vibrant colors. The big beads are interspersed with fluted beads connected by tiny jet and gilt wafers.

Light in weight and on the budget, too.

American Women Have Come A Long Way in Medicine

By JOY MILLER

NEW YORK (AP) — From Elizabeth Blackwell to Janet Travell, American women have come a long way in medicine.

Elizabeth Blackwell was the first to get a ladylike but determined foot in the door of a U.S. medical school. Immediately after graduating her with honors in 1849, her alma mater in Geneva, N.Y., slammed the door shut. But a precedent had been set, and women who wanted to learn medicine made the most of it.

The recent appointment of Dr. Travell, New York physician, as President Kennedy's personal doctor was a shot in the arm for efforts to increase the number of women in the medical profession.

Says Dr. Marion Fay, dean and president of the 110-year-old Women's Medical College of Pennsylvania, only women's medical college in the country:

"I wrote to the president that by his single appointment he has done more to focus the attention of young women on medicine as a career than medical educationists have been able to do."

FEW IN NUMBER

Last year the number of women who graduated from all approved U.S. medical schools was 405, about five per cent, or one in 20, of the total graduating class. Except for the Second World War period, when the ratio rose to one in 10, this has been a constant figure for many years.

A physician who urges that medical schools open their doors wider to women is Dr. Claire F. Ryder, of the U.S. public health service, Washington, president of the American Medical Women's Association.

She says factual data has disproved the old argument that a woman frequently drops her career for marriage and family, thereby wasting her training and depriving a potential man practitioner of it. Nine out of 10 women remain in the profession, she says, the same ratio as with men medical school graduates.

What is a male medical viewpoint? Here's what Dr. E. Vincent Askey, Los Angeles, president of the American Medical Association, says:

"The fact that the president's physician is a woman is unimportant; more important is the fact that she is capable and well trained. The president's action in selecting her exemplifies the belief we all hold that everyone should be treated by the physician of his own choice."

Started Recreation Work As Pinchhitter 32 Yrs. Ago

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marjorie Milne entered recreation work 32 years ago as a pinch-hitter. Her performance won her a regular position until she retired recently as supervisor of Vancouver's sprawling playground and community centre system.

Mrs. Milne's introduction to playground work was as a substitute for her sister at the old Haro Street ground when the latter contracted scarlet fever and couldn't continue.

It was an uncertain start at best.

"I wasn't much older than the kids themselves," she recalled in an interview. "I didn't know how to play some of the games. The kids badgered me into playing baseball and I was afraid I couldn't hit the ball.

"I went up to bat, shut my eyes and prayed I'd hit the ball. I did. Right through a plate glass window. Bang went most of my first pay cheque."

The incident tells much of Marjorie's approach to recreation. If she thinks a project is worthwhile, associates say, she shuts her eyes, prays and flings herself head-long into the task.

THE JOB GREW

In 1937 she was appointed supervisor of the city's 14 playgrounds. At the time of her retirement in January, there were 26 supervised grounds.

Ten years ago she introduced the first community centre and plans call for 16 scattered throughout the city.

Years of hard work, long hours and late nights have taken their toll of Mrs. Milne, now in her early 50s. Although she is retiring long before the usual retirement age she isn't closing out her active days. Mrs. Milne will devote much of her energy to the Vancouver Ballet Association, of which she is a director.

Her last and probably most successful playground experiment was the introduction of blind children to community playgrounds last summer. So successful was the experiment that it will become a regular part of the program. And it will be extended into the winter community centre activity course.

Vancouver is the first North American city to fully integrate blind children in playground and community centre programs.

Gala Valentine Ball Enjoyed At St. Michael's

A highlight of the Pre-Lenton social season, was the gala Valentine Ball held Wednesday evening last, in the spacious auditorium in St. Michael's Academy under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League of St. Michael's Parish. More than two hundred guests were greeted by the president, Mrs. Herbert Brown and the convener, Mrs. Douglas Jones.

During the evening novelty numbers were enjoyed and the inclusion of "The Rye Waltz" delighted those who took part as well as those who watched. Social circles were popular and the winners of prizes included Miss Wynn Maloney and Mr. Fred Deacon, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Shannon and Miss Sheila Hedger, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Murphy.

At midnight a delicious Smorgasbord supper under the direction of Mrs. John Sheridan and Mrs. George Gist, was served by Mesdames J. Fitzgerald, W. Smith, R. Mattis, A. Wardhaugh and M. Vinkle. Mrs. Gerard O'Connor was responsible for the decor, in Valentine Motif which lent such an atmosphere of festivity to the scene.

Mr. Frank Langabeer was master of ceremonies for the evening and music for dancing was supplied by The Dixie Five. Mrs. J. E. Boyd and Mrs. J. Gallagher were treasurers.

Lions Club Sponsors Fine Ice Show

FRANKFORD — The Lions Club sponsored an amateur ice show with the assistance of the local association in Frankford Community Arena on Friday evening. Mr. Bruce Servos was chairman for the eventful activity. There was a good crowd in attendance.

The Girl Guides held a hockey game with the different packs. The Brownies enacted a skating drill with a skating solo by Miss Carole Abbott.

The boy Cubs held a hockey match with big star placards on the backs of their sweaters.

The Rovers enacted a "mock wedding" with Lyle Williams as the preacher, Ian Finnigan as the bride, Jack Lawrence as the bridegroom, Neil Roote as the groomsman. A baby carriage was used for the going away car, and all the wedding party was in gala attire.

TWO SKITS

The Boy Scouts enacted two skits: A fire skit, where they rescued a boy from a burning home and a doctor skit where a boy took ill in a restaurant.

A half hour of public skating was enjoyed.

The evening's activities wound up with a broom ball game between Frankford firemen and the Rovers.

The gate receipts were good.

Mrs. J. C. Goff wishes to thank all the leaders and organizations assisting in making the ice show a success.

A Bang-Up Good Supper For Pancake Tuesday

By Mary Moore

It is bright and early Monday morning as I write this. With so many hungry and eager mouths to feed right now I am in seventh Heaven. We made waffles for dinner and every last drop of batter was baked and eaten to the last crumb. Gary and Davey wanted some homemade candy and Marianne made them fudge from a recipe of mine perfected in 1932.

Peady's and my niece Barb's birthday fell just two days apart so we made one huge chocolate birthday cake. All three of these things I will give you this week because they were so popular and good.

First I will give you the waffles for tomorrow is pancake Tuesday and a waffle is a glorified pancake. We had the waffles for dinner with bangers. Do you know what bangers are? I did not. Gary had them on the Empress of England. They are simply sausages — "you know Grandma, little meats like your finger."

SUPER WAFFLES:

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 cups sour milk or buttermilk, 4 eggs, well-beaten, 3-4 cup melted margarine or salad oil.

Sift together dry ingredients. Combine sour milk and eggs and add to dry ingredients. Beat with a hand beater or electric beater at high speed, until smooth. Stir in melted margarine or oil. Bake in a preheated waffle iron until crisp and golden. Serve with maple syrup.

Because time was not a factor and the entertainment value of merely baking a waffle is high — we baked these on the tea table at my elbow at the dining-room table. I cut them into quarters as they were done and doled them out. They slathered them with maple syrup and I found myself wishing for some of the new crop from Pollock's sugar bush.

GARY'S BANGERS:

The simplest way I know to cook sausages is to bake them. If you don't want to you do not even have to turn them. Bake them on a shallow pan in a single layer at 350 deg. Fahr. about 25 minutes It is a simple matter to tip off the excess fat just before serving them on a hot platter.

Would you prefer to make pancakes for tomorrow's supper? Here is the old reliable recipe so many readers swear by. Me too.

PANCAKES:

1 1-2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 3 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 2 or 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 egg, beaten, 1 1-4 cups milk, 3 tablespoons melted shortening.

Sift flour once, measure, then sift again with baking powder, salt and sugar. Combine egg, milk, shortening and add to dry ingredients. Stir until smooth. Drop by tablespoonfuls onto hot griddle. Cook on one side until puffed and full of bubbles. Turn and cook on other side.

Jazz Age Flapper Again Appearing in New Fashions

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Not since Dior's New Look of 1947, say British fashion writers, has so definite a shape emerged from the Paris collections.

It's not exactly a newcomer to the fashion scene, being flat-chested, narrow-hipped, sporting a waistless dress and a deep cloche hat. Yes, you guessed it, the jazz age flapper is bestriding the Champs Elysees once more, apparently lacking only a foot-long cigaret holder and a Dorothy bag to complete the stagy illusion.

In the last few days of the spring showings, couturier Nina Ricci lifted the wraps on an unashamedly nostalgic collection. Other designers had dipped their toes tentatively into the trend, but it looks as though the final honors will fall to Ricci for launching the flapper into orbit the second time around.

It's difficult enough to tell whether any particular fashion dictate will even catch on— much less start a craze. But the free-and-easy, youthful flapper look has been edging in for some time now in Britain, ever since Sandy Wilson's 1920s' musical The Boy Friend took London by storm seven years ago

FABRICS OF OLD

Loose, hip-sashed dresses, dangling ropes of beads, T-strap shoes with Louis heels, have all been steady sellers, while the cloche has cropped up in nearly every season's hat colletions.

Those weathercocks of British fashion, the fabric manufacturers, have already staked their money on the success of the flapper look. Floral printed chiffons and crepes, favored in the late 20s for dance dresses with petal-pointed hemlines, will be in the shops by March.

The colors of the '20s—beige, cream and "bois de rose," a smoky pink — look likely to be high favorites for summer, while Paris girls are already wearing white stockings.

Well, it's a change from beatnik black.

But the new flapper look doesn't stop at the shape or the clothes. It extends to makeup and personality, too. Along with their Charleston get-ups, Ricci's models appeared with Clara Bow lips, chalky face-powder and big, round, black-mascaraed eyes. They walked with a backward-arching, come-hither grace.

All straight out of the "It Girl" era, when the sought-after effect was a blend of the innocent and the vamp.

NOT JUST GIMMICK

British fashion correspondents seem to feel there is more than just a gimmick here. Jill Butterfield, fashion editor of The Daily Express, gives a how-to-do-it guide to the new-old style of makeup.

Fashion never exactly repeats itself, and there are a few oddball trappings of the '20s which are unlikely to be seen again.

The Eton crop hairstyle, for one—1961 modifies and softens it. Kisscurls, with us last season, are vanishing in favor of thick fringes.

Busts may be flat as boards this spring, but the notorious bust-bodice won't have anything to do with it. Forerunner of the brassiere, but designed to achieve the opposite effect, it must have tortured many a Marilyn Monroe of the period.

And even Nina Ricci did not find the nerve to revive the one fashion that has symbolized the spirit of the roaring twenties for later generations — one that found its way into dozens of popular songs.

No, we haven't got to rolled stockings . . . yet.

TIPS FOR GIRLS WHO LIVE ALONE

I receive many letters from young women who have decided to strike out on their own. Many of them were reared and educated in small towns. Some are college graduates. Feeling that they have earned their independence, they wish to go to a "big city" to try their luck in the business world. They feel that the cultural and educational advantages will be far greater than in a small community.

Some of these girls come to grief, admit defeat, and return home. Why? Nobody can blame them for wanting to try their wings, but the mortifying necessity of admitting defeat is hard to bear. So, based on the questions I have been asked, let's take a look at the reasons why some of these brave pioneers succeed, and some don't.

Basically, I think the lack of observance of the conventions is largely to blame for the failures.

Many of these young girls start off by living in a women's club, the Y. W. C. A., or as a paying guest in the home of a small family. They are sensible to take any one of these approaches.

Unfortunately, after a good job is secured, the natural urge to have her own home becomes of paramount importance. Maybe the decision is made to rent a one room efficiency apartment. Or perhaps a larger one is decided upon, and another girl is brough in to share expenses. The latter is by far the better way to go about it! Why? Because they can act in the capacity of chaperoning each other. The girl who lives alone leaves herself open to criticism, no matter how carefully she endeavors to follow the conventional rules of behavior. There is always a "Mrs. Grundy" who is ready to believe the worst.

A good reputation is worth its weight in gold, and it's a wise young lady who stops to consider "what others will think." Innocent as her actions may be, she should always bear in mind that she must handle herself in such a way that no tongues will wag. For example: If sharing an apartment with another girl, and you decide to give a little party, ask a young married couple that you know. Actually your guests, they will, in effect, be acting as chaperones for the evening

Stuffy and old-fashioned, you say? Believe me, it is not. It is an irrevocable fact that a woman's success is based on her reputation. Getting started on the wrong foot in a strange city can mean eventaul heartbreak and that return home — having to admit defeat.

Question: Should a set amount of money be given to the clergyman who performs a wedding or a christening in a church? We are having both these ceremonies in our family during the next two months. The same minister will officiate at both of them. We have been told that a fee should be paid him. Is this correct? —Mrs. L. T. C., New Haven, Conn.

Answer: A fee, as such, is never presented to a clergyman who officiates at either a wedding or a baptism. These are both sacraments of the church and he recieves no money for performing the rites. However, a donation usually is presented to him, which he places in any charity that he wishes. No definite amount is set for these donations. It all depends upon the financial position of the bridegroom, or father, whichever the case may be. Ten dollars would seem to be the least that is given more, if finances permit.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers

Elissa G. — A one-room apartment imposes more restraints than he realizes.

Abraham G. — She doesn't make many concessions to our awkward living arrangements.

• • •

Elissa G. — When we were married three months ago, Abe and I considered ourselves lucky to find even a tiny apartment within walking distance to both his job and my college. Although it was only one room with kitchenette and bath, we signed a two-year lease to take us through my graduation and Abe's training-squad stretch in the office.

Naturally we were prepared for some discomforts. But Abe piles them on for good measure. He's a jazz-hound. Fine. But can't he hold off until I go marketing or visiting? No. He has the room shaking while I try to study. My only refuge is the bath-tub. That's where I cram for an exam.

And even worse, he brings his friends in while I'm relaxing in bed or otherwise unpresentable. "It's just for a minute," he says, "while we swap recordings."

• • •

Abraham G. — I know our set-up is hard, but I thought Elissa could take it. She used to boast that she could concentrate in a dormitory full of roommates when she went to Bryn Mawr. Maybe it's because they stuck to Hindemith and Grieg, while I prefer Gerry Mulligan. I tolerate and suffer through her classical stuff even though, to me, most of it is just funeral music.

I've tried not to annoy her with my list of complaints because I feel we must live-and-let-live to get through this touch period. But if we're trading beefs, how about Elissa's hour-long yaks on the phone, right next to my newspaper? And her walnuts! She loves cracking them. What of her face-cream and lipstick in the desk with the paste and pencils? And her snoring!

We must each get rid of our intolerances in such close quarters.

• • •

The Council — Living in such confinement is indeed a trying situation and, with their love to keep them warm, the G.'s are indeed trying to reconcile log cabin austerities.

Ingenuity is taxed and at a premium, no doubt, when such problems as entertaining, or convalescing, or deep concentration come up. Elissa and Abraham are seeing, at first hand, how many of the world's problems can be traced to lack of "lebensraum." As just frail humans, they've set themselves a project best suited for superhumans who can fly through walls and become invisible! They're worse off then the "doggie in the window" who can curl up in a fluff of confetti.

But we suspect that, after this honest airing of their gripes, each will gird anew for the challenge of Life in a Breadbox. No doubt they realize that this is an acid test of their love. If it survives the abrasions and contusions — and lack of illusions — of such raw proximity, it's a pure unquenchable flame!

As they endeavor to compile their own rulebook, here are some random suggestions for Elissa and Abe to ease the strain: Get an ear-phone attachment for the record-player, plug earplugs for the non-listener. Elissa's studying should be pursued mainly at the library. Each should plan to be out (marketing, walking, visiting) so that the other has the apartment alone, for either silence or noise, several times a week. Most important, try to sub-lease and move!

The over-all guide for each of these co-tenants is: What must I not do? Or, if they prefer: Disobey that impulse!

The G.'s knew they were attempting something difficult Now they suspect it may be impossible, but as a slogan puts it, that just takes a little longer to do, about as long as that lease runs.

Women's Institute

MARMORA W. I.

MARMORA — Marmora Branch Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. R. E. Neal for the February meeting with ten members and one visitor, present.

The business correspondence was read and dealt with. The Mental Health Association and Navy League had already been sent the usual yearly amount. A letter re the Federated Women's Institute rally of Institutes and presidents to be held in Guelph in May, was discussed and Mrs. Geo. Empey will attend.

A paper on health, prepared by the convener, Mrs. L. Green was read by Mrs. H. P. Nayler. Quebec "the city of the month," was ably dealt with by Mrs. G. Empey.

Mrs. R. E. Neal read correspondence from her W.I. pen-pal in England who said they had copied the idea of a Christmas party and exchange of gifts. She also enclosed a copy of their "Home and Country" edition which was most interesting.

Plans were made to attend the "Achievement Day," to be held in Stirling on the 22nd of February.

The Marmora branch was requested to put on a skit at the meeting.

A sale of candy was held.

Mrs. Neal suggested each member make a "Holiday Sock," for the year and the amount of pennies numbering the date of each holiday, be put there-in, and collected at the end of the year.

The meeting was chaired by the president, Mrs. W. Tinsdill and Mrs. Bailey, secretary, was present, after an absence due to illness.

TABERNACLE WMS

The Evening Auxiliary of the W.M.S. of Tabernacle United Church had as their guests the Vota Vita Mission Circle of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Wednesday in the church parlor. The meeting was opened and business conducted by the president, Mrs. J. M. Smith. Among the announcements was the World Day of Prayer on February 17 at 3.00 p.m. in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, and the annual meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial in Stirling on February 20-21.

In response to an appeal it was decided to send six woollen blankets for Overseas Relief.

Mrs. J. Beatty, Christian citizenship secretary, spoke on the Society's responsibility to promote temperance, racial brotherhood, and to take a stand on Sunday observance and penal reforms

The group divided into five small groups for discussion of prepared questions on the word "ecumenical".

It was decided that Christian denominations are working more closely together in the production of religious films, Sunday School publications and week of prayer services. It was felt that this co-operation is especially desirable on the mission fields.

Mrs. J. Aitcheson introduced the film and conducted the discussion period.

The meeting closed with a recorded worship service during which the group joined with an African choir to sing, "All People That on Earth do Dwell".

At the conclusion of a social half hour, Miss Marjorie Hales thanked the Evening Auxiliary for its hospitality and stated that this evening was an example of ecumenical endeavor.

GUILD AND W.M.S.

Mrs. Lyons the W.M.S. president, opened the meeting with a poem and Scripture lesson, taken from 1st Corinthians, was read by Miss Bell. Commentary and prayer were given by Mrs. Chappelle.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Reports of various committees were given and sick and hospital calls recorded, along with "thank-you" notes from the shut-ins. Plans for the World Day of Prayer were made as this meeting is to be held in St. Andrew's Church. Readings were given by Mrs. Juby, Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. Lyons and a piano solo by Mrs. Wannamaker. A Bible quiz was conducted with Mr. Wannamaker being the winner and the meeting closed.

Mrs. Bartlett served a delicious lunch.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Bartlett for her hospitality.

Anything They Do Terrific To Child Painters at School

EDMONTON (CP) — If an artist's judgment of his own work were to set the standards, the best artists among the 1,000 children and adults taking lessons at the Edmonton Art Gallery would be the seven-year-olds.

"They like anything they do," says Mrs. D. K. Balfour, teacher of one Saturday morning class for Grade II students. "They think they're terrific."

The 23 teachers for the 51 classes conducted weekly at the gallery and the overflow classes at McKay Avenue school are all graduates of art schools or have had special training in child art.

The training is necessary, says P. H. Henson, gallery director, because child art is so different from adult art. Teachers must understand child psychology and child interests.

"You can almost tell what they had for breakfast or if they were scolded before they came here by what they paint," he says.

Mrs. Balfour's teaching method is to get the youngsters "all primed up" with a story before they start to paint.

In one lesson, Mrs. Balfour told the story of the crooked man with the crooked house. All the pictures were different and everything was crooked — right down to a crooked sun with a crooked smile.

STRONG ON COLOR

"They don't worry about detail and they like lots of movement and color," says the teacher who, unlike some, starts her pupils with paints rather than crayons.

However, the seven-year-olds finish the background of a picture with crayon. "The background is the last thing they do and at the end of a one-hour lesson they're beat. Often a good picture is ruined by the background."

Kids don't draw a tree like a real tree, Mrs. Balfour noticed. They draw what they feel—and exaggerate. If something is sad, it's really sad. If something is happy, it's nothing short of wonderful. One of Mrs. Balfour's favorite pictures is a nativity scene with the baby Jesus smiling broadly.

Mrs. Balfour finds that the most difficult part about child art is to "convince the parents." People often fail to see why a child has painted an object in a certain way.

For example, in one picture a youngster had painted a horse with large green eyes and frivolous eye-lashes.

"Why not?" Mrs. Balfour shrugs philosophically.

Trenton RCAF and Kingston Rinks Win Trophies in Spiel

A Trenton RCAF rink of Dick Frampton, Jack Curtis, 'Scotty' Miller and Mack Hayden as skip curled its way to the championship of the men's open bonspiel, winning the Corby trophy and accompanying prizes at the Quinte Curling Club that concluded late Saturday night. Ken Anderson's rink from Kingston with two schoolboy champions, Alex Scott and Brent MacDonald along with Neal Colligan, won the Belleville Club event. Two local rinks skipped by Mac White and Charlie Lovett, got into the silverware class, Mac White skipping a rink of Al McCullam, Ross Booth and T. A. Carruthers into the win column of the consolation event of the Corby trophy, while Lovett's rink was a close second. Mr. Lovett had Bill Holway, Tommy Thompson and Dave Duffy as teammates.

In the consolation of the second event another RCAF rink of T, Chorney, Ken Clark, Don Ryder with A. Kelly as skip defeated a rink of H. Trepanier, Ken Pinder, Mac Moffatt with Ben Corke on the head end in the consolation event of the Belleville Cup event. The men's bonspiel has been run annually since the club was incepted four years ago, but the large gallery never witnessed such an exciting finish. There were four matches in the last draw and on three of them the rinks were tied coming home while on the fourth sheet, the Frank Nutson rink from Uniondale had the eventual winners two down and looked all over the winners.

The final end of the main event was as good an end as one will see anywhere and the strategy of Mack Hayden paid off. The Unionville rink changed its tactics in the last end and the first two stones were thrown through the "house" so that Hayden could not have anything to lay to but Hayden kept his rink drawing and got a "biter." A stone was wasted to get it off and that probably was the ball game. Hayden promptly put another on. When Hayden went to shoot his first rock, Unionville was lying shot but that was taken out and he stayed. Morrow with his last rock had to go for it, got it and stayed but Hayden calmly drew one home to knock out shot to count three and win the trophy and prizes.

CLOSELY CONTESTED

The other final games were just as closely contested. Anderson's rink took the place of Al Parkhill, of Oshawa who could not return for the final day's play. Mr. Anderson had played Parkhill on Wednesday and was defeated so the committee put the rink back in play for the final day and it came home a victor. Mac White White and Charlie Lovett two local skips, had a smasher of a game which was in doubt till the final end. Ben Corke was riding on a nice lead practically through the entire game but Kelly kept pecking away and at the ninth end tied the game on an almost perfect shot. On the tenth and final end, Kelly got a couple on the rings and then proceeded to build a fence, which was almost impossible to get through but Corke nearly pulled it out on a raise which just fell short.

The rink of Ernie Appleton and skipped by Harry Lawrie gave Anderson a scare before going down the drain by a 10-8 count these rinks being tied at the end of the ninth. Anderson buried a couple of rocks early in the end and they could not be reached. The curling in the final events was of championship calibre and any rink in there could go a long way in any spiel. The "Cinderella" rink skipped by Jack Sills, who had to leave the spiel due to his leaving for Nassau for a vacation and ably taken over by Murray Johnson had a wonderful day. Murray and Ed Lewis replaced the skip and Dr. Harold Craig, who was called away, while Fred Rawson and Bill Spinelli upheld the front end. This rink had a lot of fun and won important games before being elminated.

After the games were concluded, President Harry Trepanier thanked the curlers for their interest in the spiel and also the spiel committee for their wonderful co-operation. Also thanked were the Corby Distillers, Lannings, Walker's Hardware, Elliott Motors, Pepsi-Cola Company, David's Electric, The Big "A", Dick Beare, Bill Gault, Dave Tobe, Bob Alexander, Jim Walker, Bill Meagher, Don Stanton Jack Diamond Court Miller Gardiner Duff Cleo Colling and Ted Doyle for making the beautiful prizes possible.

And into the early hours of the morning the games were played and replayed as the curlers and friends enjoyed a social evening. It was a great spiel. The final draws.

STONE EMBASSY

CAIRO, Egypt (Reuters) — About 200 shouting African students stoned the Belgian Embassy Sunday in protest against the disappearance of Congo ex-premier Patrice Lumumba. The ambassador, Maurice Iweins d'Eeckhoutte, and his wife narrowly escaped being hit. Police with riot shields and staves were sent later to guard the building.

Cooper Drops 9-1 Decision To Marmora

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora Millionaires moved four points ahead of the pack in the OHA Intermediate "C" league race Saturday night by downing the last place Cooper squad 9-1 in Cooper.

Marmora scored the only three goals of the first period, stood by while Cooper potted the lone goal of the second, then fired six without an answer to wrap it up in the third.

Playing coach Bob Taylor again sparked the Millionaires' attack with four goals and one assist. Jack Gill fired two goals while Doug Murray, Bill Jones and Tom Paranuik also scored. Chuck Rowbotham drew three assists, Ray Darrah two, Jones, Maloney and Holland one each.

John "Shaker" Baker triggered Cooper's lone goal with help from M. Graham and B. Davenport.

Referees Harry Morgan and Tim Williams dished out 17 penalties with Marmora drawing 11. Jerry Mann of Cooper, has a misconduct as well as three of his club's minors.

SUCCESS

is being able to take it easy
. . . in the years ahead!

WILL YOU BE ABLE TO TAKE IT EASY? One of the nicest things about success is knowing that when the time comes to retire, you will be able to enjoy the carefree leisure you so richly deserve. But this kind of leisure requires money. That's why so many men guarantee it with life insurance.

It's a good feeling to know that your financial future and the future of your family is secure . . . to know that regardless of what happens, you have built a guaranteed income that you cannot outlive. How about you? If you don't have enough provision for your later years . . . maybe it's because you don't own enough life insurance with valuable savings and income features. Look into it. Your life insurance man is a most important person to talk to regularly on your road to success. Save and be safe with life insurance.

British Peer Invites Firm To Search

STAMFORD, England (Reuters)—A British peer Sunday invited an American firm which is investigating his connections with Communist China to search his stately home.

Lord David Burghley, 56, the Marquess of Exeter, said a New York firm called Industrial Reports and headed by retired Brig.-Gen. John Grombach, had called in a London detective agency to aid its investigation.

Burghley said the investigation was being carried out because as president of the International Amateur Athletic Association he helped gain the affiliation of the Peking Athletic Association with the IAAF.

(In New York, Gen. Grombach, a member of the United States Olympic committee and secretary of the International Fencing Federation, said the investigation was to determine whether Burghley benefited from any trade connections with Communist China.)

Burghley said his support of the Communist Chinese affiliation was purely for sporting reasons.

Burghley was educated at Eaton and afterwards became an officer in the Brigade of Guards. He won an Olympic gold medal in 1928 in the 400-metre hurdles.

Toronto's Frank Mahovlich and Red Kelly went on a five-point scoring spree Saturday night to gang up on the top positions in the race for National Hockey League scoring honors.

Mahovlich's five points — including one goal and four assists—enabled him to take a one-point lead over Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal.

The smooth - skating left-winger now has 43 goals and 23 assists for 69 points while Geoffrion's total consists of 32 goals and 36 assists for 68.

Geoffrion's teammate, Dickie Moore, is third with 32 goals and 30 assists for 62 points and is followed by Jean Belliveau also of Montreal and Kelly, who are tied for fourth with 61 points apiece.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts.
Mahovlich, Toronto	43	23	69
Geoffrion, Montreal	32	36	68
Moore, Montreal	32	30	62
Beliveau, Montreal	21	40	61
Kelly, Toronto	17	44	61
Bathgate, New York	23	34	57
Ullman, Detroit	18	37	55

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Harbor View Farm's Wolfram, an even-money choice in the betting with the crowd of 26,325, won as he pleased in the 21st running of the $96,000 Hialeah truf handicap at Miami Saturday.

The dark bay won by 2¾ lengths. The time for the 1½ miles was 2:29 3-5. Wolfram paid $4.30, $3.30 and $2.80. Merry Top 2nd paid $23.60 and $10. Civic Guard was $8.20 to show.

The race was worth $62,400 for the owner of Wolfram, Louis Wolfson of Jacksonville, Fla., and New York.

At Arcadia, Calif., American Comet upset the favorites in the $57,800 San Antonio handicap at Santa Anita Park.

Earning a berth in the $100,000-added Santa Anita handicap Feb. 25, the five-year-old California horse raced in the silks of C. W. Smith of Detroit.

The time for the 1⅛-mile feature was 1:48 3-5. American Comet paid off a healthy $22.40, $9.80 and $6.80; How Now $6.60 and $4.60 and Grey Eagle $7.20.

The victory was worth $35,300.

Maple Leafs Boost Lead In NHL Race

Not Beaten In 8 Games

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It is becoming increasingly evident that many trained observers, including super-confident coach Punch Imlach, underestimated the Toronto Maple Leafs this season.

The Leafs are not only ignoring pre-season predictions that they would not finish first, but are threatening to run away from the rest of the field in the National Hockey League race.

During the weekend they came up with two victories—their sixth and seventh against one tie in eight games—to grab a commanding six-point lead atop the standings.

Big Frank Mahovlich and old pro Red Kelly were the big guns Saturday—each coming up with five-point performances—when the Leafs skated to a 6-3 victory over Boston Bruins at Toronto.

Sunday, rookie Dave Keon scored twice in a 4-2 victory over the Red Wings at Detroit.

IMLACH ALMOST RIGHT

The victories gave the Leafs 73 points—only two less than Imlach's pre-season objective—in 56 games. The stumbling, defending champion Montreal Canadiens follow with 67 points in 54 games.

The Canadiens could only salvage one point in two weekend outings on the road. Saturday, they blew a 3-1 lead at New York and had to settle for a 3-3 tie with the Rangers.

Chicago Black Hawks took care of the once-mighty Habs Sunday, beating them 3-1 before 15,789 home fans.

Centre Don McKenney recorded his second three-goal performance in one game this season in the weekend's only other game at Boston Sunday to pace the Bruins to an easy 8-3 victory over the Rangers.

The Hawks now are third with 59 points, forth-place Detroit has 53. The Rangers are fifth with 43 and Boston is last with only 35.

BOTH SCORED ONCE

Mahovlich and Kelly each scored once and collected four assists apiece against the Bruins Saturday. Other Toronto goals were by Bert Olmstead, Bob Nevin, Ron Stewart and defenceman Tim Horton.

Rookie Tom McCarthy, Doug Mohns and Andre Pronovost tallied for the Bruins.

Mahovlich's goal was his 43rd of the season and left him seven behind retired Maurice Richard's record of 50 in one season. The five-point outburst also gave the starry leftwinger the lead in the scoring race. He has 69 points, one more than Montreal's Bernie Geoffrion.

Kelly's four assists gave him 44 so far this season—tops in the league — and broke the Maple Leaf club record of 43 registered by Ted Kennedy in the 1950-51 season.

Keon opened and closed the scoring in Sunday's game at Detroit. The second goal—his 17th of the season—came with only 74 seconds remaining and was in an empty net.

Dick Duff and Olmstead were the other Toronto scorers. Vic Stasiuk and Norm Ullman tallied for Detroit.

GAME GOT ROUGH

It was a bruising contest. Toronto goalie Johnny Bower was shaken up when charged by Wings' Howie Young in the third period. Moments later Detroit's Len Lunde was removed on a stretcher after suffering a sprained ankle in a tumble against the boards.

Goalie Lorne Worsley and forward Andy Hebenton were the heroes of Rangers' comeback against the Canadiens Saturday.

Worsley stopped 52 shots, and Hebenton scored two goals—both unassisted and within four minutes of each other late in the game.

At Chicago, the Canadiens took an early 1-0 lead on defenceman Jean-Guy Talbot's goal but couldn't hold it.

MURPHY TIED IT

Ron Murphy tied the score 1-1 with the 100th goal of his NHL career. Pierre Pilote and Eric Nesterenko got Hawks' other two goals and veteran Tod Sloan had three assists.

Jacques Plante was in nets for Canadiens in both games.

The Bruins' triumph against New York was their first in eight games.

McKenney got two of his three goals in the first period when the Bruins opened up a 4-0 lead and added the other in the third period. His other three goals effort this season was against Detroit Nov. 19.

Johnny Bucyk scored two of Boston's other goals and singles went to Jerry Toppazzini, Pronovost and defenceman Leo Boivin.

Camille Henry, Andy Bathgate and Harry Howell tallied for the Rangers.

Winner In Doubt

Three Claim Title In Tough 1,300 Mile Winter Rally

By HARRY CALNEK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's international winter rally this weekend saw the closest finish in its nine-year history—so close that the winner is in doubt.

Three manufacturers have entered protests, each claiming the title for the 1,300-mile test of cars, drivers and navigators, one of the toughest in North America.

Officials of the British Empire Motor Club, sponsor of the event, first declared Dick Doyen of Milwaukee and Clay Gibbs of Menomonee Falls, Wis. provisional winners in their factory Corvair Monza coupe. They gave Doyen and Gibbs a perfect drive.

Uncertainty developed when 1959 winner Homer Trotter of Watertown, N.Y., and J. E. Bickham of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, protested. They said their Swedish factory Saab was not three seconds behind Doyen and Gibbs and that the Corvair crew had a penalty point against them.

Al Howell and Bill Silvera of Toronto complicated matters when they protested, saying their Ford Motor Company of Canada team Anglia was not seven seconds behind Doyen and Gibbs.

REVERSE RESULTS

Officials reversed the results, declaring Trotter-Bickham and Howell-Silvera provisional co-winners and the Corvair from the Chevrolet division of General Motors Corporation at Dearborn, Mich., third.

On the strength of the earlier result, team manager Dave Davis Jr. of Detroit said GM would continue to enter rallies including major European events. It was the first United States manufacturer entry in an international rally.

Scoring over most of the route is based on penalty points assessed at the rate of one for each full minute by which the car is early or late at each of the many check points in Ontario.

Anticipating a tie, organizers inserted an additional 17.5-mile run near Huntsville with a 30-mile-an-hour average speed timed to the nearest second. Doyen and Gibbs hit the 35-minute mark on the nose. However, the Saab and Anglia team cars claimed they were also perfect but were blocked by other vehicles and not accurately timed.

COULD TAKE MONTHS

A decision on the protests could require two months with appeals going as far at the world governing body of motor sport, Federation Internationale de l'Automobile in France.

Eric Carlsson of Sweden and Stuart Turner of London placed well down in the results with 24 penalty points, most for being early at some of the 38 secret check points. Six of the points were assesses for disabled headlights on their factory Saab.

Carlsson, a top European rallyist, covered the last 200 yards on the starter, the fuel pump having failed in sight of the finish. Both he and Turner said the rally was "too easy, speeds too slow."

FIND IT TOUGH

United States entries took an opposite view, finding the winding run east to Trenton, north through Havelock, the Algonquin Provincial Park to North Bay and back, one of the roughest and most exacting they had tackled.

Of a record 191 cars entered, 189 started Friday night and about 35 failed to finish because of mechanical ills. Dudley Smith and Aubrey Little of Toronto escaped injury when their Morris Mini-Minor was literally airborne after he went through an unmarked detour and over a 25-foot bluff.

Many cars became lost, one for 2½ hours. Another team tried to regain the route by celestial navigation, but pilot and navigator couldn't agree on which star was the North Star and they finally retired.

Brawling Finish

Teepees' Move Into Fifth Place

By BARRY SHARPE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. Catharines Teepees' move into sole possession of fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association junior A standings was over-shadowed by a wild and brawling finish to an otherwise quiet hockey game Sunday.

Toronto St. Michael's College Majors and Hamilton Red Wings, with less than a minute to play, staged a free-for-all which resulted in 95 minutes in penalties being called.

All told, 115 minutes in penalties were assessed throughout the game with 107 being called in the third period.

The game, the first of two scheduled at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens, saw three players receive misconduct penalties with automatic $25 fines attached.

HANDS OUT MAJORS

Referee Hugh Brethaur handed out 13 fighting majors and 10 minor penalties during the course of the game. The Majors won 2-0.

In other action during the weekend, St. Catharines downed the Red Wings 4-1 in St. Catharines Saturday night but had to come from behind to tie Toronto Marlboros 3-3 in the second half of Sunday's double-header.

Before the donny brook took place, Bruce Draper had given St. Michael's a 1-0 lead with a tip-in off his brother Dave's pass in the second period.

After the 25-minute delay, with 5.621 fans roaring delight. Hamilton's John Miszuk and Majors' Terry O'Malley drew double majors and misconduct penalties; other penalties included a major and misconduct to St. Mikes Paul Jackson.

After peace had been restored and with four second remaining, Dave Draper fired a 160-foot shot into the empty Hamilton net. Goalie Bud Blom had been pulled earlier for an extra forward.

BLEW LEADS

In the second game, Marlbors twice blew leads of two and one goals in a hard-skating contest.

Gaston Brassard and Gary Jarrett fired Marlies to a 2-0 lead after the first period, but Bill Ives and Ray Cullen tied the score in the middle session.

At 2:03 of the third, Brassard planted George Standing's rebound behind Teepee goalie Roger Crozier but a penalty to rookie Bill Smith proved costly to Marlboros. With 15 seconds remaining in the penalty, Cullen stickhandled out from the corner and slipped the tying goal under goaltender Ken Broaderick.

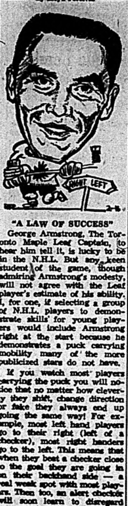
Saturday night, St. Catharines fired three unanswered goals in the second period before Bob Wall tipped in Duke Harris' shot in the third for Hamilton's only marker.

Howard Kellough, John Teather and Doug Robinson scored in the second and Paul Popiel, with his team shorthanded, concluded the scoring at 18:45 of the third.

St. Michael's are now 10 points behind the league-leading Guelph Royals and hold a five-point edge on the third-place Niagara Falls Flyers. Hamilton is fourth with 40 points, followed by the St. Catharines with 32, Peterborough 31 and Marlboros with 23.

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival



"A LAW OF SUCCESS"

George Armstrong, The Toronto Maple Leaf Captain, to hear him tell it, is lucky to be in the N.H.L. But any keen student of the game, though admiring Armstrong's modesty, will not agree with the Leaf player's estimate of his ability. I, for one, if selecting a group of N.H.L. players to demonstrate skills for young players would include Armstrong right at the start because he demonstrates a puck carrying mobility many of the more publicized stars do not have.

If you watch most players carrying the puck you will notice that no matter how cleverly they shift, change direction or fake they always end up going the same way! For example, most left hand players go to their right (left of a checker), most right handers go to the left. This means that when they beat a checker close to the goal they are going in on their backhand side — a real weak spot with most players. Then too, an alert checker will soon learn to disregard any faking and be set for the puckcarrier to go to his favorite side.

Armstrong is one of the few exceptions — his puckcarrying is as mobile as "Red" Kelly's skating. For example, the Leaf star can and does go equally well to either side and, as a result, he has one of the best records in the N.H.L. at beating one man to set up a scoring situation. The young player should remember what is called "the law of the alternative". In other words, if you can go to either side on a shift the checker cannot disregard your fake — because he knows you can go either way. Above all, learn to shift so that you end by going by on your shooting side. For more hints get my bulletin "Gordie Howe, Magic On Ice" by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 10c to Hockey Hints, 80 King St. W., Toronto.

Denny Moyer Gets Decision Over Scott

NEW YORK (AP) — Denny Moyer of Portland, Ore., scored a unanimous decision over Charley Scott of Philadelphia Saturday night in a Madison Square Garden main event that went at buzz-saw pace all the way. Moyer weighed 155¾ to 147 for Scott.

Judge Tony Rossi voted seven rounds for Moyer, two for Scott and one even. Judge Artie Aidala had it 5-4-1 and referee Al Berl 6-3-1. The Associated Press saw it six to four, Moyer.

Moyer, who beat welterweight champion Kid Paret in a non-title match, is rated a top contender but it is unlikely he will stay in the 147-pound class. He scaled the highest of his career Saturday night, and at 21 could still be growing.

Need Playoff

Sanders Breaks Record To Tie Palmer At 270

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP) — The $30,000 Phoenix open golf tournament headed into a dramatic 18-hole playoff between Arnold Palmer and Doug Sanders today after a fantastic windup in the regulation for rounds.

The winner gets $4,300, the loser $3,000. Each takes a quarter of the day's gate receipts.

Sanders was eight strokes behind the pace-setting Palmer Sunday and staged a brilliant comeback with a course record 62, eight under par, to deadlock Arnold after 72 holes. Palmer, noted for his blazing finishes, didn't make one and scrambled for a 70 over the Arizona Country Club course.

The two veterans of the United States money trial were tied at 270, 10 under par.

Jack Fleck, who won the event last year, and teed off Sunday two strokes behind Palmer, finished one back at 271 for third money of $2,000. Don January was fourth at 272 for $1,700. Dave Marr and Johnny Pott tied for fifth with 274, winning $1,450 each.

BALDING SIXTH

Al Balding of Toronto added a 68 Sunday to his earlier rounds of 68, 69 and 71 for a total of 276, worth $1,016.67. He was tied with Jim Ferrier for sixth place.

Farther down the list was Stan Leonard of Vancouver who picked up $650 with 278. He had rounds of 68, 71, 68 and 71.

Henry Williams Jr. of Fleetwood, Pa., a club pro who established the previous record of 63 for the 6,661-yard course only two days earlier and held the 36-hole lead, faded almost out of the money. He shot his second 76 in a row Sunday and pocketed only $25 in the last money position.

Sanders, 27, was the picture of perfection as he drove out of the fairway only once, hit every green in regulation and rang up a card of 10 pars and eight birdies. His birdie putts ranged from a tap-in to 35 feet.

Palmer also parred his holes, but his four birdies were offset by an equal number of over-par holes in his worst round of the tournament. He would have had it not been for an unplayable lie on the 16th hole. Purposely shotting down the left side for the most desirable approach to the green, he hooked his drive into an oleander bush.

Pair Regain Single Titles In Badminton

TORONTO (CP)—Jim Carnwath and Marg Shedd regained the Ontario singles badminton titles they held in 1959 by defeating defending champions Finn Stender and Dorothy Tinline Sunday in the finals. All are from Toronto.

Carnwath rang up his second successive win in two weekends over Stender, 15-9, 15-6. Miss Shedd experienced no difficulty defeating Miss Tinline in the final 11-8, 11-5.

In the women's doubles final, Miss Shedd and Miss Tinline swamped Toronto players Joan Warren and Johnnie Marshall, 15-6, 15-8.

Miss Shedd completed a triple slam when she paired with Bill Purcell of Sudbury to capture the mixed double honors over Miss Tinline and Tom Graham 15-8, 15-7.

Joe Koehler and Tom Graham of Kitchener-Waterloo won the senior men's doubles (40 years and under) from Canadian doubles senior champions Jack Wallis and Dr. Jack Timlinson, Toronto, 18-16, 18-17.

Commercial Hockey League Results

Williams Brothers grabbed a two-game lead over Joyce Real Estate while Booth TV's went one game up on Jones Motors in the Commercial Hockey League semi-final playoffs last night.

Williams downed Joyces 5-2 and lead that 3-of-5 set two games to none. Booths blanked Jones 3-0 and lead their series one game to none with one tie. Third games in both series will be played next Sunday.

George Jacklin paced the Williams' victory by scoring two goals and assisting on two others. Bert Faulkner, Gordie Green and Earl Cousins fired the other goals. Jack Gill and Goyer each drew two assists.

Jackie Elliott scored one Joyce goal and set Jim Sheridan up for the other. Meagher and Bryant also had assists.

Jones who finished the season in first place, could not cope with the Booth squad. The TV's goals were scored by Doug Hull, Gary Rowbotham and Don Bishop. John "Shaker" Baker and Frank Cris earned assists.

Bulldogs Take Woodstock in Senior Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Windsor Bulldogs increased their lead over second-place Chatham when they uncorked a 10-4 win in a fast, tight game with sixth-place Woodstock Athletics in the Ontario Hockey Association senior league Saturday.

Bulldogs shot five goals in the final 13 minutes of play when a pair of misconducts benched Woodstock's playing coach Jack Stoddard and Toby Black in the last period.

Scorers for Bulldogs were Bob Brown with three, Lou Bendo, Joe Zorica and Gord Haida with two each and Bob Watt with one. Black, Junior Barash, Rod McElroy and Carl Hatt scored for the Athletics.

The As are five points behind Strathroy, their closest competitors.

Strathroy Rockets took a 6-1 victory from fourth-place Stratford Indians and consolidated their fifth place position in the league standings.

Rockets scored evenly with two goals in each period after Indians' Maurice Levesque tallied a single for Stratford's evening.

Defenceman Stan Long and right winger Jack Lane each scored twice, leaving the other two goals to Willie Haas and Bruce Jones.

Harry Lumley Aids Warriors To Gain Tie

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Portland Buckaroos Sunday ran head-on into Harry Lumley.

The veteran goaltender, who spent the better part of 10 years jumping from Detroit, Toronto, Chicago and Boton in the National Hockey League, put on a sensational performance as he kicked out 44 shots and held the second-place Buckaroos to one goal in a Western League game.

In other action Saturday, the league - leading Calgary Stampeders beat Victoria Cougars 6-4 and Vancouver Canucks maintained their slim margin over th fourth-place Totems with a 2-1 victory over Spokane Comets.

BUILT UP LEAD

Totems built up a 9-0 lead before Gerry Brisson broke through to get Winnipeg's only goal.

Marc Boileau did most of the damage as he scored four goals. Bill MacFarland and Tom McVie got two each, with Gord Sinclair, Murray Wilkie and Ed Ehrenverth adding singles.

Sid Finney had four assists and Don Wilson two goals in Calgary's win. Wally Hergesheimer, Ron Leopold, Gord Vejprava and John Kosiancic got one goal each. Victoria's goals were scored by Jim Moro, with two, Wayne North and Gerry Goyer.

Larry Cahan got Vancouver's winner with a bounding shot late in the third period. The first Canuck goal went to Dave Duke and Sandy Hucul scored for Spokane.

Minor Hockey

The Bruins and Black Hawks failed to settle their bantam playoff series Saturday morning but Maple Leafs, Macs, Quinte and Barons advanced into the second round.

Black Hawks blanked the Bruins 3-0 but only tied the goals-to-count series at 3-3. K. Hannah scored two goals and P. Embury one. J. Murphy drew two assistas and D. Halsey one. S. Boyle had the shutout.

Red Wings defeated the Barons 4-2 but lost the round 6-4. S. Ethier scored two goals and assisted on the other two Wing goals by G. Muir. D. Hewitt also had an assist. R. Post and R. Finkle scored for the Barons, who took a 4-0 win the week before. B. Derry and M. Follwell drew assists.

Quinte whipped Rangers 7-0 for an 11-1 victory on the round. T. Young earned the shutout. Perry Soule starred on the attack with four goals and two assists, good for six points. D. Beresford potted two goals and T. Bennett one. B. Pursey, T. Law and M. Flindall had assists.

Macs edged Canadiens 3-2 to win the series 7-2. Al Mott, J. Blakely and G. Coe scored the goals with J. Doran and R. Fitchett drawing assists. T. Irwin and B. Culloden potted Canadien markers and H. Tuchmayer had one assist.

Maple Leafs tied the Browns 1-1 but took the round 4-3. G. Muldoon scored for Leafs with D. Muldoon assisting. G. Blakely potted Browns' goal with D. Stickle helping.

Three Skating Titles For Canadian Entry

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Canadian skaters captured three of the four titles at stake in the North American figure skating champions during the weekend.

Laurence Owen, 16, of Boston was the only U.S. winner and her margin over Canadian champion Wendy Griner of Toronto in the women's singles was as thin as thin ice.

Things were so bad from the American standpoint that the Canadian pairs skated away with a crown despite the fact they shouldn't even have been on the ice.

Maria and Otto Jelinek, sister-brother exiles from Czechoslovakia, now living in Oakville, Ont., were practising their pairs routine Friday night when they fell. Maria was cut by Otto's skates on her right thigh. She bruised a hip and pulled a muscle. Otto was knocked out. Taken to a nearby hospital, he was treated for a wrenched back, mild concussion and had three stitches sewed in a scalp wound.

Told not to skate by doctors, they said thanks for the advice, and skated. Net result: One of the easiest victories of the two-day competition. The Jelineks wound up their exercise with the eye-catching lift that precipitated their accident.

Other winners were Donald Jackson of Oshawa in the men's singles, and the Canadian dance team of Virginia Thompson and William McLachlin, both of Toronto.

Jackson's smooth, confident and artistic performance simply was too much for Bradley Lord, U.S. champion from Boston.

Lord skated well but he summed it up best after the first day's compulsory figures, saying "This fellow's too experienced and too good for me." Lord finished second.

Trailing the Jelineks in the pairs was the American team of Maribel Owen, Laurence's older sister, and Dudley Richards of Boston. Donna Lee Carrier and Roger Campbell, both of Los Angeles, were runners-up in the Thompson - McLachlin team in the dance.

Some of the experts on hand were not overly impressed with Miss Owen's victory over Miss Griner, a determined little 16-year - old blonde who almost came from behind to make it a clean sweep for Canada. They hinted the result could be reversed when the girls meet again Feb. 21 in the world championships at Czechoslovakia.

Italian Wins Bobsled Run

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP)—Steel-nerved Eugenio Monti of Italy, travelling so fast in his sled smashed into a tree beyond the finish line, won his fifth straight world two-man bobsled championship Sunday.

Gary Sheffield, a U.S. marine from Lake Placid, finished second in the two-day, four-heat competition down the icy, mile-long Olympic run.

Monti's sled hardly touched the run in the fourth and final heat as he and brakeman Sergio Siorpaes flashed down in one minute, 9.22 seconds—fastest official mark for a two-man sled. The sled was moving so fast that Siorpaes was unable to slow it during the 150 - yard "braking area" beyond the finish. The sled smashed into a tree and Monti was cut slightly around the nose.

His cumulative time for four heats, 4:42.67, also was a record, well under the old mark of 4:52.83 set by American San Benham in 1957.

Sheffield did 4:45.74 and the crowd of nearly 6,000 cheered him all the way down on his final run as he sought to end Monti's bobsled domination. But his 1:10.41 could not match Monti's final performance.

Two Dollar Bet Gets Man $40,713

AGUA CALIENTE, Mexico (AP)—Six months ago, Alfred Gonsalves was laid off by a California aircraft plant.

He was going to work Monday, for the first time since then, at a $400 - a-month job milking cows to support his wife anl four children.

On Sunday he won $40,713 on a $2 horse-race bet.

Gonsalves, 28, and his brother, Tony, 39, were the only ticket holders to pick all six winners in the fifth through ten races at the Caliente track.

Tony's ticket in the five-ten pool, however, had multiple choices and cost him $16. He still has an aircraft job.

Toronto Team Wins Honors For Pee Wees

QUEBEC (CP) — The second international peewee hockey tournament wound up Saturday with a classy Toronto Dileo team skating off with the top honors.

Dileo, who won the class AA title from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., clicked with two victories Saturday to clinch the grand championship.

In the semi-final contest, the Toronto team blanked a spirited Montmagny Squad 4-0, while Drummondville came from behind to edge out Rockcliffe 3-2.

Toronto knocked out Drummondville in the final by a crushing 13-1 to emerge on top of the 46 peewee entries in the tournament.

The tournament's second year of operation drew entries from four Canadian provinces and three states of the U.S., nearly doubling last year's enrolment of 28 teams.

All five of last year's champions were dethroned. The class AA title was won last year by Scarborough.

OTHERS DETHRONED

Drummondville, Que., won class A honors, Montmagny, Que., class B and Rockcliffe class C.

They replaced Rimouski, Montmorency and Bersimis, all of Quebec.

Almost 53,000 people watched the peewees play this year, while last year's total attendance for the full eight days amounted to little more than 19,000.

The American Hockey League trophy—an innovation this year—was won by Quebec Aces over two U.S. teams, Hershey, Pa., and Cranston, R.I.

Another novelty was introduced this year: A trophy for the champion Indian peewee hockey team attending the tournament.

Russians Win 3-2

Fist For Fist, Stick For Stick

MOSCOW (CP) — A tough Russian hockey team defeated Trail Smoke Eaters 3-2 Sunday by trying its hand at Canadian-style hockey and making it work fist for fist and stick for stick.

Escaping unscathed from a major first-period brawl with the Canadians, Moscow Dynamo built up a 3-0 lead in the first two periods that Trail found impossible to beat in the final 20 minutes.

A sellout crowd of 12,000 in the Moscow Sports Palace watched as the game threatened almost from the opening whistle to develop into a riot. Dozens of policemen were stationed throughout the arena.

A minor fight at the two-minute mark sparked the rough play, and four minutes before the first period ended every player on the ice except the goalies was engaged in a boxing match.

PLAY IS RUGGED

From there on the play continued to be wild although, as Jack Roxburgh, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said after the game: "It was a hard, rugged match but there was no real rough, dirty work."

The Russian hockey fans howled and whistled so loudly in protest at times during the game that women spectators covered their ears with their hands.

All had been friendly before the match started. The Russian team captain presented the Canadians with flowers and the players shook hands with each other.

Overhead, the Russians had hung a large blue - and - white sign, proclaiming in English: "Greetings to the sportsmen of Canada."

Moscow sports writers had noted after Friday's game, which Trail tied 3-3, that the play had been surprisingly mild in view of reports that the Smoke Eaters played harshly in their games in Sweden.

GO AHEAD

Claude Cyr, Trail's substitute goalie, successfully weathered seven shots in the first five minutes of the game but Russia's Vycheslav Starshinov found the mark at 14:22. At 15:48 Vladimir Ursinov put the Russians ahead 2-0.

The Russians increased their lead to 3-0 at 18:14 of the middle period on a goal by Evgeny Mayorov.

In the third period centre Hal Jones put the Canadians back in the game with a goal at the 4:33 mark. Centre Dave Rusnell followed with a goal at 11:22 but Trail couldn't notch the equalizer.

The Canadians will have a chance to redeem themselves when they meet another Soviet team here Tuesday in the last game of their three-game Russian series.

Jim Cameron, president of the Smoke Eaters, said he considers the Russians Canada's top competition in the forthcoming world championships.

Trail now has a won-lost record of 5-2-1 in their eight exhibition games so far. They also lost their opening match in Oslo, Norway—that one by a 8-3 score.

Spurs Step Nearer Home, Beat Aston

LONDON (Reuters)—Tottenham Hotspur took another stride nearer to the English Soccer League-and-cup double by beating Aston Villa 2-1 in a league game at Birmingham Saturday.

The victory kept the Spurs eight points ahead in the first division and gave them a psychological advantage for their fifth-round Football Association Cup clash with Villa on the same ground next Saturday.

Tottenham and Villa now have had 20 post-war meetings without the midland club winning once.

With only 13 more games in the league schedule, the Spurs, with 50 points, hold a strong position.

Their nearest rivals, Wolverhampton Wanderers, with 42 points, beat Manchester United 2-1.

LOST SIXTH GAME

Defending league champion Burnley suffered its sixth home defeat of the season, losing 4-3 to Sheffield Wednesday, which retained third place with 40 points.

At the other end of the league standing, Preston North End gained its first win in four months, 2-0 over Fulham.

In the second division, Sheffield United increased its lead with a 2-1 home win over Luton. United now has 41 points, three more than Ipswich Town.

Bristol Rovers inside forward Alfie Biggs suffered a broken leg in the second division game against Derby, which ended in a 1-1 tie.

A 3-1 defeat at Grimsby cut Queen's Park Rangers lead in the third division to three points. The Rangers have 42 points.

Peterborough, by thrashing Exeter 7-1, gained its biggest win since being admitted to the fourth division. Peterborough retained second place, five points behind Crystal Palace, which notched a 4-1 home win over Rochdale.

HORSE ESCAPES

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP)—Adios Butler, one of the fastest harness racing horses of all time and a $600,000 winner of the nation's leading raceways, escaped harm Saturday night when a fire roared through a winter quarters barn at nearby Ocean Downs, killing seven horses. Adios Butler occupied a stall two barns away from the scene of the fire. The barns are 40 feet apart.

Jake Edwards Wins Two In Curling

GANANOQUE, Ont. (CP)—Jake Edwards' Kingston rink, defending Ontario curling champions, Saturday night chalked up two convincing wins to take the Division 2 playoffs.

The rink, intact from 1960, defeated Keith LaSha's Gananoque rink 12-4 in the semi-finals and Pete McKay's Cornwall foursome 14-4 in the final.

McKay's rink eliminated the team of Oscar Bigford, Brockville, 10-8 in the semis.

Judo Club Fares Well In Tourney

The Belleville YMCA-Hatashita judo club competed in the McMaster University first invitational tournament held in Hamilton on Saturday and turned in another good showing.

Belleville advanced to the third round of the tournament, won by Frank Hatashita's Oakville club, before being eliminated by the Oshawa Maple Leaf club.

Jim Driscoll's Belleville team, rebuilding this season, was composed of David Blakely as captain, Gerry Cranston, Ted MacDonnell, John Casey and Enos Merritt.

In the individual class, Belleville's Don Dalrymple, Shodan, was defeated by one-half of a point by tourney champ Hank Jensen, Sandan.

Other results in individual matches were: David Blakely, decision and elimination; Ron Post, decision and elimination; Ted MacDonnell, defeated in second round; Enos Merritt, defeated in third round; John Casey, defeated in third round; Leon Montgomery, defeated in second round; Floyd Tryon, defeated in second round; John Danis, defeated in second round and Gerry Cranston, defeated in the semi-finals.

Cranston's semi-final match was one of the tournament's best with the local man losing a decision after the match had been extended six times.

The tournament was well organized, about 140 taking part, by Jim McLaughlin, chief judo instructor of McMaster University. McLaughlin is a former Belleville boy who learned his judo here at the YMCA.

Belleville Theatre Guild's Entry Tops Contest Here

The Belleville Theatre Guild's presentation of Frederick Morton's "Box and Cox" drew the nod and plaudits of the adjudicator at the Eastern Ontario Drama League's elimination festival held here last Saturday afternoon and evening at the BCIVS auditorium.

Mr. Murray Edwards of CBC-Toronto credited the local group with having come closest to fulfilling that which they set out to do with the "delightful, charming farce," which was set in the Victorian era. Harry Mulhall, Tom Fraser and Margaret Jardine were the principals in the play, which was directed by Mr. Mulhall. Costumes were designed and provided by Edna Perry. The set design was by Nora Butler and Bill White was the stage manager.

The Trenton Drama Group's entry, "No Exit," by Jean Paul Sartre, also drew the compliments of the adjudicator, Mr. Edwards, for the fine acting and set design. Jim Alexander, Nicky Thomas, Flo Yanover and Tom Causey were the cast members for this production, which placed second.

A Peterborough entry, Thornton Wilder's "Happy Journey," presented by the St. John Players of Peterborough, placed third.

The Belleville group was presented with a cheque to cover part of its expenses when it goes on to participate in the regional festival to be held in Cobourg in the middle of March.

Following the festival, a social gathering was held at Hotel Quinte for the casts and stage crews of the three plays.

Habs Open 16-Point Lead In EPHL

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hull-Ottawa Canadiens opened up a 16-point lead in weekend Eastern Professional Hockey League play and Sault Ste. Marie and Sudbury scored shutouts.

Canadiens edged last-place Montreal Royals 2-1 at Hull Sunday while Soo Thunderbirds were defeating Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers 2-0 at Kitchener. Saturday night at Kingston, Sudbury Wolves were belted 5-0 by the Frontenacs who avenged a 5-0 loss to Sudbury the night before.

The three-game action left Hull-Ottawa coasting well in front of the Soo—74 points to 58. Kitchener, Kingston and Sudbury lead Montreal in the rest of the standing.

It was a dull scrap at Hull. Johnny Annable got the Canadiens off to an early lead and Reg Grigg evened the score less than five minutes later. The winner was Bobby Rousseau's goal early in the second period when he pounced on a loose puck.

At Kitchener, Fred Hilts tipped in the puck at the midway point of the third period when the Beavers were shorthanded and the second goal was a bonus to Cliff Schmautz who lifted a shot into an empty cage after Jack McCartan was benched for an extra forward.

Kingston scoring was spread over five players with goals in every period.

Scorers for the Frontenacs were Lorne Ferguson, Orv Tessier, Barry Ashbee, Bob Attersley and Dick Meissner.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Tuesday, February 14, 1961

General Tendencies: Today can bring some pretty fixed changes if you try to force issues of any nature, type or description. Make sure that you do use considerable tact and diplomacy and a smile will certainly accomplish every sort of beneficial result, whereas making any demands can boomerang against your best interests. Charm all about you.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) While close ties and one whom you love many not agree on some matter that is important to you today, be sure you do not start arguments. Remain neutral and then the affair will straighten itself out naturally and you maintain peace.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Since both those at home and good friends are anxious that you get wholeheartedly into some government or professional matters, it is well that you do so now and show your fine ability. This will bring excellent results to you and them.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) While you may be quite idealistic and somewhat a dreamer, this is the day to place all such fine creative ability on a practical basis and let it pay off in dollars and cents. Seek the assistance of good friends who have your interests at heart.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) This is one day when real activity in the right channels can bring fine benefits, so be sure you put aside any social or personal matters and go after that which will bring in fine monetary returns. First contact authorities, get advice.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Here is one of those peculiar days when associates all seem eager to contradict you and your views, so it behooves you to use the most diplomatic and charming approach and thereby turn others your way. However, be fair and don't lose your temper.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Any private angling is fine now that will be conducive to more efficiency in your work and bring greater remuneration. It is important that you impress higher-ups with your perseverance and thorough knowledge of work at hand.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can benefit much today from the ideas and favors of good friends who can point the way to greater understanding with associates and those who are close of kin. Follow suggestions gratefully.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Important you do nothing today that will jeopardize your job, credit rating or reputation. Wisdom is the better part of valor now and you are sure to win out. Speak little and carry through with duties at hand prodigiously.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can bring into operation any new methods or ideas you please today, but take care you are most ethical in all that you do. Work with those who are of a high spiritual understanding. Be broad-minded for best results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are now able to increase income or abundance by concentrating upon the right methods and doing your work expeditiously. Be exact and you reach your goals that much faster. P.M. be very condescending with the one you love.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) While a partner has radically different ideas to yours, it behooves you now to consider them seriously and not be antagonistic. Reach a happy medium through sincere cooperation. You will then be on your way to real success.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Much can be done today after you give the assistance that is needed to those who look to you for help. P.M. take health treatments that are needed. Be sure you get abode nicely cleaned and organized. Add art pieces.

If your child is born today.. there will be a great deal of ability in this chart, but you must teach early that the rights of others must be respected, partically if your child is a girl, since there is a tendency to run roughshod over others in gaining desires. Then the chart becomes most promising, especially in any profession where diplomatic relations are to be maintained. Fine for government work, the ministry and the like.

CANADA'S TRADE

more friends if we were and some of our old friends would wonder what had happened to us."

AUDIENCE APPLAUDS

His statements were loudly applauded by the delegates, who later passed a resolution urging Canada to stay out of the neutrals' camp "while striving vigorously for world disarmament."

But in passing, Mr. Green also threw some cold water on another resolution approved by the convention — that Canada immediately take steps to recognize Red China and get her seated in the United Nations.

Referring to the resolution, Mr. Green said he understood the delegates had "settled" one of Canada's external affairs problems "but I'm not sure you've settled it in the right way."

The resolution passed by the convention called for recognition to be conditional on continued recognition of the Nationalist Chinese government on Formosa.

At Saturday and Sunday luncheon meetings, the conference heard from Postmaster-General Hamilton and Secretary of State Dorion respectively.

Mr. Hamilton said the government is not embarking on a program of economic nationalism in respect to foreign-owned companies in Canada, but rather a policy of "Canadianization" so that Canadians could regain control of their economy.

Asked after if his use of the word "regain" meant he felt Canada does not have control of its economy, he said that when major portions of industry were more than 50 per cent U.S. owned, it was a good indication control lay outside of Canada.

Mr. Dorion, the only speaker who spoke exclusively in French, delivered a straight "fight talk" in which he described the Liberal party as the party of "centralization," while the Conservatives realized provincial powers must be kept strong if both French and English cultures were to find full expression.

Macs Meet Whitby in Semi-Finals

Belleville McFarlands will clash head on with Whitby Hillcrests, the hottest team in the league, in the OHA Eastern Junior "B" Hockey League's semi-final series.

The regular schedule came to a close Saturday night with Peterborough clinching first place and a choice of their semi-final opponents, with a 7-1 win over Picton. Meanwhile Whitby captured a 7-2 win over Kingston to finish just one point behind Peterborough.

Peterborough chose Kingston as its semi-final opponent, leaving Whitby and Belleville to battle it out in the other series. All series will be four-of-seven affairs.

The Petes and Kingston are having trouble settling their series dates. Both clubs want Monday for home games. Only two dates have been set as yet, Peterborough going to Kingston for the first game on Tuesday, February 14 with the second in Peterborough next Monday.

Meanwhile, all seven dates were set for the Hillcrest-Mac series which opens in Whitby this Thursday night at 8.30. The second game will be here in Belleville on Saturday, February 18. Other dates are in Whitby on the 21, Belleville the 24, Whitby the 28, Belleville March 3 and Whitby on March 4.

It was also decided at a meeting held here yesterday that one neutral referee and two linesmen would be used for playoff games. The two referee system has been in effect all season.

All games will be played to a finish, elminating ties. If the clubs are tied at the end of regulation time one ten minute overtime will be played. If they are still tied, sudden-death will go into effect, the first goal the winner.

All games in the Belleville-Whitby series will start at 8.30 p.m. except the Friday games in Belleville, scheduled for 9.00 p.m.

Following are the final league standings and dates for the Belleville-Whitby semi-final series.

OFFICIAL STORY

ants just outside their village last night and that the three were buried there.

"Three cabinet ministers (of the Katanga Government) left by plane to see the bodies in order to investigate the killings," Munongo told reporters.

TROOPS SEARCHED

Munongo said earlier 100 police and provincial troops had searched for the Lumumba party with helicopters and aircraft. One of these planes sighted the car in which Lumumba supposedly fled.

After his arrest Lumumba was first jailed near Leopoldville by Maj. Gen. Joseph Mobutu, The Congo's military strongman. But three weeks ago the ex-premier was brought to Katanga Province on the ground that he could be detained more safely here.

Katanga's premier Moise Tshombe has insisted Lumumba made a genuine escape last week but declared Lumumba's fate was an internal matter and none of the United Nations' business. He refused to cooperate with a UN team that came here from Leopoldville to investigate at the weekend.

UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold had sent Brig.-Gen. Mengasha Hyassu of Ethiopia, chief of staff of the UN command, to investigate Lumumba's fate.

A newspaper in Durban, South Africa, reported from Elisabethville that it is believed the battered, blindfolded ex-premier was shot to death Jan. 17, just after he was flown to Elisabethville from the Leopoldville area for more secure imprisonment.

The UN command reported two opposing Congo armies were converging on Bumba, a river town on the frontier of Lumumba-aligned Oriental province. A third force of Katanga soldiers was on the move in its own province.

Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mobutu was said to be bringing 1,200 central government troops by boat and plane to Bumba. Rebel troops were reported to be moving out of Stanleyville, headquarters of the Lumumba forces, also for Bumba.

Tignee said a Katanga government commission investigating the escape gave this report:

"Lumumba and the two others escaped by digging a hole in the soft concrete wall of the room in which they were held. They took iron spikes used to hold up a curtain rail and dug through the wall slowly, hiding the hole with the curtains.

"When the hole was about a yard in diameter, about 1 a.m., they climbed through and attacked the two guards outside with thick pieces of firewood. They bound the guards with strips of curtain and took an automobile standing nearby. This car was found later outside the village of Munkomtoto, north of the farmhouse.

"It seems the car crashed and then Lumumba and the other two pushed it into a stream beside the road where it was found badly damaged."

VOICE BITTER CHARGES

The documents, obtained from a Communist satellite country, disclosed bitter charges and counter-charges between Premier Khrushchev and Chinese leaders.

The Chinese accused Khrushchev of mishandling the Polish and Hungarian revolts in 1956 and of sacrificing Chinese interests in the interests of a detente with the United States.

Khrushchev accused Communist Chinese party chairman Mao Tse-tung of being another Stalin and of expounding unrealistic theories.

Some observers believe the documents, published in the London Observer and the New York Times, were deliberately leaked to the West by Russia.

TWO YOUNG MEN - - AN IDEA and idb

When John X and Harry Y first approached Industrial Development Bank on behalf of their small processing company they had a clear idea of the lines along which they wanted their company to develop but, partly because the business and the operating equipment were quite highly specialized, they were experiencing difficulty in obtaining term financing for an urgently needed plant expansion.

The fact that their company was growing fast in a very competitive field reflected the energetic and competent management of the two principals. The expansion plan seemed sound to IDB officers but the principals had not yet given much thought to the larger working capital they would need to handle the increased volume an expanded plant would be able to produce. This aspect, among others, was gone into thoroughly with them and, in the end, IDB agreed to finance the cost of the plant expansion with the owners putting in some more money to improve the company's working capital and keep their investment in reasonable relation to borrowings.

The space problem was relieved for a time by this first expansion and the company continued to grow despite occasional setbacks of the kind experienced by most businesses.

Three or four years later, the plant was again bursting at the seams but further enlargement of the building was not possible and the principals began to think seriously of moving to a large metropolitan centre. They changed their minds, however, when a group of local citizens, impressed by the company's record of progress and being anxious to keep the industry in the community, offered to invest as minority shareholders in the operation. IDB was approached once more and again extended financial assistance for a new and larger building to be located in the same town, and for additional equipment. The further expansion successfully completed, the company is now the largest employer in town and is still growing lustily.

The combination of an original sound idea, the energy and initiative of two young men to develop it, adequate and timely term financing by IDB for plant expansion when needed, has enabled this enterprise to win a leading place in Canadian industry.

This business is one of more than 3000 enterprises which have been helped to success through IDB financing. IDB was established in 1944 to provide financial assistance to industrial enterprises unable to obtain satisfactory term financing through normal channels. If you have a business financing problem, you are invited to write or visit the nearest IDB office for information and a descriptive booklet—or consult your auditor, lawyer or chartered banker.*

P.S.—We have made a colour movie based on the case of another company assisted by IDB financing. If an organization or group in your community would like to have it shown, the nearest IDB office will be glad to make the arrangements.

Tomorrow They Mix

Pancakes and Presents!

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Tuesday, February 14 is the wedding day of "Mr. Pancake and "Miss Valentine".

By a strange quirk of date Shrove Tuesday (Pancake Day") and St. Valentine's Day will be celebrated together.

This year the tactful spouse and the love-struck swain will get tangible returns with a minimum of waiting.

They will get pancakes for figurative "pearls" and syrup for bon-bons.

That is the way it was when the cave - dwelling fore-bears of the Flintstones originated the pancake.

Except the old man gets the credit for the invention of the overgrown cookies. He discovered that moistened ground grain baked on stones made good pastry.

Later when the cave women got their club-bearing spouses out of their hair, they improved somewhat on the pancake although up to this point they had seen no shortening commercials.

Abbott Elfric, an English clergyman, gets the credit for originating Pancake Day, or Shrove Tuesday as it is called some 1,000 years A.D.

He proclaimed that "In the week immediately preceding Lent everyone shall go to his confessor and confess his misdeeds, and the confessor shall so shrive as he may then hear by his deeds what he is to do".

So Shrove Tuesday came into being.

Cakes were the poular dish for the day before Ash Wednesday the beginning of Lent, and a day of feasting.

But when the bell tolled, housewives dropped everything and hurried to church to be "shiven". The cakes were left and finished later. They became known as shrivelling cakes, later as pancakes.

The early pancakes were made of four ingredients: eggs for Lenten sacredness, flour for the staff of life, salt for wholesomeness and milk for innocence.

The housewife made all her pancakes according to this precise formula. It also gave her the opportunity to use up supplies of surplus fat (animal) before the Lenten season.

St. Valentine meant well when he started this fealty-to-the-fair business by gifting love tokens.

It started on a five-and-ten basis, and gradually mushroomed until the venerable originator is now the patron saint of jewelers, gift-shops and greeting-card purveyors.

But Tuesday next he shares double-billing with the time-honored pancake.

For years the lady of the house has been given the St. Valentine "syrup" by her income-tax overlord. Tuesday the situation is reversed, the only difference being the lordly male will swallow his syrup with much more gusto then did the distaff side in previous years.

And a tip to the lady. You don't have to flip, toss or shake up pancakes any more. You freeze 'em.

Make some extra pancakes, allow them to cool, wrap in aluminum foil or waxed paper and put them in the freezer.

When you need them, wrap them in foil, pop them into a 350-degree oven and give them ten minutes. They will come out as crisp and delicious as though you had lifted them hot from the griddle.

HALLOWAY — Mr. and Mrs. Harry McMullen were recent Sunday supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allyn Finkle, Marsh Hill.

Miss Linda Sine, Belleville, is spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Wellman.

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Kelly were the surprised recipients of a party for their tenth wedding anniversary. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Wellman of Corbyville, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Reid; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Adams of Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kelly of Foxboro; Mr. and Mrs. George MacDonald, Point Anne; Mr. and Mrs. Freddie Wellman of Halloway, and all the respective families.

Miss Christine Workman was an overnight guest on Wednesday of her friend, Miss Lorna Fitzgerald, Madoc.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Coulter of Roslin spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Donaldson called on Mrs. Barton Hinchcliffe of Wallbridge on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Moynes, Laurie and David, Belleville, were Sunday afternoon and evening guests at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Eugene Kelly, and Mr. Kelly.

Mrs. H. Townsend and Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Townsend spent Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. H. Garrison, of Wallbridge.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jervis spent the Sunday dinner hour and evening with Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Roth. Afternoon callers at the same home were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Snider and girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Laing, 4th Thurlow, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lee Vance, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Vance on Wednesday evening.

Misses Carol Denyes, Jean McMullen, Leanne Green and Ada Woodcock attended the Young People's Conference held in Campbellford over the past weekend.

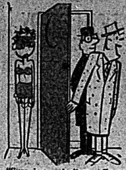
Mr. and Mrs. Dan Benn, of Belleville, had tea Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Coleman Townsend.

Mrs. Roscoe Robson was hostess to the Zion-Bethel Institute meeting on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Elliott and Carol, Foxboro, had supper with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Morgan on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Snider and family, Plainfield, spent the supper hour and Saturday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Snider.

"Jest a Second"



"Surprise, darling. Guess who's with me."

SUNDAY SKATING — On Belleville harbor, opposite Victoria Park, is a popular pastime as is seen in above photo. Goyer Marina keeps the ice cleared of snow and free skating is enjoyed by ever-increasing numbers of young people. Close to 300 turned out Sunday.

'Dead On Course,' Russian Rocket Heads For Venus

Later Probes Will Give Many Facts on Planet

LONDON (Reuters) — Soviet scientists confidently forecast the beginning of an era of interplanetary flights today as a Russian rocket streaked through space on course toward Venus.

Russian scientist Professor Alexander Markov said there was "no doubt" that after the current rocket flight others with automatic instruments would be sent to Venus.

"They will transmit back to earth information about the atmosphere of Venus, the composition of its surface, flora and fauna, if they exist on this mysterious planet," Markov said in an article in the Soviet newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda.

Alexander Nesmeyanov, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, said the day was drawing closer when man would directly explore the planets, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

He said the Venus probe would "add to our knowledge of space flight, communications over astronomical distances, and our confidence in space navigation."

Russia reported Monday night [illegible] 1,420-pound rocket, launched Sunday from an earth [illegible] covered almost 300,000 miles Monday morning and was dead on course. They said the rocket would reach the area of Venus in the latter half of May.

The distance of Venus from the earth varies between 26,000,000 and 160,000,000 miles, according to the orbits of the two planets around the sun. Estimates are that Venus will be at its nearest point to the earth in mid-April and about 40,000,000 miles away by the end of May.

Monday night's Soviet announcement said the rocket had been slowed to a speed of about 9,000 miles an hour because of the pull of the earth's gravity but that it would leave the earth's field of gravity "in a few days" and be solely governed by the gravity of the sun.

A speed of at least 24,800 miles an hour was necessary for the blastoff of the rocket from the earth satellite.

All equipment aboard was functioning as intended, Tass said. During the first playback, the temperature aboard was 68 degrees Fahrenheit. The account said a temperature control system was designed to assure proper conditions for operation of equipment on the station.

Oct. 4: First artificial earth Satellite weighing 83.6 kilograms (184 pounds) was launched, minimum height 288 kilometres (179 miles), maximum 947 kilometres (588 miles).

Nov. 4: Second sputnik with the dog Laika aboard was launched weighing 508.3 kilograms (1,119 pounds) with minimum height of 225 kilometres (140 miles) and maximum of 1,671 (1,045 miles).

1958

May 15: Third sputnik launched weighing 1,327 kilograms (2,919 pounds) with maximum height of 1,880 kilometres (1,175 miles). This one burned up Aug. 6, 1960.

Aug. 27: Two dogs made an up-and-down flight, reaching a height of 450 kilometres (280 miles) with a rocket weighing 1,690 kilograms (3,718 pounds).

1959

Jan. 2: Space - rocket Lunik passed the moon and then went into orbit around the sun Jan. 7-8. The weight was 1,742 kilograms (3,832 pounds).

July 2: A dog and a rabbit were fired into the upper atmosphere and returned. The payload of the rocket was 2,000 kilograms (4,400 pounds).

Sept. 12: The space - rocket Lunik II, carrying a pennant with the Soviet coat of arms, hit the moon. It weighed 1,511 kilograms (3,324 pounds).

Oct. 4: A space rocket Lunik III took photographs of the far side of the moon and relayed them by television. It weighed 1,553 kilograms (3,416 pounds).

Second reading—approval in principle—was given a bill to incorporate an American - controlled pipeline company seeking to transport petroleum products from southwestern Alberta to the international boundary.

Ed Nasserden (PC—Rosthern) sided with the CCF in favor of an amendment that would have shunted the bill aside in a six-month hoist aimed at killing it for the session.

CCF Leader Argue described the bill to incorporate the Aurora Pipe Line Company as "iniquitous" and "un - Canadian."

External Affairs Minister Green said the Canadian government is fearful of the consequences of the death of deposed Congo premier Lumumba and expressed hope for restraint "in this dangerous situation."

CCF MP Frank Howard, temporarily suspended from the Commons Friday for using unparliamentary language, returned to the House.

Tuesday, Feb. 14

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EST to debate government resolutions; the Senate meets at 8 p.m.

Admits Slaying Three Women

NEW YORK (AP)—A 32-year-old man today admitted killing three women whose bodies were found Monday night in two tenements, police said.

Police said Pedro Arroyo told them his slaying of the three women was prompted by jealousy. He was described by police as the current or past boy friend of all three.

No charge was lodged against him immediately.

One of the three bodies was found on the roof of a building. The others were discovered lying side by side in the bed of Arroyo's apartment.

The victim on the roof was identified as Margarita Sierra, 18, who lived in the building. She had been shot in the head.

The women in Arroyo's bed—both strangled—were identified as Cataline Brown, 28, and Candida Caquillas, 33.

Police said the Brown woman was believed to have been living with Arroyo recently. The Caquillas woman had lived with him up to about six months ago, they said.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: It was very mild in all but extreme northern sections of the province Monday night. But temperatures are tumbling rapidly this morning in localities bordering Lake Superior and cold air will reach the shores of the Lower Lakes before morning.

A storm moving east from Montana is expected to cause a few showers in southwestern Ontario and a light snowfall in Eastern and Central Ontario Wednesday.

LIVELY RUCKUS SEEN IN HOUSE ON PIPELINE BILL

Would Incorporate U.S. Company

OTTAWA (CP)—"An act to incorporate Aurora Pipe Line Company," is the innocuous way in which the Commons order paper describes a bill now before Parliament. The mild wording stands in sharp contrast to the tone of the debate.

The measure has kicked up a lively ruckus, with shades of the 1956 pipeline debate to color its bumpy ride through the lower house. Only this time some of the roles are reversed.

In the Commons Monday, the CCF continued its all-out efforts to block the bill, maintaining that it would turn over control of a Canadian utility of a United States company. Sixty-eight per cent of the shares in Aurora would be owned by Continental Oil Company of Houston, Texas.

"This is another instance of a great natural resource being controlled in its transportation by a United States company," said CCF Leader Argue.

CAN'T STOP IT

The thin ranks of the CCF could not, however, stop progress on the incorporation of Aurora, which proposes to transport liquid petroleum products, processed from natural gas, from southwestern Alberta to the international boundary over a 41-mile pipeline.

Both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives — with one exception—lined up against a CCF amendment to "hoist" the bill for six months in a vote of 139 to 8.

Then the two larger parties got together to vote it through second reading — approval in principle. The vote was 140 to 7. The bill now goes to committee.

A loan conservative member, Ed Nasserden (PC—Rosthern), joined the CCF in support of

Spoke to Accused Shortly Before Body Was Found

TORONTO (CP)—A construction superintendent testified at the murder trial of Dezso Bakonyi Monday that he had spoken to the 21-year-old Hungarian immigrant at a west end park site some time before the body of Eva Blumberger, 21, was found buried in a trench there.

Willis Oldford testified Bakonyi had photographed the crew working on an artificial ice rink and questioned him about construction.

Raymond Slemko, 23, an electrician, told the court he was cutting through a concrete wall in a trench to connect a conduit when he noticed an odor.

Laborers began digging and the body of Miss Blumberger, Bakonyi's stepsister and cousin, was found wrapped in a blanket.

Crown Counsel Harry Bull said the Crown will show Miss Blumberger, who died from a crushing blow to the head, often visited Bakonyi in his room and that on the day she disappeared she left a note telling him there would be trouble if he did not get some medicine. He said she was referring to a previous conversation in which she told Bakonyi she was pregnant.

The trial continues.

Think Arsenic in Instant Coffee May Have Killed Ottawa Youth

OTTAWA (CP). — Arsenic placed in a jar of instant coffee may have caused the death last week of John Izatt, 18, police say.

Inspector Borden Conley said Monday the possibility of foul play has not been discounted.

The report came as morality division officers opened investigation into another poisoning case. Stafan Kaczor, 35-year-old hospital employee, died Saturday 32 hours after he was stricken with severe stomach pains.

Izatt became ill at work last Wednesday. He died nine hours after being admitted to hospital.

Detectives said Monday that traces of a white powder similar to arsenic were found in the coffee jar which the youth used at his lunch breaks. Sugar and other items from his last lunch have also been examined by police.

Morality Officer Archie Robertson left for Toronto Monday with these articles and specimens from the youth's stomach. Further studies will be made at the criminal laboratory of the provincial police.

Coroner Dr. J. A. Thomson said circumstances of the Izatt death "have become beclouded by the fact that the youth did take some medicine." The medicine had a metallic base, as does arsenic.

In the Kaczor case, Dr. Thompson said, an autopsy has also revealed poison. He did not identify it. Specimens have been sent to Toronto for lab tests.

Kaczor, who came from Poland five years ago with his wife and two small children, was hit by stomach pain Friday and died in Ottawa Civic Hospital the next day.

Railway Firms and Unions Go Through Meet Motions

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiators for Canada's railways and their 110,000 non - operating employees meet across the bargaining table again today, with a country - wide rail strike three months away.

Little or no hope of a settlement is foreseen.

The parties are meeting at the request of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, but there is no indication the discussions will be more than formal compliance with the request.

The railways took the initiative in arranging the meeting but there has been no public indication that they have changed their stand that they cannot afford any wage increase.

At a general meeting of top non-op leaders last month, the union stand was reaffirmed — they will settle for nothing less than the 14-cents - an - hour increase over a two-year contract recommended by a federal conciliation board last fall.

(In a brief Monday at Ottawa the CNR said there is an "urgent and immediate need" to find a workable procedure for settling railway labor disputes.

(The publicly - owned railway made this comment on its final argument to the MacPherson royal commission on transportation.

(". . . All our efforts are overshadowed by the great unsolved problem of finding a fair and workable procedure under which labor and management can live, work and prosper in health and harmony," said the CNR.

(The written argument was the last public stage of the royal commission's nation - wide investigation of railway transport problems.

(For the CNR, CPA, the trucking industry and the provinces, it amounts to their "last word" to the commissioners who are trying to write a report for the federal government by March 31.)

Religious Education Will Continue in North York

TORONTO (CP)—Three hours of heated debate Monday night convinced suburban North York's board of education it should continue its policy of providing religious education in township schools.

The board voted 5 to 2 to maintain its policy of providing courses in religion but allowing parents to exempt their children.

The board rejected 4 to 3 a suggestion to extend to all township schools a pilot scheme operating in five schools under which the board takes the initiative on the advice of its officials in asking parents whether they want religious education for their children. The five schools involved in the pilot school had a predominantly Jewish population.

The Canadian Jewish Congress, the Unitarian Congregation and Fellowship, and the North York branch of the Ethical Education Association presented briefs opposing the courses.

Speaking for the Ethical Education Association, John R. Seeley, professor of sociology at York University, said a return should be made to non-denominational schools "which offer no religious group a pulpit."

Prof. Seeley said children exempted from the courses "feel in many cases confused, hurt and rejected, the very feelings the school has been at such pains to avoid for every child on every other count."

A brief presented by Sydney M. Harris for the Jewish Congress took issue with the claim that those opposing the religious teachings in schools are indifferent to the values of religion.

A brief from the North York Ministerial Association, representing 45 churches, said secularization of the school system would be a retrograde step.

Rev. Donald Collier, secretary of the association, said secularism finds its basis not in a supernatural divine being, but in society itself.

Rural Municipalities Want Powers of OMB Curbed

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities Monday called for removal of the Ontario Municipal Board's power to unite municipalities against the wishes of the voters.

A resolution passed at the association's annual meeting provided for a petition to Queen's Park for an amendment of the Muncipal Board Act.

Under the proposed amendment the board could not order a merger until affirmative votes had been taken in the municipalities concerned.

Reeve D. J. Bucknall of Clinton Township said the people of Africa were being given the opportunity to run their own affairs. "I think the people of Ontaro should have the same consideration."

The convention also passed resolutions in favor of compulsory automobile insurance, 75-per-cent subsidies to municipalities for costs of snow removal and road sanding, and extension of public school grants to schools for retarded children.

The delegates also decided to ask the province to pay grants for road maintenance on crown lands which adjoin municipal highways.

F. L. Weldon, clerk-treasurer of Victoria County, led an attack on the number of returns and reports demanded of municipalities by senior levels of government.

"We can't see that a lot of the questions we are asked fill any useful purpose," he said. The meeting voted to ask provincial and federal authorities to reduce the number of questionnaires municipal officials are required to answer.

Gordon Duffin, assistant superintendent of public school grants for the Ontario department of education, told the meeting grants to public libra-

PLANES CARRY CUFFS

MELBOURNE (Reuters)—All Australian airliners in internal and external routes will carry a club and two pairs of handcuffs as "restrainers" from May 1, the department of civil aviation announced today. Airlines throughout Australia agreed to the suggestion, put forward by the department after violent incidents on Australian aircraft last year.

Five Baboons Lived It up In New Home

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP)—This is a story about the five baboons who came for the weekend and stayed nine days.

Dr. Clarence Manziano, a veterinarian, had Bingo, Bango, Bongo, Mike and Little Sam as house guest.

The monkeyshines in the Manziano household started Feb. 4.

A truck driver brought the baboons into the city by mistake in making a delivery for the Eastern Primate Corporation of North Bergen, N.J. By the time he found out the error, it was too late to return them to the company and he had to find a place to board them.

Manziano took in the baboons with the understanding they would be picked up after the weekend.

The veterinarian didn't know what company owned the animals. And when Monday came and no truck arrived he didn't know what to do.

Bingo, Bango, Bongo, Mike and Little Sam lived it up and endeared themselves to the Manziano children.

Finally, Manziano asked the New York Daily News for help. The paper published a story telling of his plight.

Richard Bertoli, president of Eastern Primate, read it. He had called an express company to have the baboons picked up and had not realized they were still with Manziano, he said.

Bertoli told Manziano he could keep one of the baboons as a pet. The children picked Little Sam.

Monday a truck arrived and carried the other four away.

"I'm sorry to see them go," Manziano said. "After a while you sort of become attached to them, you know."

3 PUBLICATIONS FOR DEPTS. DISCONTINUED

Too Extravagant Frost Tells House

TORONTO (CP)—The provincial government has discontinued three departmental publications on the grounds they were extravagances, Premier Frost told the legislature Monday.

Mr. Frost said the three publications, discontinued Jan. 1, were The Road, published only once by the department of highways, but intended as the first of a series; the semi - annual Our Valley of the department of planning and development; and Sylva, issued bimonthly by the department of lands and forests.

The premier made the announcement after CCF Leader MacDonald asked whether it was the government's function to produce "slick" publications.

Holding up a shiny government brochure reviewing an industrial development conference in Toronto last November, Mr. MacDonald said:

"If ever there was a piece of extravagance, this is it! Why, you could almost comb your hair by using the gloss as a mirror."

SEES TENDENCY

Mr. Frost said there has been a tendency in both government and business "to indulge in what might be regarded as extravagances."

"We live in an age when that is the style of thing to do. . . . Nevertheless, I think you have to start somewhere in calling these things off . . . because I think there is endless waste to it."

The CCF leader replied: "For once I stand four-square with the prime minister."

Mr. MacDonald raised his question during debate on estimates totalling $2,106,000 by the department of travel and publicity.

Kingston Man Cannot Find His Spouse

KINGSTON (CP) — Joseph Frederick Sherboneau, suing Rene Claesson for alienating his wife's affections, told a Supreme Court jury Monday he has searched unsuccessfully for his wife from Montreal to Vancouver.

Sherboneau said his wife Joyce, a native of England he married in 1941, left Kingston with Claesson last July. He said she took the youngest of their three children, 18 - month - old Michael with her.

Mrs. Sylvia Genge, Mrs. Sherboneau's sister, testified her sister had come to her July 19 and said she was leaving town with Claesson. She said they walked to an intersection where Mrs. Sherboneau got into a car driven by a man Mrs. Genge didn't know. She said she did not know Claesson.

Half Warning Sirens Are Ready 'Take Cover' Message Is Taped

OTTAWA (CP) — In case of war, break glass.

Under a pane of glass in a basement room at national defence headquarters is a taped teletype message which warns that attack on this country is imminent.

Under the same glass is another taped message telling Canadians to take cover.

In event of either or both warnings being necessary, the glass would be broken and the appropriate tape fed into a teletype machine.

Over the glass is a sign in red which says that either tape can be used only on the authority of the prime minister of Canada.

On a nearby desk is a red telephone connected with the prime minister's office and home.

This is the essence of Canada's federal warning system. Officials said Monday it is still being developed and should be complete by the end of this year or by mid-1962.

About half of the some 1,000 required warning sirens now are installed across Canada, nearly all of them in major target areas such as the big cities.

By an automatic system, it will be possible to set every siren in Canada blowing by pressing a single button here.

The warning centre—unofficially known as the W.C.—occupies only two small rooms in the murky basement of defence headquarters. It is not especially protected against fire, blast or fallout.

However, there is an alternate warning centre outside Ottawa. The site is secret.

These warning centres, like the ones in the provinces, now are manned around the clock.

The federal centre is also responsible for warning Ottawa and Hull. The sirens can be blown by turning a key. The key is kept beside the lock under a piece of scotch tape.

The federal centre would receive its warning information from the North American Air Defence Command regional headquarters at St. Hubert, Que. It is planned that the army, re-

Katanga Plans $8,000 Reward To Tribesmen

'This Will Mean Blood' Says Lumumba Aide

ELISABETHVILLE (Reuters) The Congo today faced the threat of major bloodshed in an all-out civil war as the United Nations attempted to investigate teh slaying of Patrice Lumumba.

UN headquarters charged Monday night that authorities of secessionist Katanga province so far had refused to help in the investigation of the former premier's death.

Meanwhile, UN troops were placed on the alert for possible violence in the tense aftermath of Monday's announcement that the 35-year-old first premier of The Congo who was removed from office had been "massacred" by Katanga villagers.

The Katanga interior ministry said an $8,000 reward would be paid to the village tribesmen who beat Lumumba and his two compatriots to death.

But an ardent follower of Lumumba declared in Leopoldville, "this will mean blood. This will mean war."

UN officials expressed fears a full-scale civil war might explode between supporters and opponents of Lumumba.

FEAR REPRISALS

At the same time, there was anxiety that Lumumba supporters controlling Oriental and Kivu provinces might take reprisals for their leader's death against whites and anti-Lumumba Africans.

It was recalled that Lumumba adherents in Stanleyville, Oriental's capital, had held a number of Belgians for ransom after he was transferred to Katanga from his place of detention, near Leopoldville last month.

The UN inquiry into Lumumba's death was being conducted in Elisabethville by Ethiopian Gen. Iyassou Mengasha, the UN Congo force's chief of staff. He arrived in the Katanga capital Sunday to inquire into the case.

The breakaway Katanga government announced Monday that Lumumba and two of his aides, former youth minister Maurice Mpolo and ex-Senate vice - president Joseph Mokito, were "massacred" by villagers after escaping from their detention by Katanga authorities.

EXECUTION DENIED

Katanga Interior Minister Godefroid Monongo announced the discovery of the bodies 210 miles north of Elisabethville and said he would reply "prove it" to anyone accusing the Katanga government of assassinating them. He denied Katahga had executed the trio.

A UN statement Monday night said that while the world organization had been trying to organize an inquiry into Lumum-

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Yugoslavia Monday night called on the Security Council to order an "urgent and energetic" investigation to fix the blame for the killing of Patrice Lumumba.

The Yugoslav letter from Foreign Minister Koca Popovic was the first formal proposal put to the council following the announcement by the Katanga province government that the former premier of The Congo and two political associates had been slain by residents of an unnamed Katanga village.

Popovic blamed the killing on Premier Moise Tshombe of Katanga, Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mobutu, the head of the Congolese Army, and Congo President Joseph Kasavubu, whom he called a "clique . . . in the direct service of foreign interventionists, primarily Belgium."

The Yugoslav letter added that UN organs active in The Congo "share a full measure of this responsibility."

DEMANDS DISARM

Echoing demands of the Russians and Lumumba's supporters among African and Asian nations, Popovic also demanded disarming of Tshombe's provincial army and the Congolese troops controlled by Mobutu and Kasavubu, and withdrawal of all Belgian military personnel from The Congo.

No mention was made of pro-Lumumba troops based in Stanleyville and controlled by Antoine Gizenga, pro-Communist vice - premier in Lumumba's government.

UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold had told the council Monday that the announcement of Lumumba's death necessitated "a full and impartial investigatio."

U.S. chief delegate Adlai Stevenson expressed approval of the secretary - general's "continuation of his investigations," begun Friday when Lumumba's escape was reported.

But Valerian Zorin, Soviet deputy foreign minister, expressed lack of confidence in Hammarskjold and said there was "a hypocritical ring in these proposals for a so-called investigation."

The council adjourned until Wednesday so delegations could consult their governments and each other on what to do.

HEARS ATTACK PLAN

Thomas Kanza, representing Gizenga's Stanleyville faction at UN headquarters, was reported to have told 21 delegations he had word of a plan for a three-pronged attack on Stanleyville—from Leopoldville, Kasai and Katanga provinces.

Informed diplomats said representatives of the 21 nations, who included Yugoslavia and 20 from Africa and Asia, called on Hammarskjold and asked him to use the UN force in The Congo "to prevent civil war."

Hammarskjold was reported to have replied that he was doing all he could to prevent a general outbreak.

District Youths Get Six Months For Auto Theft

Two district youths — Carl Moore and Donald Daniels—today were each sentenced to six months in prison when Magistrate T. Y. Wills found them guilty of car theft.

Police said the youths stole a car owned by Eugene Barnum of Belleville and drove it to Barrie, where they were arrested while trying to exchange an outboard motor for gasoline. The youths found the motor in the back of the car.

Mr. Barnum had parked his car on Front Street and left it running while he went into a store to buy cigarets. When he returned his car had vanished.

Council Rescinds Previous Motion On Expenditure

Belleville city council yesterday took a second look at a recommendation of two weeks ago authorizing an expenditure of up to $3,500 to provide services in the Fahey - Harriet Street area for the benefit of a prospective industry.

Following objection by Mayor A. M. Haig, who had not attended the previous meeting, council yesterday voted to rescind the previous motion and a committee will meet with the Industrial Commission with the view of coming up with some alternative.

Following council action two weeks ago at which time it was asserted that some definite policy must be adopted by the city to encourage industry, a letter to the editor from Robert Pringle, Q.C., former city solicitor, appeared in The Ontario Intelligencer pointing out that the action of council had been illegal and that council members voting for the motion would be held personally responsible.

Yesterday the matter was discussed at a caucus meeting before the regular meeting of council.

During the regular meeting Alderman Jack Ireland, who two weeks ago presented the recommendation of the Industrial Committee, moved that the previous recommendation be withdrawn and a committee of council meet with the industrial committee to review the matter.

Special Committee Named To Study College St. Dam

A special committee of city council has been appointed to further investigate the feasibility of going ahead with construction of the proposed College Street man even though a provincial grant of only 50 per cent of the cost can be expected.

Construction of the ice control dam was recommended by the Ontario Department of Planning and Development back in 1948 and since that time the Moira River Conservation Authority has made continued effort to obtain federal aid toward the cost of construction.

Authority officials have given up hope of securing a federal grant for the project and if the dam were proceeded with the cost would be shared equally by the provincial government and the Authority.

Present estimated cost of the dam is in the neighborhood of $400,000.

He said records show there had been a serious flood in Belleville on an average of every 20 years.

Damage to property along the river as result of a flood such as that in 1936 could run as high as $1,202,000 even if a 24-hour warning were given.

Alderman George Wishart, as water advisory board chairman fo rthe Authority, last night told council that the Authority share of the cost would have to be paid by the benifiting municipality which in this case would be Belleville.

However, legislation also provided that a major portion of the Authority cost, can be levied against that section of a municipality which would be benefited by the project.

COMMITTEE NAMED

In the case of the proposed College Street dam the benefiting section of the city would be that area along the river which normally could be expected to be damaged by a flood.

Mayor A. M. Haig named a special committee of Alderman Wishart with Aldermen Ben Cork and Jack Ellis, to interview property owners in the flood threat area to determine whether they would be agreeable to accepting the assessment for the flood control project.

Alderman Wishart covered the main points of a brief on the College Street dam project prepared by the Moira River Conservation Authority, noting that the cost benefit ratio was very favorable, a survey showing that value of benefits would be 3.8 times the cost of the project.

In the opinion of the Authority there are only two ways in which the project could now be carried out. One would be on the basis of a 50 per cent grant with the province paying $220,000 of the estimated $440,000 cost. At least $218,000 of the balance would have to be paid by the city of Belleville.

The other method would be as a winter works project under which the Federal government would subsidize labor costs.

However, winter works might result in overall increased costs and it may not be feasible to carry out winter work under certain flow conditions.

NO DEFINITE PLAN

Today Alderman Wishart said no definite plan had as yet been formulated regarding the best method of putting the matter before property owners in the flood threat area.

However it was suggested that in order to be able to present some kind of a cost estimate to owners and businesses, the assessment of the flood threat area would be ascertained from which worked out a possible millrate over a period of years.

Owners would then be circularized regarding their interest in going ahead with the flood control dam.

Ask Municipal Board Name Hillcrest as 'Water Area'

The Ontario Municipal Board will be asked to approve of the Hillcrest district as a water area, paving the way for installation of at least a partial water service in this water short area of the city.

Plan would be to construct a watermain from Cannifton Road along Byron Street to the Hillcrest public school at an estimated cost of $16,000.

"We realize this would not entirely solve the problem but it would alleviate the situation to some extent" noted Deputy Mayor Robert Temple.

Application will be made to the OMB for approval of the scheme which would permit costs being assessed on all property within the defined area.

Last night a delegation of Hillcrest residents attended council to press their demand for water services.

Early in 1959 residents of the Hillcrest area petitioned council for water service but, in view of the high cost estimate for mains, council tabled the matter pending a report from the planning board with respect to re-development of the area.

In 1959 the Belleville Utilities Commission estimated the cost of watermains for the Hillcrest area would be $71,574 plus the cost of meters and running lines from the street line to dwellings.

In ill health for the past three months, Walter Henry Abrams, R. R. 2, Halloway, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday evening. He was born 56 years ago in Trenton and has resided in the district for the past 50 years, where he was widely known and highly respected.

Mr. Abrams was a member of Sidney Baptist Church and is survived by his wife, the former Jessie Donald, one daughter, Irene, and two sons, Gordon and William, all at home, also two brothers, Russell Rupert of Stirling and Norman Banfield of Trenton.

No Move Afoot To Discontinue Outside Market

Contrary to rumor being heard among district farmers, there is no move afoot to discontinue the farmers' market on the local market square.

Assurance to this effect was given last evening at city council after Alderman Jack Ireland said he had been questioned by farmers hearing rumors that the outside market was to be closed.

Alderman Jack Deacon said the space used by the inside market would shortly be taken over by the city to provide additional office accommodation.

However, he said he knew of no move to discontinue the outside market.

Although plans were for the city to take over the entire first floor of the city hall for renovation into office space, members of the Opportunity Shop committee are requesting that they be permitted to retain the space now being occupied by the shop.

The request was read in council and turned over to City Manager J. R. Reynolds.

Today Mr. Reynolds said the renovation plans were still being considered and every effort would be made to allow the Opportunity Shop to retain space at city hall.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to relatives, friends and neighbors, for the lovely floral tributes, cards and messages of sympathy and kindness in the loss of a husband and father. Thanks also to Drs. Donald Scott, Hartt, MacDonald, nurses of 2nd East, B.R.C. of A. Lodge 617. A special thanks to Dr. Harold Williamson, Rev. E. Smith and the staff of John R. Bush Funeral Home.

—Mrs. G. Rowbotham and family.

Motion Is Soundly Beaten In Session

City council yesterday turned down a public works committee recommendation which would have seen building and plumbing permits issued on only one day a week.

Public Works Committee chairman Ald. Jack Ellis told council issuing of permits on one day per week would give city officials time to consider all applications. He maintained the change from the present practice would not hold up applicants.

"You don't decide overnight to build a house," he said.

But other council members were strongly opposed, with Aldermen Ben Corke, Robert Temple, Don Whalen and Lorne McDougall voicing their objections.

To the objection by aldermen was added the clincher by Mayor A. M. Haig, who said he was opposed in principle.

"There is too much tendency on the part of public servants to make things as difficult as possible," he said. "And that is what we are doing here."

The public works committee recommendation was soundly defeated.

Budget Will Soon Be Ready For Discussion

Budget discussions by the city council finance committee are expected to get underway at city hall within the next week or so.

Last night at council, City Manager J. R. Reynolds said he had received all but one of the 1961 departmental estimates and expected the budget would be ready for committee scrutiny in the very near future.

When all estimates are in the finance committee under its chairman Alderman William Jarvah will carefully study the proposed budget with the view of cutting figures wherever at all possilbe. After study and possible revision in the committee stage the budget will then go before open council for discussion and final approval.

The big question at this moment seems to be whether in view of rising costs the city fathers can hope to hold the 1960 tax line.

Ayrshire Club Names Officers For Coming Year

The Central Ontario Ayrshire Breeders' Club were guests at the Ontario School for the Deaf, last Saturday, where the annual meeting was held.

In the morning the members viewed the Ayrshire herd which is being kept at the school and heard farm manager Garnet Reid discuss the breeding program. Due to the recent fire the herd is now kept in loose housing in the machine shed which is making an excellent loose housing barn.

Guest speaker for the afternoon was Agricultural Representative Sidney MacDonald, Stirling, who spoke on Farm Management and in particular the management and producing of quality hays and pastures and how these can lower the overall cost of producing milk.

Another guest was Clarence Mann of Peterborough, who brought "greetings" from the parent association. The president, Robert Wood, Halloway, in his remarks commented on the year's activities, mentioning how successful the Red and White Show was this past year at the Belleville Fair in that they had many more exhibits and entries than previously. The executive for the coming year is as follows:

President; Robert Wood, Halloway; vice-president, Gladwin Clemens, Bath, and secretary-treasurer, Archie McCook, Campbellford.

Women's Spiel Gets Under Way At Curling Club

The women's section of the Quinte Curling Club have set the wheels in motion for what they think will be the best Women's Open Bonspiel ever attempted. The clubhouse has been artistically decorated with pennants bearing the names of the towns and cities which will take part; the kitchen has been filled with delicious refreshments and the lounge room contains many potted 'mums to add beauty to the occasion.

The spiel opened on Monday evening with two draws, with the official opening set for this morning. The spiel committee arranged a splendid opening for the playing for The Ontario Intelligencer trophy and accompanying plaques. The curlers taking part, headed by a piper, marched around the rink and then Ald Ben Corke, representing the city, threw the first stone with Harry Fuke holding the broom. Incidentally, Mr. Corke was dead on and made a perfect draw. He conveyed the greetings of the "Friendly City" and the 'spiel was officially under way.

Mrs. Anne Acton is general chairman of the 'spiel committee with helpers Mrs. Mary Mott and Mrs. Lenore Bateman. The refreshment committee is headed by Mrs. Vera Slade, while Mrs. Heather White provided the decorative pennants. Mrs. Jessie White, women's president, welcomed the curlers.

In the Monday night draw some upsets were recorded. Mrs. Ena Corke had her opponent down 9-0 at the end of the third but Mrs. Olive Keith and her rink from the RCAF got the "feel" of the ice, scored a big five and from there went on to win 13-9. Mrs. Mary Mott had a close squeak, edging out a Trenton rink, skipped by Mrs. Doreen Jones 8-7. A better display of sweeping by the losing rink on the last stone probably lost a tie for Trenton. Mrs. Marge Gibbon squeezed past Mrs. Joan Ethier, while Mrs. Anne Acton won easily over another Trenton rink.

In the evening draw three Quinte rinks were in play and two came down in front. Mrs. Mildred Stanton skipped her rink to a nice win over an RCAF foursome, while Mrs. Connie Wilkinson's rink had little trouble winning over another RCAF rink, this score being the biggest of the draw. Mrs. Dorothy Fetter of Trenton, held a 2-1 edge over a Quinte rink skipped by Mrs. Dorothy Creeggan.

Nicholson College Delegation Requests $25,000 Grant

A grant request for $25,000 to help defray capital construction costs of the Nicholson Catholic College, was heard by Belleville city council yesterday.

Spokesman for the four-man delegation appearing before council, local barrister Ben Hurley noted that the College with furnishings had cost approximately $400,000 of which about $150,000 was still owing.

He said the College received no municipal taxes and as a private school neither did it receive any grants from the provincial government.

Nicholson College has 110 students enrolled in Grades 11-12-13, and thus was relieving public high school accommodation toward which Separate School supporters were required to pay. Mr. Hurley said Catholic taxpayers in the city had paid about $52,000 toward public high schools.

On the basis of what Nicholson College was saving in public high school costs, Mr. Hurley said his delegation considered that a grant of $50,000 would be fair. However, in view of budgetary problems and the difficulties in arranging such a grant an amount of $25,000 was being asked, this to be spread over a five-year period.

Delegation members attending council included Mr. Hurley, Richard Barrett, Carl Casey and Kenneth Soden.

Mayor A. M. Haig told the delegation that their request would be given consideration by council.

Youth Remanded In Entry Cases

Robert Bennett, 17, of Belleville, today was remanded in custody for reappearance in magistrate's court Thursday on two charges of breaking and entering with intent and one of breaking and entering and theft.

He was arraigned last Friday on the charge of breaking and entering and theft, and was remanded until today to try to raise bail of $2,000 cash or $3,000 property.

Bennett today asked Magistrate T. Y. Wills to consider reducing the bail. The magistrate said he was prepared to listen to Bennett's counter bid if he had one, but the youth said he could not think of one. The bail remained unchanged.

Russia Refuses To Recognize Hammarskjold

LONDON (Reuters)—Russia said today it would no longer recognize Dag Hammarskjold as secretary-general of the United Nations.

A government statement, reported by the Soviet news agency Tass, demanded an end to the UN operation in The Congo within a month.

Tells Story Of Missions

Mrs. Marion Parkinson, missionary on furlough from Trinidad, B.W.I., was speaker at a special missionary meeting held in Calvary Temple last Friday night. The story of her call to the mission field was told humbly and dispassionately, but long before its conclusion there was scarcely a dry eye in the congregation, for it was a story of dedication and determination to follow the call of God in the face of stark tragedy, heartbreak and suffering.

On a fateful night in 1942, Mr. and Mrs. Parkinson had retired in their cabin aboard the Lady Hawkins, when two torpedoes struck. Losing their way in the darkness and confusion of the sinking ship they reached their boat station too late. The lifeboat had gone.

After a brief prayer and parting embrace, Mr. Parkinson persuaded his wife to jump overboard and try to reach the lifeboat. That was the last Mrs. Parkinson saw of her husband. She claims that only a miracle of God enabled her to reach the lifeboat. It seemed that a guiding hand was helping her through the water and finally under the very oars of the lifeboat.

This lifeboat was the only one to escape the submarine and was already overcrowded with soldiers, sailors and airmen, one other woman and a child. There followed five days and nights of hopeless drifting, storm and near despair. Rations were one ounce of water, a spoonful of condensed milk and a biscuit, twice a day. Several people died and were committed to the sea. Mrs. Parkinson had only a sailor's oilskin coat over her night attire. Her feet and legs were injured and becoming infected; she did not realize how badly, because the lifeboat was so crowded she could not see her feet.

Then on the fifth night, while Mrs. Parkinson was praying, a sailor thought he saw a shadow in the darknes. Flares were sent up, there was an answering signal and soon they were safe on board a Swedish vessel bound for Puerto Rico.

In the hospital ashore Mrs. Parkinson was given her choice of returning to Canada or of continuing her journey to the mission station in Trinidad. Still convinced that she was in the will of God, she determined to go on.

For the past nineteen years Mrs. Parkinson has labored faithfully amongst the natives of the West Indies. When she arrived in Trinidad there were five Pentecostal churches and a few hundred Sunday School pupils. Now there are sixty-six churches, one of them a memorial to her husband, thousands of converts and many native pastors and teachers. At present Mrs. Parkinson is a teacher in the Theological College in Port of Spain, Trinidad.

The missionary showed a number of slides depicting the various churches, the Bible college and many beauty spots on the islands of the West Indies. The Rev. Laurie Price was in charge of the service. Dr. Price paid high tribute to Mrs. Parkinson's heroism and devotion to duty in the work of God. He challenged the young people of the church to greater consecration and faithfulness in whatever work God was leading them to do.

Wants Money For New Roof On School

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Board of Education, maintenance chairman Paul Tripp asked that between $10,000 and $12,000 be considered in this year's budget in order that a new roof may be built on Queen Elizabeth school.

Mr. Tripp said that the present roof leaked in several places and that this was leading to loose plaster which might fall and hurt the children. It might also cause dry rot and damage to the electrical services running under the roof.

The insulation between the roof and the ceiling is becoming damp, resulting in the freezing and cracking of the roof. For the past two years, every effort has been made to repair the roof, but to no avail. The contractor responsible for the construction of the roof claims that it was installed at the wrong time of year and disclaims any responsibility.

"This is the end of the road," said Mr. Tripp. "We could spend money on litigation with the constructor, but I think we would lose. We must replace the roof."

John Connie, supervisor of buildings, suggested that several opinions about the type of roof to be built should be obtained.

Board members voted to make $10,000 available in this year's budget for a new roof.

A motion by Mr. Tripp that the services of a management consultant be engaged to make a survey of the present teaching, maintenance and secretarial staff requirements, salary scales, etc., was defeated, 5-4.

J. C. Dobby said it was his experience that it took an organization at least two years to recover from the suggested improvements of such consultants.

Mr. Tripp and Mr. Ketcheson felt that the board was in need of professional advice about salaries.

AN IMPOSITION

The town's elementary school teachers have expressed themselves in no uncertain terms about the chore of making out insurance applications and collecting money from the school children at the beginning of each year. A local accident insurance agent has prevailed upon the teachers to do this clerical work for him for the past few years. Teachers and some board members feel that this is an imposition.

Paul Tripp and Flt. Lt. Robertson, RCAF representative to the board, felt that since the agent may not conduct his business in the school, many children would not be insured against accidents unless the matter is handled at schools.

Board members voted to notify the various Home and School Associations that the work would no longer be the responsibility of the teachers, hoping that association members would take it on, and also to notify the agent of the board's decision.

The same insurance agent has made an offer to the board to arrange for an appraisal of the board's insurance on buildings, furnishings, etc., at "no obligation or cost" to the board. The board voted to accept this offer. It was felt that "something for nothing" was an excellent idea.

The teachers in the elementary schools are concerned about the number of children who take lunches, thus adding noon hour supervision to the teachers' duties. However, as one board member put it, "there are too many intangibles involved to make hard and fast rules about the matter." One board member refused to give an opinion, as he said his daughter took her lunch.

The board voted to ask high school principal W. J. Houston to remain in his present position for the 1961-62 term if satisfactory salary adjustments can be made.

Suggests Four New Classrooms Are Needed

TRENTON — In his report to the Board of Education last night, V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of public schools, suggested that four additional rooms be built at Queen Elizabeth School for occupancy in September, 1962.

In this way, the board would be saved the additional expense of erecting another public school north of the CNR tracks in the north Byron St. area. The school population could be divided between Queen Elizabeth and College Street schools. If a new school were erected, there would be additional staff and additional maintenance men required.

Next September, many of the grade 1 and grade 2 students, who would ordinarily attend Prince Charles School south of Highway 2, will be sent to Dufferin School.

Mr. Carswell suggested that an opportunity class be opened at College Street School. The classes at North Trenton and Queen Elizabeth schools have filled a long-felt want.

T. S. Ketcheson said he felt there should be closer co-operation between the board and the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board. He said he considered it a "must" that a member of the school board sit on the planning board, but that he had requested this two years ago and the planning board had taken no action.

Paul Tripp asked if the board members thought the town councillors were aware of the needed rate of school expansion for the next few years. He said that should annexation of parts of Murray and Sidney townships take place, the school board would be faced with additional problems.

Board members passed a resolution to have the secretary write council and point out need for close co-operation between the planning board and the school board.

Break-in Under Investigation By Police

TRENTON — Police Inspector R. J. Rutherford said today that he is investigating a break-in at the Community Gardens.

He said looters forced their way into the building through a window on the west side over the weekend. They forced the door to the canteen and ransacked the room.

As far as can be determined, they took only a quantity of cigarets. The door to the manager's office was also forced and the room ransacked.

The inspector said that the thieves were evidently after money but had been unsuccessful in their quest.

Drama Group Will Present 'No Exit'

TRENTON — Members of the Board of Education spent some time last night discussing the controversial subject of "hell".

The subject of the nether regions was introduced when Secretary V. P. Carswell read a letter from the Trenton Drama Group, asking that it be granted permission to present the play "No Exit" to an invited audience in the high school auditorium. The group said that since no admission would be charged, it would be appreciated if the board charged little or no rent for the hall.

Some members of the board felt that $9 for the first hour and $7 for each hour thereafter, should be charged.

The letter also explained that the play was "sophisticated" and that the public would not be invited.

Board member Gerald Farrar said that he thought permission for the presentation of the play should not be granted if it was an immoral play.

J. C. Dobby said that the play was along adult educational lines and that he felt the drama group should be encouraged.

Further complications were unveiled when the board discovered that it would have to pay the school janitor time and a half to open and close the school.

The board finally voted to allow the drama group to rent the auditorium. The play will be presented March 4, before an invited audience.

Bridge Has Delayed Town's Fire Trucks

TRENTON — Fire Lieut. Gordon Coughlin said today that while many people think a fire truck has never been stopped at the town bridge, delaying firefighting operations on the east side of the river, this was not true.

He said that once, when Harry Filion was fire chief, he and the chief had been forced to wait in the fire truck for seven minutes while the bridge was swung.

Lieut. Coughlin said that a radio message was sent to police officers in a cruiser on the east side and that the officers had proceeded to the scene of the fire and carried on firefighting operations until he and Chief Filion arrived.

Trenton's present fire chief, Cecil Ellis, has asked that a fire hall be erected on the east side of the river.

Councillor Ross Burtt, chairman of council's protection to persons and property committee, will present plans for such a building to town council when the budget is brought down in the spring.

The fire chief said that should the bridge be swung, a fire truck would have to go by way of Highway 401, delaying firefighting operations several minutes. The chief said that the first five minutes of firefighting quite often "tell the tale" and that there could be serious property damage or loss of life incurred if operations were delayed.

The RCAF firefighting equipment has always been available in emergencies but there might come a time, said the chief, when the equipment was engaged in fighting a fire at the airport and could not answer Trenton's call.

RCAF Women's Rink Wins Open Spiel

TRENTON — Over the weekend, the women's division of the Trenton curling club played host to 24 rinks from the Quinte district at the annual women's open invitation bonspiel.

Winner of the Steenburg Construction Company trophy was an RCAF rink skipped by Mary Croxton, with Gwen Bayliss as lead, Ruth Collins, second, and Bobbie Reid, third. Other winning rinks included: Gananoque: Jean Donnelly, Shirley Salter, Milly Benstead, Marion Haskell; RCAF Trenton: Mildred Bowdery, Esther Spruston, Shirley Smith, Fran Barber; Belleville: Jean Smith, Kae Pinder, Helen McCorquodale, Agnes Walker; Belleville: Ena Clark, Audrey Gowsell, Jean Maher, Doris Huston; Trenton Country Club: Dorothy Fetter, Doreen Gilchrist, Pearl Carr, Eleanor Haggarty; Trenton: Laura Lee, Ruth Steevie, Betty Shier, Molly Barlow; Trenton: Doreen Jones, Mary Burnet, Ann Owens, Elly Barber; Trenton: Beth Dunfield, Nora MacDonnell, Mary Kay McAuley and Peggy Burgess.

Mrs. Howard Aziz was the chairman of the draw committee.

On Saturday night, participants in the bonspiel were entertained by the Trenton club at a banquet and a social hour.

Question Men

TRENTON — At 4.15 a.m. on Monday a police constable on cruiser patrol stopped a car and questioned the driver and his passenger.

The men, aged 23 and 24, who gave their home address as London, were in possession of an unregistered automatic revolver.

They are being held in custody for questioning by Chief Constable F. J. Taylor and Inspector R. J. Rutherford.

A Family Compact

There is a social custom which affects to quite some degree the stability and well-being of the basic social unit of our North American society, the family. A virtual kaleidoscope of activity allows the members of a family, if they are not beware, to spread their activities too thin. Through an excess of participation in community activity which takes one outside the family circle, (worthwhile though it originally might appear to be), there inevitably must arise a compromise between the individual's family and social commitments.

Whether these commitments might be gathering at the local club for a game of darts or working on some worthwhile project for the good of the community, if one becomes too involved in or concerned with too many of these out-of-family activities his family circle must inevitably suffer. It can affect any family in any social strata. This is only too evident if one reviews the cases which have come up in the juvenile and family courts across the continent. It used to be thought that the drunken father was the greatest menace to the healthy life of a family unit. Now, however, there is the spectre of the mother who only sees her children between meetings of the various community groups to which she belongs. There is also the image of the father whose leisure time is taken up by the meetings of clubs and civic organizations.

These are the people affected by this new social over-activity resulting in the neglect of the family unit. In many cases the members of the family may be very well provided for with the physical comforts of life and outwardly there is the physical aspect of a well-cared-for family unit. Inside, however, there may well be a different picture.

It may be a picture such as was revealed in a juvenile courtroom in Detroit where a man accredited as the civic leader of his community, a woman considered to be the leader of local society, and a boy, their son, appeared. The boy was in court on some 37 charges of breaking and entry. The most shocking part of the picture as it was revealed was that the boy was the only honest member of the family. He readily admitted his acts, which had not involved theft.

His parents, however, refused to admit them and would not even accept their son's admission of guilt. The father threatened a shake-up of the police force and suggested that the entire incident was a frame-up planned by his political opponents. The mother insisted, in a state bordering on hysteria, that the whole thing was planned to discredit her socially Neither appeared to be too interested in the fact that their son was faced with a very real problem.

A closely knit and happy family unit cannot be achieved through too much outside activity. Not that some activity outside of the family is not a good thing, but it should never be allowed to interfere with the first responsibility of any member of a family. That is one's duty to the other members of the family; to see that not only are they provided for physically, but spiritually and mentally as well. We cannot hope for better things for mankind and for peace in this world of ours if there is not love, co-operation and understanding at the family level.

We have often observed that it is not the wealthy or socially prominent family which is the happiest group of individuals. The happiest life for the individual appears to exist within the closely-knit family, which accepts the duties and responsibilities each member owes the others, regardless of the family's economic condition or social position.

They Are Helping Themselves

The population of Elliot Lake has dropped from 25,000 in 1959 to 15,000 today.

This may be bad news for Elliot Lake—but it is good news for the country.

It is striking proof, if any were needed, that most Canadians are prepared to help themselves. Two out of every five residents of Elliot Lake have declined to "sit tight" and try and wait out the inevitable period of recession there and have, instead, pulled up stakes and sought greener pastures. This is pleasing proof of the mobility of the labor force—or at least of that portion of it which had built Elliot Lake from a clearing in the bush into a modern community.

There ought to be added, of course, that the fact 15,000 still remain in Elliot Lake does not mean that they have sat down and folded their hands, instead of getting about the business of helping themselves. There was no call for a general exodus, because some of the mines are still operating. If and when the time comes when further cutbacks are forced, we expect to read that more of Elliot Lake's people have gone out to build a future for themselves elsewhere.

Letters To The Editor

No Charge for Blood, Just Service Charge

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Re: Blood Donor Service

Before replying to the points raised in the letter to the editor of your newspaper re "Payments for Donors," I would like to thank The Ontario Intelligencer for the port, both editorially and otherwise, which you have given our service. The clinic held on February 6th, was the most successful one to date and we are certain that its success was in no small measure due to the appeal for donors in your newspaper.

It is true that it takes from 45 minutes to an hour to be processed at our blood donor clinics; however the 351 people who attended our last clinic, and the persons who donated the 555,000 bottles of blood throughout Canada in the year 1960, apparently did not feel that they were wasting their time.

Blood cannot be manufactured artificially, and these donors were not only making it possible to prolong a life, or save a life, but were making it possible that blood would be available if and when they or their families required it.

I believe that Mr. Lodur is in error with respect to the charges made by the hospital as mentioned in his letter. There is absolutely no charge for blood at hospitals in Ontario since 1960. The hospitals, however, under an agreement with our Red Cross Blood Donor Service, are allowed to charge the patient a service charge for the actual transfusion. In the Belleville General Hospital the charge is $5.00 per bottle but it is paid by the Ontario Hospital Service Commission for approximately 94% of all the citizens of the province who are covered by this insurance plan.

We are pleased to report that several of the doctors, nurses and staff of the Belleville General Hospital are regular donors at our clinics held at the Kiwanis Centre.

Under the old method of securing blood, the patient either had to pay up to $25 per bottle for the blood or have it replaced on a two-for-one basis. Due to the efforts of Red Cross during recent years this has been completely done away with in Ontario and neither the rich nor the poor have to pay for the blood they receive, as it is all generously and gratuitously donated by countless thousands of citizens throughout Canada.

I thank you for the opportunity of replying publicly to Mr. Lodur's letter.

ARCHIE S. LEWIS,
Chairman,
Blood Donor Service,
Belleville Branch,
The Canadian Red Cross Society.

Piano Student Supports Critic

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Having read with great interest Mr. Lang's criticism of Madame Henroit-Schweitzer's recital and the letter to your paper submitted by Mr. Frank J. Leach, may I presume to make one or two comments? I say "presume" because I am only a student in grade ten piano of the Royal Conservatory of Toronto.

Of course, I enjoyed Madame Henroit - Schweitzer's program and I certainly applauded her numbers. However, my pleasure and applause did not mean that I considered everything she played as being "right out of this world." In fact I find myself agreeing to a great extent with Mr. Lang, not because he is so very erudite (I'm not altogether certain what that means) but because he just happens to agree with so many of my feelings about the program. Mr. Lang was not a minority of one — counting me the minority becomes two.

Pushing Baby Buggy On Sidewalks Hard

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Last week while assisting my daughter from Front Street to Dufferin with the children, I was amazed at the condition of Victoria Avenue. How a woman is expected to manage pushing a carriage along the sidewalk is beyond me.

My daughter had a carriage, I, a stroller. At times I didn't know whether to just sit down and give up or climb in with the child and hope for some kind person to come along and push me. We did try the road for a while but the traffic was too much to cope with.

With so many men unemployed I don't know why the city council doesn't give the order to have a crew clean up the sidewalks. They (the council) are probably so busy driving around in their cars they don't know just what it's like trying to push a carriage, let alone walking.

Pilot Officer Henry F. Davis has returned to Trenton after spending a few days in Ottawa the guest of his mother, Mrs. M. P. Davis.

Mrs. Blake Totton of Toronto, is visiting with her daughter Mrs. Gerald Bristol of Boswell Street.

Mr. G. M. Phelps of Wilkie, Sask., is visiting his sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Bell of Isobel Street.

30 YEARS AGO

February 14th, 1931.

The members of the A. Y. P. A. of St. Thomas' Parish entertained the members of the same society of Christ Church at an enjoyable social gathering in the Parish House. Archdeacon Lyons made a short address and expressed regret at the absence of Rural Dean Clarke, Rector of Christ Church owing to illness.

Mayor George A. Reid is spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. Percy McGuire of Stirling has accepted a position with the Belleville office of the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, and will take up residence in this city.

Mr. Allan Dempsey of Ameliasburg township, a graduate of the O. A. C. Guelph, has been appointed a director of the Canadian Chanticleer Breeders' Association.

40 YEARS AGO

February 14th, 1921.

This is St. Valentine's Day and many citizens have received loving messages, while messages received by others were not so loving or complimentary.

At the meeting of the members of the St. Julian Chapter I. O. D. E., which was held at the home of Mrs. R. A. Bakus on Bridge St. West, the following officers were elected: Hon. Regent, Mrs. MacColl; Regent, Mrs. Mae Chown; First Vice-regent, Mrs. Gussie Bakus: Second Vice-regent, Mrs. Emily Neate; Secretary, Luaga Forester; Treasurer, Verna Coleman; Standard Bearer, Cecila Docter. The Chapter made donations to the Old Folks Home at Christmas of a stocking full of good things for each inmate; and cash to the Belleville High School Memorial; and to the G. W. V. A. Christmas Tree. A box was also packed for the Navy League.

50 YEARS AGO

February 14h, 1911.

The new Parish House in connection with Christ Church was formally opened last night and a large gathering of parishioners and friends was present. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, presided and the principal speakers were His Lordship, Bishop Sweeney of Toronto, and Archdeacon Carey of Kingston. Congratulations from other Belleville churches were presented by the Rev. A. H. Drumm of John Street Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Dr. Bishop of Bridge Street Methodist Church, and the Rev. C. G. Smith of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Mayor Harry Ackerman was present and extended his congratulations and good wishes to the parish. Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Anna Ponton and Mr. Harry McKay, and a piano selection by Mr. Roblin.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

REINFORCEMNT OF HIGHER POWER

We are told in the twenty-seventh chapter of the Book of Acts that St. Paul experienced shipwreck on the island of Melita (present day Malta). The people of the island kindled a fire for them and as Paul was gathering "a bundle of sticks" and laying them on the fire, "there came a viper out of the heat, and fastened on his hand." Paul "shook off the beast into the fire and felt no harm."

There is a lesson here which we may well ponder. There is the viper type of person in every society — the person whose words sting like the viper's fangs, whose jealousy is devastating, whose influence is often cast maliciously on the side of meanness. The natives of Melita looked on Paul after the viper had sunk its fangs into his flesh, expecting "he should have swollen, or fallen down dead suddenly." But of course he did not. This was a miracle, but a miracle at least partly explainable. Paul had powers within him which kept the venom of the viper from doing him harm. And these powers, of course, were spiritual powers.

When the fangs of the scandal monger are thrust into us, when people who hate us openly show their hatred, we may with confidence cast such creatures from us knowing that if we have within us powers which God alone can give us, the fangs of the viper will do us no harm.

In the great crises of life only the reinforcement of God's powers can sustain us.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

Several things impress me deeply about the Westerns we see on TV, but none more than the behavior of the horses during the shooting. Any horses I have known usually went berserk at such sounds as gunshots, firecrackers or backfires. I have been on a horse that jumped ten feet sideways when a plank was dropped in our vicinity.

But in Westerns, the cowboys fire their six shooters right beside the ear of their galloping cayuse. They let go ten shots out of a six-shooter practically under the nose of their steed. And the horses never so much as twitch their ears. It is uncanny.

On discussing this with people who know about horses, I have been told that these cow ponies can be trained to almost anything. They become practically human. Besides, people point out to me the police horses which are also beautifully trained to keep calm amid the tumult and racket of downtown traffic.

However, the problem was solved for me yesterday when a young man who has worked in Hollywood informed me that in the Westerns, the six shooters don't go bang at all. They make no noise whatever. They are rigged with some sort of capsule that emits a puff of what appears to be smoke. Then when the film is being edited, the sound effects are dubbed-in, especially the bangs. This explains everything.

Wrong Names Are Common Even Today

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Apropos of my recent column on misattributed quotes (such as Mark Twain's on the weather), I was reminded by one of my bridge partners that even in our own lifetime the wrong names get attached to things.

One of the most popular plays in modern bridge, for instance, is the "Stayman convention" for bidding no-trump, which most of the experts use. Even as a non-expert I recommend it highly to all players.

Yet Sam Stayman, by his own admission, neither invented nor named this convention. It was originally devised by George Rapee, and Stayman added a few refinements to it.

More widely known is the so-called "Goren count" for adding up possible tricks. "Do you play Goren?" we ask a new partner but the point-count system was really invented by Milton C. Work a generation ago and used by experts for many years before Goren popularized it. It is scarcely a coincidence that Goren was one of Work's assistants several decades ago.

(And, for bridge specialists, be it noted that the double of a slam, calling for an "unusual lead" is named after one man in Great Britain and after another in the United States.)

Nobody knows how some names became attached to certain objects. Amerigo Vespucci, a naval astronomer of Florence, did not discover the New World, but the name "America" does him undeserved honor.

Likewise, Cleopatra's Needles were not erected by Cleopatra, or in honor of that queen, but by Thothmes III. Arabic figures were not invented by the Arabs, but by the Indians. Pompey's Pillar, in Alexandria, was erected neither by nor to Pompey, but was set up by the Emperor Diocletian.

Brazilian grass does not come from Brazil, nor is it a grass at all. Catgut is not the guts of cats. Dutch clocks are not Dutch. Gothic architecture was not employed by the Goths. Jerusalem artichoke has no connection with Jerusalem. Kid gloves are not kid at all.

Everybody knows, of course, that Irish stew is unknown in Ireland, that chop suey was imported from America to China, and Turkish baths are not of Turkish origin, nor are they baths at all.

Corruptions of language, borrowings from foreign tongues, sheer ignorance — all these conspire to mislabel hundreds of objects in the world. Little wonder that in the Hebrew Bible the name of the Infinite God is forbidden to be written or spoken in full.

Year of Big Smoke

Detroit Free Press

Despite repeated alarms about the consequence of smoking cigarets, more of them were smoked in 1960 than ever before. The estimated figure is 489,000,000,000, an increase of 21,500,000,000 above the 1959 consumption. Our conclusion is that there is either an abounding faith in filters or an utter distrust of laboratory mice.

Thinning of Bony Portion Of Bones Not Alarming

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Can you tell me something about osteoporosis?—Mrs. C.M.C."

This is but one of many letters on the subject. I picked the shortest. Since some letters have expressed great alarm, I trust we can allay that to a considerable extent.

Osteoporosis is — well, let's start another way. We think of our bones as being hard and inert. This is far from true. Bones, like any other part of the body, can undergo changes.

We likewise think of bones as being "made of calcium." They contain calcium, but they also contain an inner substance made up of protein, and between that and the hard outer surface is fat or marrow.

Healthy bones depend on many factors, the chief ones being good nutrition, use of the bones (exercise), and certain glandular factors.

Osteoporosis is a thinning of the hard, "bony part of the bone." Several causes may be responsible. One is disuse. Prolonged bed rest, or being in a cast for a long time, can cause this thinning or softening.

Malnutrition can do the same thing. So can lack of Vitamin C (in this case it is called scurvy) or an excessive intake of Vitamins A and D.

Lack of hormones from the ovaries is a quite common cause in women after menopause. Usually such cases take about ten years to develop.

Symptoms of osteoporosis include such things as back pain or back ache at night, a tendency toward poor posture and stooping or round - shouldered appearance; tenderness in the bones; and, of course, bones breaking under certain circumstances which should cause only relatively slight injury.

Such fractures are, in fact, the most serious consequence of osteoporosis. To put at rest some fears that have been expressed, osteoporosis is not cancerous in nature.

Indeed, since the condition can vary from very mild to rather severe, I most certainly would urge sufferers not to worry needlessly. In a severe case, your doctor will warn you to be careful of bumps, falls, undue strain on bones, etc. In the many mild cases it is neccessary to strengthen the bones, and to not worry about things.

Treatment consists essentially of replacement of hormones in the system, a diet rich in Vitamin C (citrus fruit and juices, and Vitamin C tablets if required), and exercise.

This needn't be strenuous calisthenics. Walking is an excellent form of exercise for this trouble. Simple pain-killers such as aspirin will help the aches. Osteoporosis doesn't come on suddenly, and by the same token improvement is slow. Dont' expect rapid correction. Rely on slow but persistent treatment as outlined above.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What is sodium benzoate and is it harmful? I've seen it marked on labels of some foods and juices I buy. I saw in a paper where someone had 'sodium poisoning.'—Mrs. H.W."

Sodium benzoate is a preservative, and is not harmful. Only traces of it are used in foods, anyway. As to 'sodium poisoning," put it out of your mind. Common table salt is sodium chloride, baking soda is sodium bicarbonate, and so on. Sodium is a very common substance in nature.

Let Sleeping Laymen Lie

Fort William Times-Journal

The high box-pews which were a feature of many English churches from the 17th century to quite late in the last century provided very convenient cover for those who liked to take a quiet nap during the sermon. But in a number of churches a "waker-up" used to keep watch on the congregation from a vantage point and would sidle along the aisle and wake any furtive sleeper by tapping him on the shoulder with his long cane of office.

In a recent BBC talk, George Evans recounted a story he had heard while touring churches in the Stowmarket area of Britain's east coast county of Suffolk. In one church a waker-up had once noticed a man with his chin sunk on his chest oblivious of the preacher's improving discourse. He leaned over and tapped the sleeper. The result was startling. The man was a porter at the nearby station, and as soon as he felt the touch on his shoulder he shot to his feet like a rocket and bawled at the top of his voice: "Haughley! Haughley!" and then proceeded to rattle off the names of all the stations to Norwich.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

OUR INDIVIDUAL SEPARATENESS

We are ruled and governed largely by the mass — crowds, collected thought, public opinion.

And yet it is almost soley through our individual separateness of thought and action that we rise and go forward.

We can agree and the crowd will let us keep step with it — its approvals touching ours. But if we would clothe a new idea or desire to express something of our true and honest feeling, it is often necessary for us to take a separate path, sometimes a very rough and untrodden one.

And in the end, this here-and-now existence may mean a cross to bear — but even that will not matter so much, for he who aspires to greatness never figures out the cost in advance.

It isn't pleasant to walk the lonely road, to feel an individual separateness, but it has compensations that loom like mountain peaks crowned with their whitened snows.

Take the picture of the fall of leaves this past Autumn. Each leaf finally fell alone, separate and distinct as a factor in nature, though only after an association of months together with an entire tree of leaves beautified by summer rains and sun.

You picked up one of those fallen treasures with its gorgeous colorings. You stooped for another — and another. And no two could you find that were exactly alike. Each had lived its own individual separateness, though massed with the whole.

We may aspire. We may reach. The good God will put things in our way so that we may take hold upon them and thus be helped and guided. But it shall ever remain to the man or woman himself, or herself, to the personality itself, really to pilot its separate career.

Life is set with choices. We select those into which we may best fit. It is then our privilege to help make the world better and happier.

Authorize Engineering Firm Draw Sewage Plant Plans

A further step toward getting construction of the city's four and a half million dollar sewage disposal system underway was by city council last evening, as recommendations were passed authorizing the consulting engineering firm of Gore and Storrie to draw detailed plans for the work.

The initial phase of the overall project is estimated to cost close to two and a half million, this to include a partial treatment plant and installation of east and west trunk sewers.

It was expected that the detailed plans for the initial phase could be ready in a matter of three or four months.

Preparing of detailed plans must be completed before the city can ask for Municipal Board approval of the project, according to Public Works Committee chairman Alderman Jack Ellis.

DIVIDE COSTS

Also before council last night were by-laws setting out the method of payment for the sewage disposal project.

Costs will be assessed partially against water users and partially against property owners, the split to be roughly 60-40, the greater portion to be paid by water users.

A portion of the cost would be recovered by the city through a Federal government grant providing the work is completed by a specified time.

By-laws before council last night will now go to the Ontari Municipal Board for approval.

Leslie Vipond Guest Speaker At 'Y' Annual

Leslie Vipond, general secretary of the National Council of YMCA's of Canada, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Belleville YMCA this Thursday evening. Mr. Vipond has been in "Y" work since his graduation from the University of Toronto in 1938 and in 1947 received his first appointment to the National Council. After holding a number of secretarial posts in this body he was elevated to the post general secretary, the highest "Y" office in Canada.

Widely experienced in leadership, guidance and education, Mr. Vipond has been active with a number of professional associations and community groups such as the Canadian Association for Adult Education, as well as on special projects and surveys aimed at the development of the YMCA in Canada.

Capture Boys

TORONTO (CP)—Four juveniles who escaped Monday from Cobourg boys' training school were captured Monday night in a police roadblock in suburban North York after a chase.

Const. Derek Sykes said the boys, two 13 and two 14, were doing almost 100 miles an hour in a car stolen at Port Hope.

Search and Rescue Unit Outlined to Rotary Club

The role played by the Search and Rescue unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force, especially of the para-rescue group within that unit, was explained to local Rotarians at their weekly dinner meeting yesterday afternoon by Sgt. Jack Glydon of RCAF Station Trenton.

The role of search and rescue work for locating lost aircraft, performing evacuation work and locating lost persons and boats across Canada was assigned to the RCAF in 1947 by an Order-in-Council, the speaker explained. This assignment covers a large area, theoretically from the middle of the Atlantic Ocean west to the middle of the Pacific Ocean, the speaker noted. To do this there are four search and rescue centres across Canada, one of which is located at Trenton.

The search and rescue units maintain a 24-hour state of readiness and can usually swing into action within 10 to 15 minutes from the time they are called upon during the daytime or from 30 to 40 minutes durin gthe night or off-hours, the veteran of 19 years' service with the RCAF said.

Sgt. Glydon pointed out that considerable work is involved in conducting a search since it requires 10,000 miles of flying to cover an area of 100 miles square.

WORK DEMANDING

Parachuting men and supplies into a point where para-rescue assistance is required is a small but important part of this operation, the speaker pointed out. There are 85 men trained in this work, which is very demanding and requires considerable training. A six - month course in this work is to commence at Trenton RCAF base in a few weeks which will involve some 900 hours of training of which actual parachuting work will occupy only 50 hours.

The rest of the time will be spent in training the men in bush lore, survival technique and rendering medical assistance. The course is a very tough one and only about 50 per cent graduate from it, Sgt. Glydon added. The men must be able to survive by themselves, and at same time help others in distress in any type of terrain or under any kind of conditions, he said.

Part of the training schedule includes parachuting into water and into wooded areas with the advanced part of this training being carried out at Jasper in the Rockies. The guest speaker also described the special parachutes and equipment which these men use as well as the different methods and problems encountered in jumping.

An interesting question and answer period followed the conclusion of Sgt. Glydon's speech. He was introduced by Court Miller and thanked by Don MacKinnon. President Bill Hurst was chairman of the meeting.

travel and publicity department published a booklet containing photographs of all Ontario's cabinet ministers.

"If anybody can tell me what attraction that is, I'd be happy to hear it," he said. "It has nothing to do with travel."

INQUIRIES HIGHER

In asking approval of his estimates Travel and Publicity Minister Cathcart said tourist inquiries at the department's 15 tourist centres rose more than 24 per cent in 1960, to 351,738. Biggest increase was from American tourists, whose inquiries totalled 167,083 compared with 143,967 in 1959.

He said the department will institute a plan involving a matching of grants to aid and assist areas in publicizing their natural and historical attractions.

Albert Wren (L — Kenora urged the government to bring in new liquor laws for hotels and tourist establishments so that alcoholic beverages could be served with meals.

"I seriously suggest we take the handcuffs off our tourist operators in Ontario or they are going to be in serious trouble," he said. "Tourists want to be able to buy liquor in a dignified way."

All Prepared For Presentation The Boy Friend

The production of "The Boy Friend" at Quinte Secondary School promises to be an evening of lively and colorful entertainment. A London and Broadway hit it enjoyed a successful run in Toronto this year. Yet it lends itself well to High School production and the student cast have succeeded in making it their own.

A gay and lively "spoof" of the English musicals of the 20's it presents an evening of song, dance and humor. A staff-student orchestra provides the background music for the Charleston and other dances typical of the period.

The story concerns the "Perfect Young Ladies" of Madame Dubonnet's finishing school for girls in Nice and their efforts to find "The Boy Friend". Eventually, of course, everyone including Madame Dubonnet, finds herself with the right partner.

There are new costumes and scenery for the color and spectacle of musical comedy, and lovely and enthusiastic presentations by all the cast.

The support of the whole school has resulted in very successful ticket sales. There are still a few seats available however, especially for the Thursday night performance.

ries will be increased this year.

Mr. Duffin said in addition to adjustment grants to lessen the financial burden of amalgamation, provision this year has been made for extra grants to municipalities changing their status to cities or towns from townships or villages.

WILL AID SEWERS

Earlier, Municipal Affairs Minister Warrender told the delegates the Ontario Water Resources Commission is prepared to consider the financing of storm trunk sewers.

He said the federal government, through Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, will loan up to two-thirds the cost of sewage treatment plants and will "forgive" 25 per cent of such loans if the work is completed by March 31, 1963.

"Our commission is prepared to enter into agreements with municipalities to permit them to take advantage of this financing plan," Mr. Warrender said.

He said the commission estimated a $58,000,000 program in sewage works is ready to start. Projects valued at $67,000,000 were in the active planning stage and projects being developed amounted to $93,000,000.

FIDDLER AT 110 — William Nicholson, who will be 111 years old May 26, still plays the fiddle in his spare time. Born at East Margaree on the north shore of Cape Breton Island in 1850, he is a former miner and fisherman. He attributes his age to heredity—his father lived to be 100. (CP Photo).

110-Year-Old Never Under Care Until Two Years Ago

INVERNESS, N.S. (CP)—William Nicholson is a 110-year-old former miner and fisherman who had never been under a doctor's care until two years ago.

He was born in the north shore Cape Breton village of East Margaree May 26, 1850, and spent his life in the area.

One of a family of 14, he is lanky, nimble minded and healthy. In his spare time he plays the fiddle, watches television or just sits back for a smoke and wonders whether anyone else in Canada has had a longer, more active life than he.

He recalls taking his bride to the church on horseback. She died a short time later and he never remarried.

Mrs. Susan MacKinnon, his landlady off and on for the last 20 years, says he is "no trouble in the world, always cheerful."

"When I called a doctor for him one night about two years ago it was the first time in his life that a doctor had ever attended him." Since then he has been in excellent health.

Mr. Nicholson is not often idle. His violin, brought from Scotland by his grandfather, revives memories of tunes long forgotten by others.

His favorite television programs are those which feature violin music.

He walks up and down stairs without help, eats and sleeps well and dresses neatly. No longer able to attend mass, he receives regular visits from the parish priests.

Now a question he has heard many times: To what does he attribute his age?

Heredity, he says. His father lived to be 100.

Quit Cramming And Study Systematically

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed. D.
with HARRY KARNS

Article 12

Today we are going to outline a plan that will help you get better grades on examinations.

First let's look at a sad scene.

Place: College dormitory.

Time: The eve of semester exams.

Glassy-eyed, hollow - cheeked youths sit staring at books and notes amid coffee cups, cigaret butts and sandwich scraps, trying to learn in a single night what they should have been learning in the past four and one-half months. . . .

From their early days of high school to their last days of college, American students gear their study habits to the cram session. The idea is to skim the surface from day to day and catch up with a one-night blitz of intellectualism.

But the blaze somehow is never quite that hot.

Harold was a student at State College. He lived in a fraternity house. In each part of his daily study he had in the back of his mind that morbidly pleasant social event at the fraternity house on the night before examinations.

This led him unerringly to a "C" average balanced precariously on the brink of "D".

We suggested that he get off the cram system and start a program of systematic study.

He tried it. At semester's end we asked him how he was doing.

He had made "A's" in all his tests.

"So—no more cramming?"

Harold smiled sheepishly. "Well, to tell the truth, I don't cram any more, personally. But the guys at the frat house sort of expect a fellow to show up at the cram sessions. So, I—er—well, I stay up with them all night."

We shook our head disapprovingly, but Harold added brightly:

"Anyway, I make better grades than they do even though I do lose all that sleep."

REVIEW FOR A WEEK

Your preparations for exam day should not be an effort to sponge up everything at once. They should be an organized review, over a period of several days, of what you have been sponging up (we hope) all along.

Now we are going to suggest ways of doing this review. Since different types of exams require slightly different methods, we will deal with several types separately.

Some courses, literature for example, lean heavily to exams of the essay type. In preparing for this type of exam try these steps:

1. Review the big, general pattern of the subject to be covered. Do this by reading the table of contents of the textbook and skimming through the chapters, looking at paragraph headings and summaries.

2. Go back through the table of contents, the chapter headings, and the summaries, asking yourself the questions and answering them. Make a question about each item in the table of contents. Write out answers to the questions you feel are most likely to be asked on the test.

3. Improve on your answers. Go over them with an eye for making them more exact. Go back over your lecture notes and the marginal notes in your book.

Essay-type tests require considerable writing, so at this point we want to stress once more how important it is to learn the art of penmanship. The physical act of writing should not be such a labor that it forms a barrier to the easy, swift, and precise expression of the thought.

Bill, a freshman at a large university, came to us holding a report card with a "D" in English like a dead toad on the end of a stick. He was on the track team and, thanks to a sensible coach, had developed his legs pretty well. But somehow no sensible teacher had ever thought of teaching him to develop the fingers that held his pen.

We readied Bill for the next English exam by having him write a short paragraph over and over again for about 20 minutes each day. In four days his penmanship improved markedly, and his writing muscles got stronger. On the fifth day he got "B" on his exam.

WORK OUT A SYSTEM

While going through steps one, two, and three, mentioned above, it helps to relate one item of information to another. Make them all fit together. Make them mean something to one another. The more diversified, the more complete, you make these associations, the easier it will be to remember the data.

When you relate persons to events, shape a picture in your mind instead of merely memorizing some words. It helps sometimes to exaggerate the picture, to make a caricature of the personalities involved.

When you think of "Teddy" Roosevelt as the robust, bucktoothed, delighted leader of the Rough Riders, a whole flood of memories of his traits and the events of his administration pours through the mind.

Napoleon wore a three-cornered hat and posed with his hand in his tunic. FDR clenched a cigaret holder in his teeth. John L. Lewis has shaggy eyebrows. These are some of the more obvious caricatures, but they suggest how you may give substance and color to more obscure personalities which it is your duty to remember.

Quit Cramming!
Adopt A Study System

When you get ready for a literature exam, you are faced with the problem of linking characters, authors, and settings and the names of books. Connect the author's name with each character and each situation.

Thus "Shakespeare developed a real skinflint in his character of Shylock in the Merchant of Venice".

Associate other characters in the play with Shylock. Study their effects on him and his on them.

Remember, the more systematically you tie things together in your mind, the easier it is to recall them when you need them on examination day.

(Tomorrow: More tips on how to prepare for exam day).

Responsibilities In Teaching Music Outlined

The February meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Ontario Registered Music Teachers' Association was held at the home of Mrs. G. H. Rennie, 12 Eleanor Gardens. Due to the absence of the president, Mr. John Withers, Sister Mary Avila, vice-president, was in the chair.

It was announced that another series of piano scholarship broadcasts will be held over C.J.B.Q. each Tuesday evening. A refresher course for teachers was discussed and all present were interested and plans are under way for a special course by Parsons and Poole to be held at Albert College Manor during the second week of July. It is to be hoped that all teachers from this district will take advantage of this opportunity.

GUEST SPEAKER

Sister Mary Avila introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Earle Moss, from the Royal Conservatory of Music, who was the presiding examiner at the mid-winter examination held in Belleville.

Mr. Moss, a fluent speaker, gave the teachers an inspiring message. He spoke of the pupil, the parent and the teacher. As far as the pupils are concerned, he felt the average child of today is not working as hard as he could or should work and he believes in certain practice habits being established for each child. This is where the parent can vitally help, in the planning of a set time and proper conditions for that set time. Encouragement from the parent means much to the child.

When a child starts music lessons, the teacher has become a part of his life. A teacher must realize his great responsibility that he is not only teaching music, he is also building character. Enthusiasm in a teacher will help to create enthusiasm in the pupil.

Mr. Moss made mention of an article in the Ontario Intelligencer, one in the series 'Is your child meeting modern-day challenge.' He planned to take it home with him to place in his studio for all to read.

Mrs. Townsend thanked Mr. Moss for his informative address and also thanked the hostess for the use of her home and the social half hour which followed the meeting.

Argyll IODE Installs 1961 Officers

The annual general meeting of the Argyll Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire was held at the Officers' Mess of the Armouries last Tuesday.

It was presided over by the Regent, Mrs. A. B. Duffy, who presented the Regents' annual report. Reports were also heard from the treasurer; Mrs. J. Cousins, the secretary, Mrs. L. Digby, and the conveners for the various special committees.

Letters were read from the officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment expressing their thanks for the gift of an automatic coffee urn from the principal and children of the Consecon school, the chapter's "adopted" school —expressing their pleasure at receiving their Christmas gifts.

Mrs. Keller's group was thanked for its assistance given at the Blood Clinic held on February 6th.

CHEER BASKETS

"Cheer baskets" were made up to send to two members of the Chapter, Mrs. J. Fullerton and Mrs. G. Miller who, unfortunately are in hospital.

Mrs. A. B. Duffy is retiring after serving four years as Regent. The members presented her with a figurine to show their appreciation of her outstanding service.

In thanking the members, Mrs. Duffy called for the same support she had received to be given to the incoming Regent, Mrs. A Cunningham. Mrs. Duffy asked members to serve the Order by attending meetings regularly, reading the Order's journal "Echoes", from which could be obtained much useful information, attending as many dinners as possible and by wearing the badge proudly.

The inauguration of the new officers by Mrs. E. Fairman concluded the business of the meeting. The new senior officers are as follows:

Mrs. A. Cunningham — Regent; Mrs. H. Campbell — 1st vice-regent; Mrs. K. Willcocks 2nd vice-regent, Mrs. L. Digby —secretary; Mrs. J. McLeod and Mrs. F. Burtt — services home and abroad; Mrs. C. Bristol — standard beaver; Mrs. H. Birkenshaw — treasurer; Mrs. E. Smith — education secretary; Mrs. A. McConnell, "Echoes" secretary.

A social hour followed with refreshments served by Mrs. E. Smith, Mrs. Clapp and Mrs. A. Duffy.

D.P. Presents Certificates to 4-H Club Girls

HILLIER SOUTH — The 4-H Clubs and Leaders for Prince Edward County clubs were active in the recent Achievement Day at Picton Collegiate Institute Project "Club Girls' Entertain." 131 girls attended, representing 13 clubs from Bloomfield, Cherry Valley, Demorestville, Bowerman's, Greenbush, Hillier, Albury, Wellington, Mountain View and Consecon.

Mrs. Earl Hicks, district president, presented Provincial Honor Certificates to Lynda Brooks, Judy Rankin, Barbara Scott and to Rebecca Hatfield, Nancy Hobbs, Margaret Carnahan, Sharon Potter, Jean Munro and Linda Wood who had competed in six projects.

In recognition of five years' service as club leaders, special certificates were presented to Mrs. V. Elmy and Mrs. H. Walt, Consecon; Mrs. H. Gorsline of Demorestville and Mrs. A. Best and Mrs. James Alexander of Hillier.

Assisting Mrs Marion Smith, home economist, Miss Frances Pendergast of Frontenac and Leeds, and Miss Lois Smith for Ontario and York counties, also Miss Marie Hodgson from head office, 20 Spadina Road, Toronto.

Next project, "Featuring Fruit" will be new project training school, February 21 and 22.

Ontario Diocesan W.A. Board Meets at St. Luke's, Kingston

The February meeting of the Ontario Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary was held in St. Luke's Parish Hall, Kingston, with the president, Mrs. W. F. H. Mitchell presiding.

The treasurer, Mrs. T. H. Parker, gave her report and also read a letter from Miss Elsa Peter, of Pakistan, regarding banner for Ontario Diocese.

Mrs. G. Platt, Diocesan archivist, urged every branch of the W.A. to send in a report in order to have a record of all the work and achievements of the Diocese during the past 75 years.

Mrs. A. R. Treadgold announced the juniors' rally will be held in St. George's Cathedral on April 15.

Mrs. W. McNeeley and Miss Elinor Newman are doing splendid work in setting up a plan of study for the study book, "Towards the Centre." They have been visiting each deanery.

Miss Newman is interested in contacting girls who wish to become candidates for training. G. A. Links have also been formed through Miss Newman's efforts.

Mrs. R. H. Godden, Dorcas secretary, has now received reports from most of the branches. She reminds the branches that Christmas bales for the Arctic be sent between April 15 and May 1.

S.S. CANCELED

As the social service project that has been carried on at the Red Cross room has not been a success, it was moved that this service be dipensed with.

Mrs. O'Krafta spoke briefly on "Thankoffering."

Bishop Evans addressed the meeting. He commended the W.A. for the work accomplished in the past and expressed appreciation for what is being done at the present time. He spoke of conditions throughout the Diocese and of the tremendous amount of work being done. He mentioned some of the plans for the next few years and hoped every parish in the Diocese would share in the work.

Mrs. C. Wolfe thanked Bishop Evans for his informative and interesting talk.

Mrs. R. Carleton, Reddendale, thanked the members of St. Luke's W.A. for their kind hospitality.

Bishop Evans closed the meeting with prayer.

Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Stockdale U.C. Holds Special Youth Service

Stockdale United Church was filled on Sunday morning for the special service for Christian Youth Sunday arranged by the Young People's Union of Frankford, Stockdale and Zion United Churches.

The anthem, "Unto Thee O Lord," was beautifully rendered by the choir of 20 teenagers, with Eleanor Beach at the organ and Patsy Hubble taking the solo part. Gloria Nelson sang "A Closer Walk With Thee." Lyle Williams and Sandra Morrow, co-presidents of the YPU, and Marilyn Hall, secretary, conducted the service.

Guest preacher was Mr. William Dafoe, past YPU president, and presently a cabinet minister in Ontario Older Boys' Parliament. He spoke of boys' work in Ontario in various camps and conferences and gave an inspiring witness of the spiritual benefits from his parliamentary experience.

OLDER BOYS' PARLIAMENT

Ontario Older Boys' Parliament is sponsored by the Ontario Council of Christian Education and held its 40th session this year in the Ontario Legislative Chambers at Queen's Park and in Trinity College, Toronto.

Jean Bryant entranced the large number of children present with a Valentine's story, and David and Carl Brooks acted as ushers.

Lyle Williams explained the purpose of the Young People's Union, "to lead young people into Christian fellowship and active church membership and help each to know, love and serve God as revealed in Jesus Christ.

The Rev. C. R. Judd was invited to pronounce the benediction.

1st International Night Held by Bancroft BPW

Mrs. Marjorie McCaw, of the Belleville Business and Professional Women's Club, local Deputy Sheriff and County Court Clerk, was guest speaker at the first International Night observation of the Bancroft Business and Professional Women's Club held in Bancroft on Monday evening.

Accompanying Mrs. McCaw to Bancroft were Miss Mildred Hall, Belleville club president, Mrs. Arlene Ashbury, and Mrs. Dorothy Brown.

The 'Lights-Up' ceremony was conducted by Kay Genest and Norma Powers of Bancroft Club. Mrs. Margery Pewtress of Cobourg is to be the guest speaker at the Belleville club celebration of International Night which will be held on Monday, February 20th.

Energetic Club Views Slides of Cedarvale School

The regular meeting of the Energetic Club was held on Wednesday with Audrey and Carl Brethour's group in charge.

The meeting opened with the singing of a group of favorites hymns. The theme of the worship service was "Youth."

Audrey Brethour, Ken Parks, Bob Bleecker and Tony Lepore conducted the devotional and Bill Campbell played two selections on the euphonium.

The guest speaker was the Rev. Morgan McFarlane, of Tabernacle United Church, who showed slides and spoke about Cedarvale School for Girls at Georgetown. This is a United Church home for young girls, who cannot be placed in private homes by the Children's Aid Society because they are emotionally disturbed.

Darrell and Don Harvey who were introduced to the club committees were appointed for the "Pie Social" to be held in March.

Several lively games were played.

During lunch Dorothy Bowes read the "Tattler" and some tall, tall tales concluded the evening.

Women's Activities

ST. ANDREW'S W.A.

WELLINGTON — St. Andrew's W.A. met at the home of Mrs. Sam Tripp on a recent Tuesday evening. Mrs. Rod Blower, the president, opened the meeting.

The Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Tripp.

Reports were given by the following; Mrs. Ogilvy, for Dorcas; Mrs. Tripp, G. A.; Mrs. Rogers J.A. and Mrs. Upton, "Little Workers".

A thank-you note was received from Mrs. Evans. Mrs. Hare read the board letter. The "World Day of Prayer" was discussed. It was decided that Miss Ruby Nash be the educational secretary and take charge of the new Study Book. Miss Nash read a chapter from the Study Book on "Africa".

Mrs. Blower thanked Mrs. Tripp for having the W.A. in her home, and closed the meeting. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Upton, served refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

Teaching the Deaf Explained, Demonstrated to College Guild

An interesting meeting of the Albert College Guild was held recently at the manor.

After welcoming the members and guests the president, Mrs. E. Hickey, discussed business arising out of the minutes and announced that new drapes were being purchased for the common room at the manor. The group was also told that Mrs. C. Hyde and Mrs. K. Bird had consented to act as co-conveners for the Easter bridge and that Mrs. Fleming, Mrs. Davidson and Mrs. Wilson would be in charge of the "Convocation Tea."

The program was in charge of Mrs. Fred Wilson with Mrs. T. F. Townsend leading the devotional service which she introduced with the hymn "Come Let Us Sing of a Wonderful Love." The theme of the devotional service was "God's Unspeakable Gift."

"Our faculties are too limited to really comprehend the gift of God, the eternal mystery of the Incarnation. God reveals himself in prophet, psalmist, apostle and sage; but to show us God, He sent His Son.' 'The word was made flesh and dwelt among us.' The love of God is high, wide, deep and broad, and we are in the middle of it."

A solo, "Think on Me", was sung by Mrs. Arthur Daniels.

TEACHING THE DEAF

Mrs. Wilson introduced Miss Marjorie Hegle, supervising teacher of the junior department of the Ontario School for the Deaf, who explained the aims and problems of the teaching of deaf children.

"Unlike a hearing child the deaf pupil enters school with no vocabulary and does not know the sounds around him. He has no means of communication except by natural gestures. Unless he has had understanding parents, friends and playmates he may not be well adjusted.

"It is the aim of the School for the Deaf to try to prepare the child to live in the world as a part of it.

"The teachers have to prepare a child for speech, and much time is spent on sense training. The child must be trained in attention, observation, imitation and muscular control. He needs voice building exercises to develop forward production of voice, muscular control, breath control and resonance.

"The aim is to get the child to want to talk."

WORK DEMONSTRATED

Miss Hegle introduced Miss Mallory, who introduced her class of September beginners. Miss Mallory demonstrated the work which Miss Hegle had described. She showed and used sense training material which included the matching of colors, objects and pictures and demonstrated the children's ability to lip read phrases and sentences such as two cars, three flowers. Show me a ball.

This was followed by a further demonstration of exercise breath control and voice building exercises for the purpose of developing speech.

Miss Mallory explained that a reading program is being carried on and showed that the class was able to read the sentences and phrases that they lip read.

The children were eager to participate and showed that they were happy in their work.

All who had contributed to the program were thanked by Mrs. Williams.

A social half hour was spent.

QUESTION BOX

Today is St. Valentine's Day Therefore it seems appropriate to answer questions dealing with that exciting announcement — the engagement. The following are questions that are generally asked:

Question: Is it correct to make the announcement by using engraved or printed cards?

Answer: Definitely not. This should never be done.

• • •

Question: What is the proper procedure?

Answer: The parents of the girl should make the formal announcement through the medium of the society pages of the local newspapers. If both parents are deceased, a close relative should do this. If the parents are divorced, the one with whom she lives issues the story, mentioning therein that she is the daughter of "Mr. (or Mrs.) So and So."

• • •

Question: How should this announcement be worded?

Answer: Example: "Mr. and Mrs. Philip John Dow announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Jane, to Mr. Francis James Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harold Brown, of this city." Pertinent facts about the backgrounds of both families may be added, if you wish, as well as a brief resume of the schools that have been attended by the couple. If the man has seen service in any of the Military branches, this also may be included.

• • •

Question: If the wedding date has already been set, is it proper to mention this?

Answer: Yes, within reason. If the nuptials are not going to take place for six months, it is wiser to make the announcement about two months before the actual date. The reason is that unforeseen things can, and do, happen over a long period of time. The wedding just might not occur. If the date has not been announced, the less said the better. But if the date has been published, then a cancellation announcement will have to be made.

• • •

Question: Suppose there are relatives and close friends who live in other cities. How do you spread the good news to them? Send a clipping from the newspapers?

Answer: There is nothing against sending a clipping, but I think it is a nicer gesture to write a note before the formal announcement is made in the newspapers. This is particularly true in the case of relatives. The mother of the girl should write to them and to her own friends. The girl herself may properly write to those in her own age group.

• • •

Question: Is it a must that an engagement party be held?

Answer: No, this is not obligatory and depends entirely upon the wishes of the girl and her parents. It is an effective way of breaking the news to relatives and close friends who live in your town. If such an announcement party is planned, it should be held the day before the story is printed in the newspapers.

Chatterton W.I. Hears Talk on "Bee Keeping"

The February meeting of the Chatterton W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. Albert Carson. The president, Mrs. Gardner, opened the meeting. There were 12 members and three visitors present. The roll call was answered by an exchange of Valentines.

Plans were made to serve at the sales barn in the near future; a donation was given to Mental Health.

Mrs. E. B. Finkle was appointed as member of the new Hastings County Historical museum. A donation will be made.

A committee of Mrs. Gardner, Mrs. G. Irvine, Mrs. L. Reid and Mrs. P. Dixon, was appointed with regard to the 60th anniversary of the district.

The treasurer gave her report on finance and donations were handed in.

The convener, Mrs. DeMille, presided over the program and gave a reading, "The First Valentine Message." Mrs. Dixon gave a reading, "In February" and Mrs. Bleecker read "The Human Touch" by Edgar Guest.

Mr. Emory DeMille, guest speaker, gave an interesting talk on "Beekeeping," including their life history; their care; what to do in case of being badly stung while working with them, and how honey is processed, from the hive until ready to be served on the table.

After the meeting closed, the hostess and assistants served refreshments.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Ethel C. — When our children are angry or disobedient, they flee to Grandma's.

Mrs. A. C. — It's better than their wandering the streets 'til things blow over!

• • •

Ethel C. — How can we ever drive home a point of discipline with our children if they know they can skedaddle over to Grandma's down the block for sympathy?

Tell our nine-year-old, "No Dessert," and he's in Grandma's kitchen a half-hour later having butterscotch cupcakes! Start scolding the six-year-old for tracking mud into the house, and she backtracks straight to Grandma's door. When my mother-in-law's around the kids act up, knowing she'll protect them from punishment.

To be honest, she's really a dear, and a big help to us. But not when it comes to training our youngsters. She undermines our efforts. And after all, we'll be held responsible for the way they turn out, not she.

• • •

Mrs. A. C. — Ethel and Luke are too hard on those little ones. It's good they have me to come to, to cry it all out. Otherwise they'd grow up very bitter.

Ethel must trust me to do the right thing. I don't give Junior a treat if I know he's not supposed to have one. Usually I call up to find out what's happened. Of course I admit that sometimes my heart just melts completely and I bind up their "wounds", no questions asked.

But I never criticize their parents in front of them. If I've said it once, I've said it a hundred times, "Daddy and Mommy love you. They're trying to teach you what's right." Personally, though, I think Ethel and Luke ought to let a few things "slide."

• • •

The Council — Nobody was ever hurt by the right kind of love. But many are ruined by one of the insidious kinds we called molly-coddling derived from the Latin word "mollis" which means soft. Grandma feels her love strengthens the kids. Ethel and Luke fear she's making softies of them.

In the main, having Grandma a few doors away for the "over flow" is fortunate. The danger arises from the word "usually" which should be changed by the older woman to "always." She must always know the parents' wishes, the point they are trying to get across, so as never to invalidate their authority. It is they who are in day-to-day command, now. Grandma is only a loving aide-de-camp.

The C. children will then be doubly blest. They have conscientious parents who aren't letting too many things "slide," to be taught later by harsh strangers in a world less patient than Daddy and Mommy. And, they'll have a haven to retreat to when the pressures at home grow too great. "Leaving home" for Grandma's calm and soothing parlor, can provide a wholesome and balancing outlet.

Most kids have urges to "run away" when they feel unfairly put upon. Oh, to teach "them" all a lesson! Oh, to make them sorry! One small fellow, missing for 24 hours, was found in his own cellar enjoying the hysterics and remorse of his "cruel" parents. Other children, and even adults, retreat from the fray in other ways. They sulk, withdraw from activities, bury themselves in books as an escape.

When Ethel's children reach their limits of endurance, there's the balm of Grandma's tender acceptance. Mom yells. Dad yells, somebody smacks. Who's right, who's wrong, who knows? The cooling-off point is down the block. But final jurisdiction, as Grandma must concede and the kids must accept is back home.

Kinette Club Plans for Fashion Show

The regular dinner meeting of the Belleville Kinette Club was held recently at St. Thomas' Parish with good attendance.

The meeting was opened by president Thelma Stefan, and the secretary and treasurer's reports were read.

Song leaders, Kinettes Marilyn MacDonald and Helen Hardy led the girls in a merry sing-song which was enjoyed by everyone.

The raffle was won by Kinette Freda Duesberry.

Kinette Ray Brain told of the arrangements that had been made for the "Terelyne Fashion Show" which is to be held later this month.

The birthday meeting of the C.N.I.B. was discussed and everyone was asked to help out to make this an enjoyable luncheon for them.

An auction was held with Kinette Lorene Henderson as auctioneer.

FOR EMERGENCIES

A new babysitter should be shown the locations of telephones and exits, in case of emergency.

Chocolate Cake For A Birthday Celebration

By Mary Moore

Today is Valentine's day, so because I gave you some recipes for this event last Thursday, today's offering is a birthday cake — chocolate with date filling and mocha frosting. This served fourteen people, two of whom were small children and was made for a double birthday celebration.

It is big and interesting enough to serve as your complete dessert. You don't have to have ice cream or jelly or fruit with it because of the delicious filling and frosting.

CHOCOLATE BIRTHDAY CAKE:

Marianne made this cake for she is the cake expert and baked the batter in 2 square pans 9 x 9 x 2". If you prefer you may bake yours in 3 layer cake pans.

3 cups sifted cake flour, 2 cups granulated sugar, 1 7-8 teaspoons baking soda, 1 1-2 teaspoons salt, 3-4 cup good quality vegetable shortening (room temperature), 1 1-2 cups milk, 3 unbeaten eggs, 4 1-2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted, 1 1-2 teaspoons vanilla.

Measure the sifted flour and tip it into the sifter over a bowl. Add the sugar, soda and salt and sift together. In large mixing bowl beat the shortening until it is creamy and add the sifted dry ingredients. Add 1 cup of the milk and beat 2 minutes in electric beater or 300 strokes with wooden spoon. Add unbeaten eggs, melted chocolate, vanilla and remaining 1-2 cup milk. Beat 1 more minute in electric beater or 150 strokes with wooden spoon. Line bottoms of two 9 x 9 x 2" square pans with square piece of foil or wax paper to fit and butter bottoms and unlined sides. Pour in batter. (Or line bottom of three 8 x 8 x 2" layer cake pans and butter bottoms and unlined sides.) Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. Two square pans required 37 minutes. Three layer cake pans would require about 30 to 35 minutes. Let stand in pans for 5 minutes before turning out on cooling racks. Let cake cool. Then put this Date Filling between layers 1 1-2 or 1 3-4 cups chopped seeded dates, 1-2 cup water, juice of 1-2 lemon. (This does not require sugar and gives a tang to this cake that it needs.) Simmer gently, stirring often until blended and thickened. Cool before spreading between layers. Ice top and sides of cake with Mocha Frosting: One-quarter pound (1-2 cup) butter, 4 teaspoons dry instant coffee, about 3-4 to 1 pound sifted icing sugar, 2 or 3 tablespoons table cream or milk. Cream the butter and instant coffee together until fluffy. Begin adding icing sugar and cream or milk alternately until of spreading consistency. Spread on top and sides of cake. To decorate the cake we used "silvers" at the top and bottom of all the letters in "Happy Birthday to Peady and Barb" which Herbie lettered for us with a toothpick. We used chocolate decorettes to mark the lines between the silver balls. We had plenty of time to do this on Sunday afternoon so we used tweezers to handle the chocolate decorettes and did a professional-looking job.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Prince Edward county's breeze-rippled Long Reach will be the focal point of twin publicity spotlights this summer.

The ribboning waterway, cradle of Canada's first Harmsworth Trophy winner, has been selected as the jousting place for two nautical world championships.

"Miss Supertest III" will roar her second defensive defiance at an American challenger, Detroit's confident "Gale V."

Snorting, wave-skimming outboards, champions in their own right, will compete for the John Ward Trophy, the world's putt-putt equivalent of the Harmsworth.

The Ward Trophy is another first in Canada. It has been raced for in Europe and South America, in fact it was won last year in the Argentine. This will be its first challenge classic north of the United States border.

This was cleared at a recent meeting of the Prince Edward Yacht Club, Canadian sponsors of the two raceway epics and directors of the Canadian Boating Federation, administrative body of racing in this country.

A big smile wreathed the face of Jay Sprague, commodore of the Prince Edward Yacht Club the other day as we talked of the summer waterway spectaculars.

The little burgomaster of Mountain View likes to get things done in a big way. Also the proper way and to have everything "laid on" well ahead of the starting guns.

Once on a European junket he tried to get squatters' rights to the foothills of the Matterhorn, kingpin of the Swiss Alps. Said he wanted to build "quick-can quick-freeze" tomato factories. Mayor H. J. McFarland talked him out of that idea.

The peppy commodore along with his past-commodores Lionel Hicks and Jack Cole, and Mayor McFarland, accomplished much in their talk with Bob Finlayson, Reg. Sparks, Wally Wood and Frank Areton, directors of the CBF.

"Two things are sure," said Jay. "The Long Reach course will be the official raceway, and Mayor H. J. McFarland is once again solidly behind the races. They will be held in August, the date yet to be decided upon."

Another important matter yet undecided, is whether the Harmsworth Races will be run over a five-mile course as last year—or a proposed three-mile course. Both courses will be surveyed.

Serious consideration is being given to the three-mile raceway by Jim Thompson, owner of "Miss Supertest." It will mean, under Harmsworth regulations, fifteen laps of three miles each while the five requires nine laps.

Assuming the three-mile course is 1½-mile straightaways with quarter-mile turns, this will put more accent on turn-driving than would the five mile raceway.

Bob Hayward, "Supertest" driver last year—and again this year—showed remarkable dexterity in "rounding the turns." So did Wild Bill Cantrell, in "Gale V" for that matter.

And with the American contender—there is only one this year, according to new regulations—being fitted with a brand new power-plant designed to pull the best out of "Supertest", the 1961 Harmsworth could very well resolve itself into a race of the turns.

The Harmsworth racedays tentatively suggested for a Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, won't have the thousands of spectators looking for "tween-race" entertainment as was the case last year.

For the Harmsworth Committee has given the Prince Edward Yacht Club sanction to operate its famous Gold Cup races. These, however, will be strictly under the jurisdiction of the yacht club directorate.

This body of men under Commodore Dick Hart learned a lot about organization in its freshman year as Harmsworth Trophy sponsors. Taking everything into consideration it did a splendid job and this year's directorate will profit immensely by its pioneering.

Work has already started and some things have been accomplished. We understand the 1960 big problem of co-operation on the part of race-course property owners has been ironed out.

One thing in the club's favor is that it has an energetic hard-working commodore, who, with Mayor McFarland and the directors will devote all the time and effort necessary to the successful culmination of a trio of world-attracting waterway classics.

Gil McDougald Quite Happy On Sidelines

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — "No, I've got no desire to get back into baseball," says former New York Yankees infielder Gil McDougald.

McDougald, who announced his retirement last December after a 10-year career with the American League champions, now enjoys life as president of a building maintenance firm.

"This is not to say I have no interest in baseball now," says McDougald, 32. "I just read the Yanks signed Joe DiMaggio to coach — I think that will be a help. And I'll be watching very closely to see how tre team does with a new regime.

"Also, I'll have trouble finding something as enjoyable as baseball to fill my spare time. But actually, most of the fun had gone out of it. I guess I could have played another five years, but it would have been just plain work.

"Sure, I'm still interested in the game," he says, "but I've quit to spend more time with my family and business."

Gil leaves the game having hit over .300 twice while compiling a .275 livetime average.

The Big 'M' Top Scorer

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Mahovlich of Toronto Maple Leafs has finally made it to the top in the National Hockey League individual scoring race.

Mahovlich displaced Montreal's Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion as leader with a whopping seven-point production in three games during the week after having been within range of the top for several months.

Official statistics released today show Mahovlich with a league-leading 43 goals and 26 assists for a total of 69 points in 56 games. Last week he scored twice and picked up five assists.

Geoffrion got two goals in three games and now has 68 points on 32 tallies and 36 assists.

Dickie Moore of Montreal held on to third place, scoring his 33rd goal and 30th assist for 63 points.

KELLY HAS FINE WEEK

Torohto's Red Kelly, 33, who plays centre on a line with Mahovlich, also came through with seven points to move into a fourth-place tie with Jean Beliveau of Montreal. Each has 61 points and Kelly tops the league in assists with 44.

Goaltender Glenn Hall of Chicago took over the lead in the Vezina Trophy race from Johnny Bower of Toronto by allowing only three goals in two games. Hall has given up 141 goals in 55 games for a 2.56 goals-against average. Bower has allowed 143 goals in 56 games for a 2.55 mark. Bower's average is lower because he has played one more game but Hall is considered the leader because the Vezina goes to the goaltender for the club which has allowed the fewest number of goals.

Best Heavies From Toronto InBoxingShow

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto fighters won victories in all three heavyweight bouts that wrapped up the 40th annual newsboys' boxing show Monday night.

Two of the features were decided by technical knockouts. Tony Marino stopped John MacDonald of Beaverton at 1:14 of the third round in the 185-pound class, and John Carl Barrazza got a TKO over Ron Kocan of Ann Arbor, Mich., at 1:37 of the third for 206-pounders.

Barrazza was awarded The Globe and Mail Trophy in the heavyweight division. MacDonald got the Willie Frankel Memorial Trophy as the gamest loser.

In the 160-pound class, Fred Richardson of Oshawa knocked out Toronto's Al Rubicini at 1:56 of the third round.

Bill Sweeney Top Scorer In American

NEW YORK (CP)—Phil Maloney of Buffalo has moved up to make it a race for the American Hockey League scoring title while injuries have sidelined Springfield's Bill Sweeney.

Statistics released today show Maloney and teammate Larry Wilson each netted seven points last week. That moved Maloney within two points of Sweeney, the league leader with 75 points, while Wilson jumped from eighth place to third with 66.

Springfield's Marcel Paille leads goaltenders with 150 goals allowed in 54 games for a 2.78 average. He has six shutouts.

LEAFS RECALL WINGER

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Maple Leafs announced Monday they have recalled right winger Johnny MacMillan from the American Hockey League Rochester Americans. It is expected he will play Wednesday night against Montreal Canadiens. He played several games earlier this season for Toronto.

Whitby Player Wins Junior Scoring Title

Lynn Middleton of the Whitby Hillcrests has captured the OHA Eastern Junior "B" scoring championship, according to statistics released by group convener Jack Devine.

Middleton caught and passed Kingston's Bud Ayleworth with a late-season surge to edge the Kingston ace by two points in the final count. Middleton finished the 20-game schedule with 50 points while Aylesworth had 48 and Belleville's Moe Hunter 45 in third position.

Middleton scored 22 goals and had 28 assists, tying him with Belleville's Gary Goyer for assist lead. Aylesworth finished with a 24-24 mark, tying him for the goals-scored title with Hunter.

All teams were represented with the exception of Picton among the loop's top 12 scorers. Belleville, Kingston and Whitby each placed three; Peterborough two and Cobourg one.

Eddie Kachur Making Bid For Top Spot

OTTAWA (CP) — Eddie Kachur of Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds is making a determined bid to overhaul Cliff Pennington of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens in the Eastern Professional Hockey League scoring race.

Kachur collected three goals and six assists last week to narrow the margin but is still 15 points behind Pennington, who had three goals and three assists last week.

Statistics released Monday show Pennington with 85 points on 28 goals and 57 asists. Kachur has 70 on 32 goals and 38 assists and 16 games left to catch Pennington.

Fred Hilts of Thunderbirds has moved into third spot with 64 points. He fired four goals and assisted on one to jump ahead of Dennis Olson of Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers. Olson has 62 points, two ahead of Sam Bettio of Sudbury Wolves.

Ed Johnston of Canadiens still has the best goaltending average, 2.45 goals a game, and leads in shutouts with nine.

New "badman" is Jean Gauthier of Canadiens, who has 103 minutes in penalties. Thunderbirds lead in team penalties with 788 minutes.

TAKES SQUASH CROWN

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Henri Salaun of Boston Monday won the U.S. national squash racquets singles championship for the third time, defeating defending champion Diehl Mateer of Philadelphia 15-18, 15-5, 15-11 and 15-12. Mateer announced his retirement from national competition.

Beating Rival

NFL Picking Up Best Rookies

By JIM HACKLEMAN

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Football League, needing more manpower than ever before in its long history and again facing a challenge for talent from the American League, appears to be handily outdistancing its infant rival in the race for prized rookies.

Targets in this furious pursuit for fresh faces and signed contracts are those scores of U.S. college boys eligible to play for cash next fall. Collegians are able to command unprecedented financial inducements.

Actually, it's a three-cornered competition for players because Canadian pro teams have managed to lure a fair share of U.S. boys north.

The NFL, with 14 teams to eight for the AFL, naturally has use for more rookies. Last year, when Dallas Cowboys joined the NFL as its 13th team, some 110 first-year men made the league rosters. Next fall, Minnesota Vikings will become the 14th NFL entry, creating the need for a comparable number of newcomers.

AFL NEEDS FEWER

The AFL had many rookies in its initial season last year and its need for new beef is not so pronounced as the NFL's. Nevertheless, there is sharp competition between the two leagues.

Both U.S. leagues and the Canadian teams have gone about their tasks industriously. In addition to handsome salaries, and often bonuses, the pros offer the all-important opportunity of valuable contracts for off-season jobs through football.

Canadian teams stress Canada's less-painful income tax setup and point out that their game is more mobile and less bruising—making for a longer, less-arduous career.

Canada attracted some half-dozen name stars, but its biggest coup was in grabbing Tom Brown, Minnesota's all-America guard who signed with British Columbia Lions. Brown is reported to have received a three-year contract woth $50,000 and a bonus.

HELD DRAFT EARLIER

In the NFL-AFL struggle for new talent, the younger league got a six-week jump by starting its draft last November while the NFL held off until later, when the college season had ended, at the request of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Despite its head start, the AFL has not cashed in too heavily. The Canadian Football League has no part in the U.S. draft.

The AFL went through 30 draft rounds, naming 240 boys. In late December, the NFL went through 20 rounds, taking 280 choices. The NFL has signed 71 so far to 28 for the AFL. Three others have declared for teams in both leagues and their status is disputed.

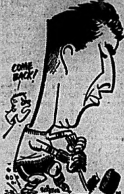
Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival



"BEATING THE CHECKER"

During a recent game between the Chicago Black-Hawks and the Toronto Maple Leafs I saw Murray Balfour make a puck carrying play several times which got him two goals and set up a goal for a teammate. This particular play, which at Sports College we call the "Stop and Go," is practically impossible for the checker to stop effectively, if it is done with good timing and skill.

One of the times Balfour used this play very effectively was against the Leaf defenceman Allan Stanley. The Chicago star got the puck in centre ice and headed for the Leaf defence at three-quarter speed. When he got to a spot about 15' from Stanley, the Chicago player broke into full speed at an angle toward the side boards, as if to go out and around the Leaf checker. Just as Stanley was getting close enough to Balfour to ride him out of the play, the Chicago player stopped dead, turned at an angle toward the goal and beat Staney cleanly to go in on Bower.

The reason this play is so hard to stop is because the offensive man knows he is going to stop and cut back. The checker does not — he must move over quickly to prevent the puck carrier from going around him and be as alert as possible for a cut-back. But no matter how alert he is, the checker is on the spot if the puck carrier stops and goes inside with skill because there is a time lag between the time the checker sees the move and can react to it. This play is especially effective against big or fairly slow moving defencemen with low agility. Try it and see for yourself. Arnold Palmer Wins Playoff By 3 Strokes

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Arnold Palmer beat par and Doug Sanders by three strokes with a 67 Monday in an 18-hole playoff for the Phoenix open golf championship.

Palmer's prize money was $4,300, Sanders' $3,000, and each pocketed one-fourth of the day's gate receipts.

Palmer, who combines precision irons with his powerful drives, took the lead at the second hole and led all the way. Sanders didn't win a hole until the 16th.

The two had tied at the end of the tournament's regulation 72 holes Sunday with 270s as Sanders fired a course record 62 in the final round.

This was Palmer's second tournament victory in six tries this year. His purse pushed his official earnings for the year to $12,426 and advanced him to the second spot on the money-winning list.

Gary Player of Soeth Africa leads with $13,717.

Wolves Suffer

Leafs Taking Goalie To Replace Ailing Bower

SUDBURY (CP)—The injury to Toronto Maple Leafs goaltender Johnny Bower may cost Sudbury Wolves an Eastern Professional Hockey League playoff berth.

Leafs called up Sudbury netminder Gerry McNamara to replace Bower Wednesday against Montreal Canadiens, leaving fifth-place Sudbury without a regular goaltender for a crucial game against fourth-place Kingston Frontenacs here Wednesday.

Wolves' coach Murph Chamberlain said Monday he hopes to obtain either Bobby Perreault or Al Miller, currently playing for Hershey Bears of the American League. Hershey is a Detroit Red Wings farm team. Sudbury is jointly sponsored by Toronto and Detroit.

If the Wolves can't get either, they will use Toronto farmhand Ed Babiuk who has been used sparingly by Kingston on loan from Toronto.

McNamara is a five-year veteran of minor-league hockey. Born in Sturgeon Falls, he grew up at Falconbridge, near Sudbury, and played junior hockey for Toronto St. Michael's College Majors.

He has three shutouts this year, second in the EPHL in that department. He stands six feet, two inches tall and weighs 190 pounds. This will be his first National League game.

In Kingston, meanwhile, Frontenacs announced they will use Billy Colvin, currently with Smiths Falls Rideaus of the Interprovincial Senior League, tonight in Sault Ste. Marie.

Colvin, a centre will replace Stan Maxwell, who broke his foot at Sault Ste. Marie last Tuesday.

Maxwell's loss left Frontenacs with only one regular centre, Bobby Attersley. Centre Tom Williams will be out three more weeks with a shoulder injury.

Colvin, 25, will be playing his second game on a five-game professional trial. He played one game for Frontenacs earlier this season at Kitchener.

Colvin will rejoin Smiths Falls for games Wednesday and Thursday.

The Frontenacs also said Babiuk will play goal for Kingston tonight and John Henderson will be flown to Sudbury for Wednesday's game. Goaltender Henderson has a Toronto job which keeps him from most away games.

Plan Cleanup Of Rough Play In Soccer Loop

LONDON (CP) — England's professional soccer players Monday announced a campaign to clean up the game and cut down on rough play.

They are offering a silver cup each season to the most sportsmanlike English League club. The players will pick the winner by polling their own membership.

The Professional Footballers' Association also plans to get together with referees and club managers to see that the game is played more strictly in accordance with the rules.

The move came less than a month after the players won higher wages and a better contract system.

"Having gained so much, the footballer has his part to play," said PFA secretary Cliff Lloyd. "He will be earning more money and the public will have the right to expect him to behave himself."

West German Truck Owner Man to Beat

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) Franz Schelle, a West German truck owner, has thrust himself squarely into the battle for top honors in the four-man bobsled world championship this weekend, giving defending champion Eugenio Monti and Stan Benham of Lake Placid something to think about.

Schelle started the second day of practice runs today as the only German entrant left after two accidents in as many days. No. 2 driver Hans Roesch is in hospital with a fractured elbow and alternate Josef Fraundorfer cracked up Monday.

Schelle, who finished fourth in the two-man races last weekend, came zooming down Mount Van Hoevenberg's mile - long Olympic run in 1:08.24 in a practice run Monday, bettering 1:08.88.

Benham turned in a 1:09.48 and Monti a 1:09.84.

JOCKEY SUSPENDED

MIAMI (AP)—Jockey Ignacio Ferrer was suspended for 10 days by Hialeah stewards Monday for allowing his mount, Banal, to cut in front of the field in last Saturday's $75,000-added Hialeah Turf Cup. The race was won by Hialeah, with Banal finishing fourth.

Not Interested Says Director

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Russian sports official said Monday the Soviet Union has invited Montreal Canadiens to play here this spring.

Yuri Bazhanov, secretary of the Soviet Hockey Federation, said the invitation was extended last fall. He added that the Canadiens, long-time powers in the National Hockey League, advised they were considering the offer but that nothing further has been heard from the club.

Frank Selke Jr., publicity director of the Canadiens, indicated Montreal is not interested in playing the Russians.

General Manager Frank Selke Sr. was not available for comment.

Pollock High On Rousseau Of the Habs

MONTREAL (CP) — General Manager Sammy Pollock of Hull - Ottawa Canadiens said Monday high - scoring rookie Bobby Rousseau is a $100,000 prospect.

"There's no doubt in my mind that if we were to put Rousseau on the open market, we could get $100,000 for him," Pollock said of the right winger.

Rousseau, 20, has scored 32 goals and 25 assists in 34 games with the leaders of the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

Pollock in recent years has placed similar $100,000 price tags on Ralph Backstrom, Montreal Canadiens.

Rousseau this year played 15 games with Montreal, picking up one goal and two assists.

"A player like Bobby comes along only once in a blue moon," said pllock. "In all my years in hockey there have zeen only three players who I felt could score whenever we needed a goal—Henri Richard, Ralph Backstrom and now Rousseau."

Rousseau, in his last junior season, scored 68 goals for Brockville Canadiens. He also was a member of Canada's 1960 Olympic team.

Czar Proposed

Would Control Boxing In Every Department

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ring champions and state boxing supervisors will be asked shortly to say what they think of creating a federal prizefight czar.

Senator Estes Kefauver, chairman of a Senate subcommittee that investigated gangland and influences on boxing, has proposed establishing a government commission to license everyone connected with interstate matches and prosecute undercover operators.

Kefauver, Democrat from Tennessee, is understood to favor a single commissioner, aided by examiners with authority to investigate and conduct hearings around the country.

Former heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano added his voice over the weekend to those advocating some type of federal control. And if there is to be a czar, Rocky said, he'd be willing to take the job.

John G. Bonomi, special counsel to Kefauver's subcommittee, said today the draft of boxing legislation is almost complete.

When it is ready, he said, copies will be circulated to a number of men experienced in the sport as fighters and overseers. Some will be called to testify at public hearings, probably within a month. Marciano may be included. Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and Joe Louis are other ex-champs likely to be queried. Floyd Patterson, current heavyweight king, also is on the tentative list and Ingemar Johansoon will be if he regains his title from Patterson March 13.

Kefauver proposed a commission after declaring the evidence strongly indicate that racketeers and hoodlums have dug in behind the scenes of professional boxing. He expressed hope of a cleanup in three years, when regulation of the sport could be returned to state agencies or a national association formed for the purpose.

Bonomi said serious consideration is being given to placing the office in the department of justice to strengthen its hand in what he called "preventing and prosecuting fixed fights and driving underworld elements out of boxing."

Dick Savitt Plans to Quit Tennis Trail

NEW YORK (AP)—Big-time tennis—Wimbledon, Forest Hills and the Davis Cup—holds no more fascination for Dick Savitt.

The towering, stoop - shouldered New Yorker, who at 36 still can match shots with any amateur in the game, plans to put his United States national indoor championship trophy in the family showcase and quit tournament play for good.

In beating Whitney Reed of Alameda, Calif., 6-2, 11-9, 6-3 Monday, the Manhattan oilman won the national indoor for the third time and retired the tall silver trophy. He also won in 1952 and 1958.

If any U.S. tennis officials still cling to the hope of talking Savitt out of retirement and putting him to work on the Davis Cup squad, they can forget it.

"Not a chance," Savitt reiterated. "When I read about Wimbledon and watch the Davis Cup matches, I become more convinced that it's not for me. To play tournament tennis it's necessary to think it all the time and to keep yourself in top shape.

"With my job that's impossible. So why kid myself?"

Ron Holmberg of Brooklyn and Chris Crawford of Piedmont, Calif., won the doubles title by beating England's Billy Knight and France's Pierre Darmon 0-6, 6-4, 7-5, 6-4.

Rod Gilbert Heads Scorers For 10th Week

TORONTO (CP) — For the 10th consecutive week Rod Gilbert heads Ontario Hockey Association Junior A scorers but the biggest battle is being waged for second place.

Jean Ratelle and Bob Cunningham, teammates of Gilbert for Guelph Royals, have been running second and third for eight weeks and the last four weeks only three points have separated the two husky centres.

Official statistics released Monday, including Sunday's games, show Gilbert picked up one goal in two games during last week but his 90 points on 47 goals and 43 assists in 40 games are good enough for an 11-point lead.

Ratelle has fired 31 goals while leading the league in assists with 48 and Cunningham has scored 29 goals and 47 assists for 76 points.

Murray Hall of St. Catharines Teepees moved back into fourth spot, one point ahead of Toronto St. Michael's Bruce Draper. Hall has 68 points, Draper, 67, and the Teepees, now on the move, have taken over sole possession of fifth place.

Goakeeper Jerry Cheevers recorded his second shutout of the season Sunday and continues leading in the average department. In 24 games, he has allowed only 66 goals for a 2.75 average. Wayne Rutledge of Niagara Falls Flyers is second with 3.25 and Deny Jordan of the Royals leads in shutouts with three.

Services Dart League Results

The first-place Skyliners were running true to form in the Belleville Services Dart League last night as they took a 9-2 victory over LaPalms.

In other games RCAF edged the Legion 6-5, McEvoys defeated El Ranchos 7-4, Wilkinsons whipped Atchesons 8-3, Northern Electric shaded Parsons 6-5 and Lucky Lews downed ANAF by a 7-4 score.

Hugh Murray Dies at Soo

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (CP) — Hugh (Muzz) Murray, 68, well known amateur and professional hockey player in the 1920s, died at his home Monday.

Murray played for Seattle Metropolitans of the old Pacific Coast League and in 1919 participated in the only Stanley Cup final never completed.

That year Montreal Canadiens travelled to Seattle but after the series had gone five games and the teams were tied with two wins each and a tie, the set was called off by the Seattle health department because of an influenza epidemic. Montreal player Joe Hall died of the disease.

MOORE WILL PLAY

MONTREAL (CP) — Dickie Moore, rugged winger with Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, will be able to play against the Maple Leafs in Toronto Wednesday, it was disclosed Monday. Moore returned home from Chicago for treatment of a back injury he suffered Sunday night in a game against the Black Hawks.

Minor Hockey

Canadiens and Rangers ousted the Bruins and Red Wings in the Midget hockey league playoffs last night but Black Hawks and Maple Leafs failed to settle their series.

Black Hawks edged the Leafs 3-2 to even the total, goals-to-count series at 6-6. Wayne Woods had a goal and assist for the Hawks while W. Thompson and Gene York also scored. Bill Moffatt and Jim McGuire replied for the Leafs while John Miller had an assist.

Canadiens dumped the Bruins 7-2 for a 15-4 win on the series. Pete Emerson scored three goals, Dave Hannah two, Russ Poste and Carl Boomhower one each. Pete Carver earned a pair of assists with one each for Rick Denard, Gerald Gill, Bob Ethier, Boomhower and Hannah. Jerry Brant and Richard Hay were the Bruin marksmen while G. McMillan and Gregg Chambers had assists.

Rangers blanked the Red Wings 3-0 to capture the round 14-1. Bob Kiser chalked up the shutout while Stan Woodcock potted two goals and Ken Johnson a goal and assist. Other assists went to Dwight Rathwell, Jerry St. Denis and H. Babcock.

The Squirt playoffs also continued last night with three games while the remaining clubs played consolation games.

Maple Leafs led by D. Cass' three goals downed Canadiens 5-2 in their series opener. Muldoon and Jack Short had the other goals. D. Demers and T. Clarke scored for Canadiens.

Bruins defeated the Frontenacs 3-0 behind G. Clement's shutout. G. Sero triggered two goals and J. Wood fired the other.

Red Wings defeated the Browns 5-2 with J. Potts scoring three Wing goals. D. Fobert and J. McCreary had the other Wing goals while W. Farrell and A. Slapkaukas score for the Browns.

In consolation play, Rangers whipped the Macs 11-1 as A. Jones and B. Buchanan scored three goals apiece. T. Meagher and B. Hewitt had two each and B. James one. J. Fancey scored for the Macs.

Black Hawks tied the Royals 5-5 with B. Howe scoring three goals and R. Mitchell getting the other two. Marksmen for the Royals were S. Ellis, T. Hezmes, M. Bishop, A. McLean and J. Laughlin.

Flyers dropped a 7-3 decision to the Barons as G. Burkett of the winners ran wild for no less than six goals. S. Sharpe scored the other Baron goal. D. McCormack had two for Flyers, D. Stairs, R. Drennan and R. Hall one apiece.

BACK RESOLUTION

CHATHAM (CP) — Members of Kent trustees and ratepayers associations supported a move Saturday to have the Ontario education department provide more opportunities for students with low intelligence. Delegates were supporting a Wallaceburg school board resolution.

SMOKIES SEE SIGHTS

MOSCOW (CP) — Trail Smoke Eaters of the Western International Hockey League became tourists Monday, wandering through the halls of the Kremlin and Red Square.

On a European exhibition tour before the world championships in Switzerland next month, the team today plays Moscow Juniors. Trail so far has a tour record of five wins, two losses and a tie.

The staff of the Canadian Embassy will attend today's game—and has been rehearsing a cheering section.

Bay of Quinte Basketball

Northern Electric, grabbing an early lead and hanging on until the final whistle, squeezed past Belleville Lightfoots 63-59 in one of the Bay of Quinte basketball league tilts played at Moira last night.

The winners held 15-10, 30-27 and 49-43 leads by quarters but nearly lost it in the last stanza after a couple of their players fouled out.

Earl Neismith paced the Northern scorers with 24 points while Chuck Kingston hit for 11.

Northern Electric (63) —D. Jones 9; H. Green 7; Pond 4; R. Smith 2; Neismith 24; Orazetti 4; Kingston 11; T. Soule 2.

Belleville Lightfoots (59) — Newsome 6; Reynolds 2; Salter 2; D. Smith 14; Boomhower 9; Farnsworth 13; Marner 5; Savage 9; Kane.

DALLAS SIGNS OLYMPIAN

DALLAS (AP)—J. W. Mashburn, member of the United States Olympic teams of 1952 and 1956, was signed to a contract Monday by Dallas Texans of the American Football League. Mashburn was a star high school football player at Oklahoma City Capitol Hill but did not play football in college. He was a quarter-miler in track at Oklahoma A and M.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Wednesday, February 15

General Tendencies: Now you have a day in which you have so much energy and ambition that you hardly know just where to commence doing the things that are vital and important to your well being and your happiness. But reduce your ideas to a working basis for best use of this excellent day. Channel emotional force for personal happiness, too.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) —A close tie who is very close to some important problem concerning you is the logical one to give you the right advice today. Listen carefully and follow it. Also, consult with some wise personal advisor and be sure.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) —Take that trip to confer with the key person who will give you the information you need to solve some existing problem. Then be sure you get rid of the unwanted and supplant it with the desirable. However, think before you act.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) —While you may be very anxious to take the action that will increase your abundance, be sure you first consult with a higher-up who is both progressive and cautious.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Be sure to tender the assistance that is required of you today and impress others with your good heart and fine capability. Later, be broad-minded where business activities are concerned that will help you to get ahead faster.

Leo (July 2 21o Aug. 21) — Be certain you attend to any bookkeeping or accounting that is important to you and others. Be efficient and you will be far more successful in the future. Evening is then ideal for romantic pleasure. Be kind and thoughtful.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)— Be sure you know what your relative position is with all key persons. Come to a better understanding with associates and reach greater accord with competitors. P.M. Take your loved one out to interesting places, dine regally.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — By being cheerful you make the lives of others more happy as well as become more successful in your career. P.M. take any health treatments you need and see that surroundings are in A-1 order.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) —This can be a day for both enjoyment and making great strides forward in your career. If you consult with an expert early in the day, you can then plan your time and activities so that you get the finest results with minimum effort.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 o Dec. 21)—If you seek out those experts who have the know-how as well as the right background you can today reach great accord with all who are important in your life as well as command a greater income, and to spare, soon.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — If you sit down to a conference with associates who seem disgruntled, you can come to a true understanding by talking over problems, airing views and future plans. Be cooperative and have friendly fun in P.M.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) —Do the things today that will make your present job more lucrative as well as satisfying. You have deep understanding right now, so don't procrastinate in taking the right steps. Real success can be yours. — Grow.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) —You are able to make satisfactory arrangements at this time, so be positive in all that you do with regard to important matters. P.M. your efforts will also make you far more popular and liked. Go out socially and have fun.

If your child is born today . . there will be a good deal of success in this chart since there is a great understanding of the practical things of life. However, you must early teach your progeny to be steadfast and perserving and to always finish one task before tackling another. Give a good combined course of education that will fit your youngster for any profession of importance. The philanthropist is definitely in this chart.

KING'S BAN

Golf was made illegal in 1457 by James II of England, who hoped the people would spend more time perfecting their archery.

Don't Neglect Slipping
FALSE TEETH
Do false teeth drop, slip or wobble when you talk, eat, laugh or sneeze? Don't be annoyed and embarrassed by such handicaps. FASTEETH, an alkaline (non-acid) powder to sprinkle on your plates, keeps false teeth more firmly set. Gives confident feeling of security and added comfort. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Get FASTEETH today at any drug counter.

CHILD FOR ADOPTION

ELIZABETH — a very bright 8 year old, has limited chances of knowing a home and parents of her very own unless an interested couple can be found through this advertisement. Part of the difficulty in finding parents for her is because she is a Canadian Indian. She's an attractive youngster with regular features, blue eyes and a medium complexion — unusual physical characteristics for her race. Elizabeth is a good student, strong willed and quite talkative. She needs fairly young parents who would enjoy a child who is eager to learn about everything going on around her. However, Elizabeth's greatest need is to feel completely sure of somebody's love. If you are Protestant and think you would be interested in adopting Elizabeth, write to:

the unsuccessful amendment. It was the first time at this session of Parliament that a member has voted at variance with his party colleagues.

Mr. Nasserden said later, outside the House, that he thought the bill should be set over for six months in view of the national oil policy announced recently by the government.

MIGHT BE INTERESTED

With this policy in effect—envisaging domestic production of 800,000 barrels daily in 1963—Canadian capital might display "more than a passing interest" in the domestic market for petroleum byproducts. It should be given the opportunity to assess the possibilities in this market.

But Mr. Nasserden said he did not think the Aurora company should actually be denied incorporation. He was not present to vote on second reading.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Bow River), sponsor of the private member's bill, dismissed as a "red herring" CCF charges that the bill would hand control of a Canadian utility to "Texas Buccaneers."

FALL BY WAYSIDE

Two private member's resolutions debated Monday were unable to reach a vote and fell by the wayside with little chance of coming up again at this session.

One was a proposal by Leon Crestohl (L—Montreal Cartier) calling for income tax exemption on tuition fees paid to universities and a number of other educational institutions.

The other, sponsored by Lucien Cardin (L—Richelieu-Verchères), called for an engineering study of a proposed Richelieu waterway. It would link the St. Lawrence River with New York via the Richelieu River, Lake Champlain and the Hudson River.

KATANGA PLANS

ba's detention and announced escape even before his death was announced, it had not been able to arrange an interview with the Katanga authorities on the matter.

The regime of Premier Moise Tshombe of Katanga announced the death of Lumumba and his two companions three days after saying the trio had escaped from a prison farm by overpowering their guards.

Assassination of Lumumba left leadership of the Congo's leftist forces in the hands of Communist-trained Antoine Gizenga, 41, who has set up a rump regime in Stanleyville, capital of Oriental province 775 miles northeast of Leopoldville.

The UN Congo command sent an ultimatum to the Katanga government to halt an offensive it has launched against Baluba tribesmen, but it was expected the secessionist regime would ignore the order.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations,

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

stage rocket travelled 12,500 kilometres (7,810 mile) to the area of the Marshal Islands and Soviet scientists said it hit the area with almost pin-point accuracy.

May 15: A cosmic ship was launched in orbit around the earth containing a dummy man. It weighed 5,450 kilograms (11,990 pounds). It had a nimimum height of 312 kilometres (195 miles) and a maximum of 369 (239 miles).

Aug. 19: The second cosmic ship—the Arknik — weighing 4,600 kilograms (10,120 pounds) and carrying the dogs Strelka and Belka circled the earth and then returned safely to earth dogs, mice, flies and plants alive. It had a minimum height of 306 kilometres (190 miles) and a maximum of 339 kilometres (210 miles).

Dec. 1: The third cosmic ship was launched weighing 4,563 kilograms (10,038 pounds). It carried two dogs and other animals but failed to return to the earth on command and burned up on entering the atmosphere. Its circuit was low with a minimum height of 187 kilometres (115 miles) and a maximum of 265 kilometres (165 miles).

Feb. 4: A heavy artificial satellite weighing 6,483 kilograms (14,262 pounds) was sent into orbit. Its minimum height was 223.5 kilometres (140 miles and its maimum 327.6 (200 miles). It apparently is still in orbit but scientists said it is not expected to return to the earth but pass into the atmosphere and burn up in the near future.

Feb. 12: 1,420 - pound rocket launched for Venus from earth satellite that went into orbit the same day. The Venus rocket will cover 26,000,000 miles over a period from 92 to 108 days, Soviet scientists said.

Canadian Troops Want Allowance Made Longer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP) — Canadian troops with the United Nations force in The Congo are bitter about a $100-a-month special allowance ordered for them.

They are angry because the government has ordered the allowance made retroactive only to last Dec. 1.

There have been no incidents arising from the announcement, made in Ottawa Friday. But the air has been blue around living quarters of soldiers who have served in The Congo since last August.

Their feeling is that they had the hardest part of the job, working through the strife-torn early months. They had expected the allowance would be paid them from the start of their tour of duty here.

TO ASK REVIEW

Col. D. P. Smith, officer commanding the Canadian Signal Unit in Leopoldville, said he planned to request a reconsideration.

There have been few complaints about the amount of the allowance. But signalmen here say they are being "cheated" out of money for the early months of their tour.

Officers said they were bewildered by the move. The early arrivals in The Congo, they say, faced terrible working conditions. Troops that arrived later have stepped into a smooth-running operation and have better living conditions.

The allowance, paid in addition to regular pay and allowances, is the same for all ranks. It is effective for some 280 Canadian soldiers and 30 RCAF officers and men serving in The Congo.

Quinte COSSA Basketball

By BILL BURLEY

Belleville Collegiate bantams met with the Quinte Saints yesterday in a revenge match by Quinte to recover the loss received from BCI in their first meeting of the season. BCI, after seven straight games without a loss, went down fighting 35-23. BCI now drops back a bit from a sole first place position to a tie for first with the Moira Ramblers.

In the first quarter Quinte came on like lightning with Eves of Quinte hooping up seven straight points. Coming on in the second, Quinte stretched their lead by nine points for a safe margin in the half. The third opened with Reppard of Quinte sending home five quick points. There wasn't much action in this quarter by the BCIers. Quinte swished a couple of fast ones in the first of the fourth. Trying in vain to stop these attempts was Swan of BCI, who fouled out of the game while trying too hard. BCI gained a little but not enough, as the Quinte Saints gave the BCI team their first loss of the season by a score of 35-23.

Crawford Metals pulled away in the second half of their way to a 120-78 victory over Belleville Teachers in another B. of Q. hoop tilt at M.S.S. last night. The game was a four-point affair.

The loop-leaders held a slim 48-43 lead at the half-way mark in the game but turned loose a powerful attack in the second half to win going away.

Bert Faulkner led the winners with 30 points while Phil Bennett and Teddy Batchelor each connected for 28. Stan Jackson with 12 and Marv Billings with 10, also hit double figures.

Max Woolley starred for the Teachers with 32 points. Gord Mutter hooped 17, Jack Sisson 14 and Jack Perry 11.

Crawford Metals (120) — Walmsley 4, Bennett 28, Ablarde, Faulkner 30, Batchelor 28, Rogers 8, Jackson 12, Billings 10.

Bell. Teachers (78) — Bell 4, Mutter 17, Sisson 14, Perry 11, Woolley 32, Bradley.

Provincial warning centres are not only connected with Ottawa but with NORAD regions which take in parts of Canada. Thus British Columbia and Alberta would also get information from the NORAD regional headquarters at Tacoma, Wash.

Part of the warning system is plotting fallout patterns for every major target area. These patterns are based on weather information and are plotted twice a day. They indicate what areas would be subjected to radiation from fallout carried downwind from the target area.

MARMORA

Marmora Downs Campbellford By 4-2 Score

MARMORA (Special) — Another high-scoring performance by playing coach Bobby Taylor provided the Marmora Millionaires with a 4-2 win over Campbellford here last night in an OHA Intermediate "C" game.

Taylor scored three of his club's goals as the Millionaires jumped into a 3-1 first-period lead and potted the lone goal in the third after Campbellford had cut the lead to 3-2 in the middle heat.

Jackie Gill scored Marmora's insurance goal early in the third as well as assisting on two of Taylor's goals. Harold Maloney also drew two asissts and Ray Darrah one.

Herrington and Dooher were the Campbellford marksmen with B. Scott and Collins drewing assists.

Campbellford drew all four of the club's penalties in the first period while Marmora picked up eight over all.

First Period

1. Marmora—Taylor (Gill) 7.25
2. Marmora—Taylor (Maloney, Gill) 13.19

U.S.-Canadian Relations In Serious Need of Repair Talks to Both Sides Show

By MAX HARRELSON

OTTAWA (AP) — The border is often hailed as the longest unfortified frontier in the world.

It separates two peoples who are basically much the same in viewpoint.

Both have the frontier heritage of hustle and independence. They have similar likes in movies and mystery stories. They drive virtually identical cars and bake virtually the same cake mixes.

The fact that one of these countries has only a tenth of the population of the other tends sometimes to set up a sort of Little Brother-Big Brother relationship. Little Brother feels like kicking shins if he considers that Big Brother is throwing his weight around unduly.

Even so, a reporter who discusses U.S.-Canadian relations with Canadians and with Americans in Canada cannot escape the impression that today these relations are in serious need of repair. A growing feeling in Canada, whether of nationalism or of a nation feeling its own strength, has tended to erode some of the traditional marks of friendship between the two neighbors.

Over much of this rich and generally prosperous country there seems to be more and more a feeling that Canadians must assert themselves more forcefully lest their own basic culture be overwhelmed by an American tide.

Both Canadian and U.S. officials acknowledge that the situation is becoming aggravated, but they minimize its gravity.

While the manifestations have been mainly on the Canadian side so far, there have recently been rumblings from the United States. Some U.S. newspapers have struck back sharply at actions they considered unfriendly.

Opinion surveys indicate a sharp increase in anti-American sentiment in Canada. Public speakers, officials and private citizens talk about a deterioration in Canadian-American relations. The man-in-the-street writes to his newspaper about it.

A visitor cannot travel across Canada without being aware of the changing climate. One of Canada's largest newspapers, the Montreal Star, took note of it this way:

"A chart of the temperature of Canadian-U.S. relations would undoubtedly show at the present time a bit of fever."

A Montreal resident wrote a national magazine:

"Canadians should not hate the Americans. They should kick them right out of the country."

Another letter said:

"We don't hate the United States. We heartily dislike the way Uncle Sam dominates and exploits Canada."

Not everybody agrees with this attitude.

One of the most outspoken Canadians against the present trend is Robert M. Fowler, president of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, which represents Canada's single largest industry. He said recently:

"If we are honest about it we must admit that we have done rather badly in our relations with the United States over the past year. There are many old, and new, frictions between the two friendly nations.

"In Canada, the simplest way for a public speaker to catch the headlines is to give a rousing speech which masquerades as rugged, independent Canadianism, but is really no more than anti-Americanism. This is a cheap and easy way to seek popular acclaim; and it is dangerous and may be disastrous."

The decline of good will and confidence is partly due to emphasis by political leaders on Canadianism and on their expressed fears that Canada is in danger of losing its identity as a result of U.S. pressure in the economic field. It is partly due to a strong revolt of Canadian intellectuals against what some call the influence of American hucksterism on Canadian culture.

CANADA A 'COLONY'

One of Canada's leading authors, Hugh MacLennan, wrote that Canada has become "a mental and spiritual colony of the United States."

He asked whether Canada's future is to be thrown away simply because "it is easier to sink into a colonial status and allow the Americans, with the best will in the world, to turn us into copies of themselves."

Another reason for Canadian unrest is concern over Canada's almost total dependence on U.S. foreign policy. Many Canadians disagree violently with such U.S. actions as the U-2 reconnaissance flights over the Soviet Union. They are afraid they will be dragged into a nuclear war.

One Canadian commentator said:

"We're stuck with the United States. We sink or swim with them. And we hate that."

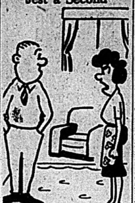
PEARSON BLAMES DIEF

Lester B. Pearson, leader of Canada's second strongest political party, says part of the trouble is caused by efforts of Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's government to blame the United States for Canada's current economic difficulties.

Pearson is urging both countries to take a fresh look at their relations—"to clear away some of the underbrush which could make these relations a jungle."

Tomorrow: Canada's daily dose of Americanism.

"Jest a Second"



"Why did you invite your twin brother here? I can't stand the sight of him."

Human Body Organs May Be Kept in Banks

WINNIPEG (CP) — A heart specialist says the day may not be far off when hospitals will maintain banks of human body organs similar to existing blood and eye banks.

Dr. Morley Cohen of Winnipeg told a service club meeting that medical researchers have shown it is technically possible to transplant a human heart.

To date this work has been confined to animals but he said it is believed these experiments will eventually lead to the stage where humans will be able to "exchange badly diseased hearts for new organs."

"It could mean that if a healthy person were to be killed in an accident, for instance, and if he had previously willed his heart it could conceivably be transplanted to someone with a damaged heart."

Experiments with animals had shown that hearts can be removed, cooled for eight hours, then made to beat again.

One of the main problems in heart transplant experiments had been overcoming the action of antibodies. Experiments were under way to test effectiveness of radiation on the areas of the body that produce antibodies in hopes of eliminating them.

In experiments in the United States, dogs had been able to live with transplanted hearts for several weeks before a condition described as "tissue incompatibility" developed. This condition is similar to that which develops in the case of kidney transplants that do not involve identical twins.

Dr. Cohen, a winner of an Albert Lasker award for his research on open-heart surgery, is doing postgraduate work at the University of Minnesota.

President's Message!

It is a pleasure to report that 1960 has been another highly successful year. Under the leadership of our fine professional staff, the Belleville Association has provided both the children and adults with a full program of physical and social activities, and a meeting place for many community groups. Paid memberships in Y.M.C.A. program increased almost 20% over 1959, while more than 89,000 persons attended meetings or classes, or used the Y.M.C.A. facilities. Elsewhere on this page you will read of these activities in more detail. I want to express my thanks and appreciation to all who contributed in time or money to the welfare of the Association during the past year.

Again we are grateful to the Belleville United Appeal, whose financial support has made it possible to provide this program and balance our budget, while maintaining modest membership fees.

1960 was a busy year as preparations were made to launch the 1961 campaign for funds to erect a new Y.M.C.A. building. Preliminary building plans and cost estimates were established with the architect of the Building and Furnishings Service of the National Council of Y.M.C.A.'s in New York, and early in October the Board of Directors approved the plans and set the Campaign objective as the minimum requirement for provision of a full Y.M.C.A. program. We look forward to our Campaign with confidence in the full support of the Y.M.C.A. family of friends, and the community as a whole.

PHYSICAL DEPARTMENT...

Physical department activities are so numerous and varied that to review them would require a very lengthy report. Swimming, Gymnastics, Basketball, Trampoline, Weight Lifting, Judo, Life Saving, Ladies 'Keep Fit', Business Men's Classes, are but a few of the activities. High standards were maintained at all times.

Total record participation by individuals was 50,670.

- 68 Gym and Swim classes weekly.
- 336 boys and girls passed beginners Swim Tests.
- 477 boys and girls passed other Swim Tests.
- 30 boys and girls passed Life Saving Tests
- 39 boys and girls passed the Public School "Learn to Swim" classes.
- 243 boys and girls participated in the annual Gymnastic Championship.
- 224 persons enrolled in special "June Learn to Swim".
- A Business Men's Class was started in the Fall featuring 5BX Physical Fitness Plan.
- 39 passed the Scuba and Skin Diving course. Ron Chapman the local instructor has been appointed as a certified diver and instructor by the American Diving Association.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING...

- 36 boy and girl members of the Leaders Corps met regularly each week to learn leadership skills in supervising Physical Education activities.
- A two-day Camp Leadership training was given to 15 camp counsellors and staff, prior to commencement of the Day Camp at Oak Lake.
- 30 members of the Boys and Girls Leaders Corps attended a 3-day Leaders' Conference in Ottawa.
- 2 Leaders attended a two week Physical Leaders Corps Training Course at Geneva Park.
- 2 Leaders attended the Y's Men's Leadership Development course at Geneva Park.
- 12 members of the Foremen's Club attended a two-day Seminar at Geneva Park.
- 3 Y's Men attended a Training School in Cornwall.
- 22 members of the So-Ed attended different Training Schools and Work Shops.

SPECIAL COMMUNITY SERVICES...

- 39 different community groups used the Y.M.C.A. as their headquarters, 257 times.
- The swimming pool was used by the Belleville Scouts and Cubs regularly each Saturday for instruction and to pass tests.
- The City Police, the O.P.P., and City Firemen used the gymnasium and swimming pool every Wednesday morning.
- Swim pool was used by the Picton Cubs for swim instruction regularly each week.
- Nurses of the Belleville General Hospital had their Physical Training Program every Thursday, at the Y.M.C.A.
- In co-operation with the Water Safety Council and Public School Board, the 'Y' gave swimming instruction to all non-swimmers, grades 8, 7, and 6 students of the Belleville Public School. 59 boys and girls learned to swim and passed our tests.
- Date Camp site at Oak Lake was used every weekend in June by various Cub and Scout groups.
- No deserving boy or girl was refused membership in any 'Y' activity because of inability to pay.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE...

The Young Men's Christian Association is a world-wide fellowship united by a common loyalty to Jesus Christ for the purpose of building Christian personality and a Christian Society.

CHRISTIAN EMPHASIS...

The Christian purpose of the Y.M.C.A. through Group Devotions, Sermonettes, Induction Ceremonies, Church Parades, and individual contacts, has been kept active in our program. It is this, sometimes intangible, feature which continues to give the 'Y' vitality and growth. Members have been encouraged to join and attend the church of their choice.

'Y' RESIDENCE...

Residence consists of 27 single rooms. An 8,008 bed-night occupancy was registered during the year. This is a "Home-Away-From-Home" Dormitory Service for new comers to town until they are established.

DAY CAMP...

Both boys and girls Day Camps were full with 60 campers, and 9 counsellors and staff attending each camp. Crafts Swimming, Nature Lore, Camp Crafts, and Hikes, featured the camp program. The Day Camp is sponsored by the Y's Men's Club.

SERVING YOUTH & YOUNG MEN IN DISTRICT...

148 members from out-of-town were on register in '60. In addition, numerous other youth groups— church, school, Scouts and Girl Guides — used 'Y' facilities, our swimming pool in particular. Out-of-town youth who were served, came within a radius of Picton, Trenton, Batawa, Frankford, Foxboro, Stirling, Tweed, Napanee and Deseronto.

ADULT PROGRAM...

All Adult Clubs — the Y's Men's Club, Y's Menettes, Foremen's Club, So-Ed, Table Tennis, Ladies "Day Out", enjoyed a rewarding experience in wide variety of activities. Activities in themselves are not good enough unless the emphasis is on the purpose of the Y.M.C.A. "The development of Christian Personality and a Christian Society". The Y.M.C.A. attempts to create a climate and provide opportunties in program for persons to attain higher levels of relationships.

YOUTH PROGRAM...

There were 1151 boys, girls and young people under 18 years of age registered in 1960. Boys and girls classes were well attended with a program of gym activities, swimming and crafts. Skiing, Hi-Y Club activities, Father & Daughter and Mother & Son Banquets, Fun Nights, Parents Nights, Easter Egg Treasure Hunt, Movies and Table Tennis are but a few of other Youth activities.

WORLD SERVICE AND BUILDINGS FOR BROTHERHOOD...

Under the chairmanship of Mr. A. S. Robb our pledge to raise $3,800.00 over a period of two years ($1500.00 for World Service program and $2300.00 for Buildings for Brotherhood) has been fulfilled. We express our appreciation to those whose generous support made it possible to extend 'Y' services to less fortunate youth in other lands.

Mid-January Jobless Highest in 15 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's unemployment jumped sharply upward to 693,000 at mid-January, highest jobless figure for any month in the last 15 years, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The January unemployment figure—amounting to 10.8 per cent of the labor force — was 163,000 higher than the jobless figure at mid-December.

It was 146,000 higher than a year earlier and 56,000 higher than the previous post-war unemployment peak of 637,000, set in March of 1958.

The 10.8 per cent ratio of people out of jobs to the total labor force of 6,396,000 compares with 10.6 per cent at the 1958 unemployment peak. It is also higher than 8.8 per cent in January, 1960 and 9.5 per cent in January, 1959.

MORE AT WORK TOO

While the ranks of the unemployed jumped substantially in the new year, employment was also 47,000 higher than a year earlier, despite a seasonal decline of 199,000.

The unemployment report is prepared by the bureau of statistics on the basis of a survey of 35,000 households across Canada. Analysis of the figures is done by the federal labor department.

Hamilton Man Remanded on Three Charges

HAMILTON (CP) — Arthur Padbury, 38, of Hamilton was remanded to Feb. 28 Tuesday on three charges of contributing to juvenile delinquency.

He pleaded not guilty to the charges, involving three Toronto girls, two 13 and the third 14

One of the 13-year-olds read aloud before a closed court a tribute she had penned last November to the accused. The inscription, on a smudged page torn from what Padbury described as his "beatnik bible," read: "I think you're the most wonderful man in the world."

The message was written, she added, before Padbury forced her and the 14-year-old to have sexual intercourse with him.

The three girls were picked up by police the day after the alleged offence when they wandered to the suburban home of the mayor of Stoney Creek who notified police. They were later convicted as juvenile delinquents.

One girl testified she and her two girl friends ran away from their Toronto homes in November.

Rioting Cairo Students Fire Belgian Embassy

CAIRO (Reuters) — Rioting students today set fire to the Belgian Embassy here in protest against the killing of Patrice Lumumba.

Smoke poured from the windows of the embassy building and flames licked at the curtains as the students tried to burn the building down.

The rioters also started a small fire at the rear of the American Embassy and burned two American-owned cars outside. Crowds also stoned the United States Information Office.

Stones also were hurled at United Nations headquarters and at the British Embassy.

ROUGH DIPLOMATS

WARSAW (Reuters)—A yelling mob of demonstrators broke into the Belgian Embassy here today and roughed up diplomats in protest against the killing of Patrice Lumumba.

SECOND BODY FOUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP found a second body Tuesday night in the gale-whipped waters of Georgia Strait off Texada Island. It is believed to be one of seven persons missing aboard a 40-foot camp tender since Monday.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: A surge of cold Arctic air spread through Northern Ontario on Tuesday, dropping temperatures to well below zero. It reached the lower Great Lakes this morning. Meanwhile, a disturbance over Iowa is moving eastward and should bring snow and scattered showers to Southern Ontario today, to be followed by clearing skies later tonight. Another storm in the current series has moved into Oregon and will also race eastward to bring moderating temperatures and snow to Northern Ontario Thursday.

ONT. WILL NOT ABANDON HOG MARKETING PLAN - - Frost

Stormy Debate On Estimates

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost assured the legislature Tuesday night that Ontario's compulsory hog-marketing plan will not be abandoned.

During a stormy debate on the department of agriculture estimates, Mr. Frost said CCF Leader MacDonald was injuring negotiations being conducted by the government - appointed Farm Products Marketing Board and the Hog Producers Marketing Board to find a new method of selling hogs.

He said hog prices rose from $20 a hundredweight to $30 in a year's time since the government took steps to establish a strong hog-marketing plan.

Peter Manley (L—Stormont) said hog prices may have gone up, but cheese prices during the last year dropped to 32 cents a pound from 39.

At 11:15 p.m. — after more than five hours of discussion—Mr. Frost reminded the legislature that the individual estimates of the department had not even been touched.

SAYS RULES BROKEN

"The whole proceedings since this afternoon have been out of order," he said, referring to the time consumed by members' speeches.

The legislature was adjourned at the suggestion of Liberal Leader Wintermeyer because of the late hour. Vote on the department's estimates of $17,183,000 will be held Thursday.

Earlier, Farquhar Oliver (L—Grey South) led the opposition attack on the government's agricultural policies with charges that the agricultural department was "25 years behind the times" and couldn't sell Ontario farm products abroad unless it adopted new attitudes.

In presenting his estimates, Agriculture Minister Goodfellow said the 1960 crop year was satisfactory to Ontario farmers, whose cash income was estimated at $295,000,000 — an increase of about $28,000,000 over 1959.

However, he said, the cost of goods and services required by farmers also continued to rise.

Health Minister Dymond said his department is gravely concerned about the problem of scurvy among Ontario's children. He said it is an "undeniable fact" there were 35 cases of scurvy last year in Toronto. The problem, he added, wasn't one of money, even for low-income groups.

CHATHAM (CP) — Board of education Tuesday night approved teaching of French in Chatham's elementary schools. A committee was appointed to investigate probable costs of the program.

Says 'Dear Old Lady' Long Dead Should Not Set Today's Protocol

OTTAWA (CP)—"She was a dear old lady, but she died 59 years ago, and now we are in the year 1961."

That was the epitaph pinned on Queen Victoria Tuesday night by Liberal Senator Jean-François Pouliot of Quebec in the course of debate on a matter of protocol—his motion to amend Canada's "table of preference."

Veteran senators discoursed with considerable feeling on the merits of changing the present order, under which former prime ministers are relegated to 88th position.

Ahead of ex-prime ministers in the official table as set out in the Parliamentary Guide, said Senator Pouliot, are 36 Canadians and 51 foreign diplomats. He proposed that a new position—"2-A"—be established for former prime ministers, following the prime minister in power who now ranks No. 2 behind the governor-general.

The table is used only on formal occasions such as state dinners.

The motion—which is not a formal piece of legislation but merely the "expression of a wish" that the government consider amending the table—eventually was adopted without opposition.

The name of Queen Victoria came up when Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) said the first order of preference was promulgated by her around the time of Confederation. He wondered whether it was "etiquette" for Parliament to try to change the present order—whether it would not be more proper to petition the present Queen.

"Now, Queen Victoria has been dead since 1897—or 1900, or perhaps one year more," replied Senator Pouliot. "She was a dear old lady, but she died 59 years ago, and now we are in the year 1961.

"I have the greatest respect for the Royal Family, but I do not believe that we should ape

Screaming Demonstrators Break up UN Council Meet While Stevenson Speaking

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Screaming and fist - swinging demonstrators rushed into the gallery and interrupted a meeting of the United Nations Security Council today, during a speech by U.S. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson.

The demonstration — wildest in the history of the United Nations — occurred while the 11-member council was debating the Congolese question and the killing of Premier Patrice Lumumba.

The demonstrators, who appeared to be all or mostly Negroes, clashed with guards. In the corridors outside the assembly hall men and women mixed in the wild melee.

Council President Sir Patrick Dean of Britain recessed the meeting while guards cleared the gallery.

Stevenson was issuing a ringing call for support of the UN in defiance of Russian criticism when the violence began.

About 10 Negro men ran down the aisles of the public gallery shouting "Vive Lumba."

The council chamber was more crowded for this crucial session than at any time since last fall's gathering of world leaders for the 15th General Assembly of the UN

The worst confusion was under control within some 15 minutes.

"Don't shoot me," one demonstrater shouted as he was hustled to an elevator.

At noon, Stevenson resumed

LONDON (AP) — Western alarm mounted today as Communist support for Patrice Lumumba's political heirs in The Congo raised the fearful spectre of a Korea-like war in the heart of Africa.

Banner newspaper headlines across Western Europe showed the concern at the Soviet Union's offer of "all possible assistance and support" to the Lumumbist government of Antoine Gizenga at Stanleyville, controlling much of the northern Congo.

Fears were expressed that the United Nations attempt to prevent civil war in The Congo would collapse, that Russia and its Communist allies would supply Gizenga's forces, and that the United States and its allies would have to bulwark the Leopoldville government of President Joseph Kasavubu and Maj.-Gen. Joseph Mobutu or see the vast territory go to the Communists by default.

President Nasser's United Arab Republic Tuesday night officially recognized Gizenga's regime as the legal government of The Congo.

Red China quickly lined up. Premier Chou En-lai cabled Gizenga:

"The Chinese people are deeply convinced that the Congolese people will surely turn their grief into strength and, under the leadership of your excellency and the lawful Congolese government, will fight to

Armored Personnel Carrier Will Be Ordered for Army

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Harkness's Valentine to the Canadian army is the Bobcat armored personnel carrier.

The minister announced Tuesday in the Commons that tenders will be called in about two years for 480 of the tracked, over-land, over-water vehicles. He didn't say so but cost is estimated at $17,500,000.

Mr. Harkness said an initial order for 20 pilot models—they will be for user trials—has been awarded to Canadian Car Company, Montreal, the original development contractor. These 20 and production tooling will cost $3,500,000, the minister added. They will be completed in about two years.

The Bobcat can carry about 12 soldiers, or cargo, or be used as a mount for a 105-millimetre Howitzer. It can also be used in other models as a weapons carrier, communications vehicle or ambulance. It mounts machine-guns.

The Bobcat can travel cross-country at 25 miles an hour. It provides protection against small arms fire, shell fragments and, to some extent, against the effects of nuclear weapons.

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Mayor Ernie Reed said Tuesday night Fort William is far from out of contention for capturing the Bobcat contract.

He reminded a council meeting that two years ago a Lakehead delegation went to Ottawa to protest the imminent closing of the Canadian Car plant here.

The government told the group it could not interfere with private enterprise but would stipulate, where practical, that defence contracts be fulfilled in Fort William.

Alderman Ben Scavarelli told the council meeting: "If they tool-up for 20 units in Montreal, they'll produce the rest here."

Green, Pearson and Argue All Support Hammarskjold

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian leaders lost no time in rallying to the defence of UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold Tuesday following Russia's most vicious attack yet on the man and his office.

Spokesmen for three parties joined in expressions of support of the embattled secretary-general, accused by Moscow of complicity in the death of former Congolese premier Patrice Lumumba.

Both in the House and outside, Russia itself came under attack for its contribution to the current Congo mess.

External Affairs Minister Green agreed with a suggestion from Opposition Leader Pearson that a "major difficulty" facing the UN in The Congo has been the policy of the Soviet Union.

In a speech Tuesday night to the directors of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, Mr. Green said that from the start, the UN peace operation in The Congo — toward which Canada has contributed some 250 non-combat personnel—has had to contend with obstacles thrown up by the Soviet Union.

Tuesday afternoon, Soviet Ambassador Amasasp Aroutunian was summoned to the East Block on Parliament Hill and apprised of the Canadian position. He was received by Norman Robertson, undersecretary for external affairs.

Shortly after the Commons convened Mr. Pearson asked Mr. Green to repudiate Russia's attack and pledge Parliament's support for "this dedicated international servant." Mr. Green read a prepared statement in which he said Russia's unilateral action "can have no legal effect on the position of Mr. Hammarskjold."

Canada would continue to support Mr. Hammarskjold and the Congo operation. MPs greeted this statement with desk-thumping applause.

CCF Leader Argue told Mr. Green he was certain the government's stand has the complete support of all Canadians.

SET DEFENCE BUDGET

LONDON (CP)—The British government Tuesday announced its 1961 defence plans — generally a continuation of existing policies—with a warning that the "rising power of China" cannot be ignored. The defence white paper said the defence bill for the year will rise by £39,000,000 to a total of £1,655,600,000.

RAIL POLICIES CAUSE HOT HOUSE DEBATE

Lionel Chevrier Centre of Tempest

OTTAWA (CP) — French-speaking MPs from opposite sides of the Commons clashed Tuesday night over federal railway policies.

At times, debate seemed to get off the track, wandering widely from the matter at hand —a government resolution leading to legislation to authorize the CNR to build a 60-mile, $8,400,000 branch line into Quebec's resource-rich northland.

Several times, Chairman Jacques Flynn had to remind MPs to get back on the rails, to discuss the Mattagami rail line project before them. The resolution finally was adopted and the actual legislation was introduced for first reading.

AUTHORIZES LOANS

It authorizes the CNR to construct the line, gives the federal treasury authority to advance temporary loans up to $9,660,000 for the job and permits the CNR to issue government-guaranteed securities to pay for the project.

The resolution was the first step toward parliamentary approval of a measure authorizing a rail development that will link the base metal area of Mattagami Lake, some 50 miles north of Ottawa, with the CNR's Chibougamau, Que., line.

Mr. Chevrier, who represents Montreal Laurier, set the stage for the later clash when he said the official opposition objects strenuously to the government "blowing its top" and boasting that the 60-mile Mattagami line inaugurates a new national policy. From 1951, under the Liberals, Parliament had authorized almost 700 miles of railway.

Martial Asselin (PC—Charlevoix) said this works out to about 31 miles a year for the 22 years the Liberals were in office.

Maurice Bourget (L — Levis) and Roland English (PC—Gaspe) sparred with each other over election promises on rail lines before Mr. Flynn finally interjected.

RAPS CHEVRIER

Jean Noel Tremblay (PC—Roberval) concentrated his remarks on an attack of Mr. Chevrier's "anti - Quebec" attitude while minister of transport. Even after the Chibougamau rail extension had been approved, he said, it had taken the former Liberal government three years to complete the project.

Just before the 10 p.m. adjournment, the Commons whisked two bills through second reading, committee study and third and final reading.

One repeals an old pre-Confederation tax on ships entering Halifax Harbor to pay a Weekly Publishers' Job Insurance Scheme May Be Adopted by Govt.

OTTAWA (CP)—The government may have found a way to make unemployment insurance more sound from an insurance point of view.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker declined in an interview to comment directly on such a proposal by the board of directors of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association, but said the Association's brief presented to the cabinet Tuesday was "well-reasoned."

One asociation suggestion was to model unemployment insurance after provincial workmen's compensation plans in which the amount of risk involved is considered in setting the rate of contributions to the fund.

Employer and employee contributions to the unemployment insurance fund now are made on a sliding scale according to the insured person's income while working, without regard to the employment stability of the industry in which he is engaged.

The weekly newspapers said some consideration should be given to the employment record of the industries involved. In the weekly publishing field, for instance, there is a long record of relatively stable employment, unaffected generally by seasonal conditions. The brief suggested employees in that field might contribute less because they are less likely to be unemployed.

An informed source said the government is definitely interested in measures to put unemployment insurance on a basis that would be considered actuarially sound by insurance men. Recommendations are being prepared in the labor department.

Heavy unemployment has drawn heavily upon the fund's resources. From a peak of $921,000,000 in September, 1956, the fund dropped to $320,000,000 at the end of 1960.

Sixteen Members Of U.S. Skating Team On Airliner

Belgian Peasant In Field Was Crushed

BRUSSELS (CP-AP-Reuters) Seventy - three persons, including the United States figure skating team, perished today in the flaming crash of a Sabena Airlines Boeing 707 jet. Fifty-four Americans and one Canadian were among the dead in the jet.

The Canadian figure - skating team, which like the American squad was en route to the world championships in Prague, Czechoslovakia, also left New York's Idlewild Airport Tuesday night aboard another plane bound for Amsterdam.

The one Canadian listed among the dead was Victor Maes of Vanessa, Ont.

Disaster struck at 10:05 a.m. as the $5,000,000 plane, its engines sounding oddly, sought a landing in bright sunshine after the flight from New York.

FUEL TANKS EXPLODE

It slammed to earth three miles north of Brussels International Airport and went up in flames fed by fuel as the aircraft's tanks exploded one by one.

All 61 passengers and the crew of 11, died. A Belgian farmer tilling his cabbage patch was struck and killed.

Mrs. Maribel Vinson Owen, 49 of Winchester, Mass., nine times the U.S. figure skating champion, was killed along with two daughters who were members of the current team. The girls were Laurence Owen, 16, and Maribel Owen, 20. Mrs. Owen last weekend had seen Laurence win the North American championship at Philadelphia over Wendy Griner of Toronto.

Mrs. Owen and coach Deane McMinn of Lomita, Calif., were accompanying the 18 - member U.S. team to Prague. Mrs. Owen's husband died in 1952.

The team is the fifth major sports group wiped out by plane crashes in a dozen years, including soccer teams of Italy, Britain and Denmark. Sixteen members of the California Polytechnic football team were killed in the crackup of a chartered plane last Oct. 29.

KING AT SCENE

King Baudouin and Queen Fabiola walked grim - faced through the still-smoking wreckage this afternoon while rescue workers continued their search for the last three bodies.

The Boeing crashed in a small pond and started burning almost at once.

"'There were no survivors,' a fire officer said. "'They have all been burned.'"

Charred bodies were removed to a temporary morgue at the airport. An injured Belgian farm laborer, companion of the dead cabbage patch tiller, was taken to a hospital. He had lost a leg.

In addition to the two Owens

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tuesday, Feb. 14, 1961

External Affairs Minister Green pledged Canada's firm support of Dag Hammarskjold and roundly condemned Russia's withdrawal of recognition of the UN secretary-general.

Opposition Leader Pearson called for a repudiation of Russia's effort to destroy the position of Mr. Hammarskjold and pledged Parliament's support "for the work of this dedicated international servant."

CCF Leader Argue said he is certain the government's stand of wholehearted backing for Mr. Hammarskjold has the complete support of all Canadians.

First reading was given a government bill authorizing construction of a 60-mile rail line into the mineral-rich northland of Quebec—a branch to Mattagami Lake from the CNR's Chibougamau line.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton announced that an interim payment of 10 cents a bushel will be made on the 1959-60 Prairie wheat pool—the same as provided for the last several years.

Defence Minister Harkness said tenders will be called in about two years for production of 480 Bobcat armored personnel carriers for the Canadian army.

Comprehensive P. W. Dept. Annual Report Is Given City Council by Engineer

The city of Belleville is a municipality of just over 29,000 population, with a land area of 5,937 acres, and is served by 86 miles of road and 75 miles of sidewalks.

Of the total road mileage, there are 13.28 miles of asphalt road; 50.04 miles of surface treated roads and 18.95 miles of gravel roadway.

More garbage and other refuse is dumped at the Zwick's Island city dump by private individuals than by the municipal garbage collector, and the average water level of the Bay of Quinte during 1960 was 244.38 feet above sea level — up one hundredth part of a foot from 1959.

Every phase of the city public works operation for the year ranging from road construction and street maintenance, all the way down to the purchase of minor requirements, is covered in the report.

But keeping the city's roads, sidewalks and sewers in proper condition is big business as is indicated by the expenditure involved. The 1960 budget for public works totalled $446,488 of which $179,701 was spent on roads; $49,313, on machines and equipment and $57,250 on sewers.

SMALL DEFICIT

Winter control last year cost the city $40,550, resulting in an over-expenditure which was offset to a great extent by economizing on other items. Net result was an overall deficit of but $2,588.

A 66-inch snowfall during 1960 was the big reason for high winter control costs.

City snowplows covered 8,311 miles of roadway and 871 miles of sidewalk. Two thousand tons of sand were spread on roads and 295 tons on sidewalks. Three hundred and seventy-six tons of salt were used to assist in cutting snow and ice on city streets and sidewalks.

Estimates for the 1961 works committee budget are up slightly but figures still have to be approved by council.

TWO BIG PROJECTS

Two big items, both of them capital works projects, are hoped to be started in the city this year.

Biggest of the two is the two and a half million dollar initial phase of the sewage disposal program. The other is the proposed four-lane bridge on North Front Street over the CNR double track.

High on the priority list for projects that should be started, according to the city engineer, is the replacement of the present city barn housing a city equipment investment of over a quarter of a million dollars. The fire risk of the present building is high and maintenance costs take a big bite each year.

Recommended is the construction of a new fireproof cement block building to be built in three stages.

The condition of city sidewalks is a matter of grave concern for the city engineer who says most of the walks in Belleville were constructed years ago of a thickness not satisfactory for long life and are badly in need of replacement.

As a result the city is spending about $10,000 a year in maintenance and patching that is merely "holding together X miles of sidewalk."

Two-thirds of the city's 74 miles of sidewalks are in need of major repair and to put these walks on a proper basis would cost approximately $390,000.

Last year eight sections of walk with a length of up to 450 feet were constructed in the city, while 173 walk repairs after road cuts for gas, water and other service connections were made.

In this connection the works department issued permits for the installation of over 4,000 feet of underground telephone cable and over 60 permits were issued to the Utilities for installation of water services and renewal of such services.

Also permits were issued for the installation of over 10,000 feet of gas mains. Two hundred and sixty-one gas services were installed last year.

A special project of the works department last year was the preparation for the implementation of one-way streets with a number of new traffic signs to be erected.

And for those who like statistics, there are 1,822 traffic and street signs in the city, of which more than 600 have been erected since 1958.

EDGAR NORMAN ANDREWS
(Rochester, N.Y.)

Mr Edgar Norman Andrews of Rochester, N.Y, died at the Strong Memorial Hospital in that city on Sunday, February 12th, in his 56th year. Born in Belleville, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Andrews, he was a resident of this city until 1924, at which time he moved to Rochester. He was formerly employed by the Standard Bank of Canada and was a member of the Methodist Church in this city.

Surviving are two brothers, J. Clifford Andrews of Minneapolis, Minn., and William B. Andrews of Toronto and a sister, Mrs. Eric (Edna I.) Borglin of Edinburg, Texas.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Chapel, 38 Everett Street. Funeral arrangements appear elsewhere in this edition.

JOHN WILBUR JOHNSON

STIRLING — St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was filled to capacity on Monday afternoon, February 13, for the funeral of John Wilbur Johnson, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Johnson who was fatally injured in a car accident Friday evening.

Rev. P. J. Hommerse, newly-inducted minister of St. Paul's conducted the service. The hymns were "Forever With The Lord" and "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Mrs. Arthur Pyear of Carmel officiated at the console of the organ.

Principal J. L. Good, the staff of Stirling - Rawdon District High School, and a large number of students were seated in a group in the sanctuary.

The bearers were Garry Rose, Robert Montgomery, James Haggerty, Douglas Scott, Gregory Haggerty and Glenn Scott.

The cortege proceeded from the Duffin Funeral Home to the church. Entombment was made in Stirling Cemetery vault. Interment will be made in Mount Pleasant - Rawdon Cemetery in the spring.

SIDNEY HAMILTON FOX

The funeral of Sidney Hamilton Fox was held Tuesday afternoon from the John R. Bush Funeral Home where service in the chapel was conducted by Rev. T. F. Townsend. Interment was in Albury Cemetery.

The bearers were Ross Lott, Nelson Vanclief, Melvin Pulver, Mack Hubbs, Len VasKamp and Hubert Townseed.

MISS SARA JANE McKNIGHT

The funeral of Miss Sara Jane McKnight was held from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Chapel, 38 Everett St., on Tuesday afternoon with Archdeacon J. B. Creegan officiating at the chapel and at the graveside service.

Interment was in Belleville cemetery.

Bearers were Clarence Burley, John Preston, Robert Emerson Sr., Robert Gilchrist, Delbert Stewart and George Cummings.

LATE LEO BUCKLEY

The funeral service of Leo Francis Buckley was held this Wednesday morning from the funeral residence of George F. O'Brien, to St. Michael's Church where Solemn High Mass was celebrated by the Reverend William McGee. The Reverend J. J. V. Buckley was deacon and the Reverend W. J. Buckley was sub-deacon. Prayers at graveside in St. James Cemetery were said by the Rt. Reverend J. P. Sullivan.

A large number of mourners were in attendance at the church. Members of the Islam Caravan of Alhambra formed a guard of honor at both the church and the cemetery.

Bearers were: Frank Culhane, Thomas Lynch, Edward Buckley, William Doyle, E. C. McCallum and Thomas Farrell.

The church was filled to overflowing by the many relatives and friends in attendance and there was a profusion of beautiful floral tributes testifying to the high esteem in which the deceased was held in the community.

Bearers were Norman Cooney, Erin Cooney, Roy Gunter, Durwood Trumble, Edward Chisholm, Perry Cooney.

Interment took place in Gilmour Cemetery.

Thurlow J.F. Appoint 1961 Officers

Thurlow Junior Farmers and Junior Institute are now a joint club. This was decided at the recent annual meeting held at the home of Donna Robinson, Corbyville. The object of combining them into one club is mainly to strengthen the organization.

New officers for 1961-62 were elected and they are as follows: president, Patsy Dafoe; vice-president, Keith Thompson; secretary, Nancy Reynolds; treasurer, Janet Reynolds; press reporter, Marg Bates; 5th director for county, Doug Rollins; club directors, Douglas Farrell, Shirley Chisholm, Bob Sills and Lewis Cummins, and card secretary, Jean Luxton.

The new officers attended an executive meeting held at Patsy Dafoe's. The purpose was to plan this year's projects and meetings.

Thurlow Junior Farmers' annual banquet will be held on Wednesday, March 29th, at Gilead.

DELEGATES CHOSEN

Four delegates were chosen to attend the Guelph Conference and they are Keith Thompson, Shirley Fisher, Doug Farrell and Marg Bates

It was reported that approximately $73 was cleared on the blanket draw, sponsored by the Thurlow Junior Institute. The winner was Grant Maines of Thomasburg

The next meeting will be held at the home of Keith Thompson on February 27th.

A delicious lunch was served and an enjoyable social time was spent.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Robinson were sincerely thanked for opening their home for the meeting.

SERGE TKICK

The funeral of Serge Tkick was held on Tuesday afternoon from the Pinkston-Luscombe funeral home. A service was conducted by the Rev. John Diachima of the Russian Orthodox Church, Toronto. Interment took place in Belleville Cemetery.

10th Cub Pack Wins Annual Hockey Game

The cubs of 8th and 10th Belleville Cub Packs met in their annual challenge hockey game last weekend with 10th defeating 8th by a 10-1 score.

About 30 boys in all met at Holloway St. Church but because of mild weather, the church rink was not usable. The boys were transported to the Goyer's Marine rink at the harbor in cars supplied by the group committee of 10th Pack.

Teams were chosen from each pack for the hockey game while the remaining cubs and helpers enjoyed skating and their own hockey game further down the rink. Charlie Peters was the referee for the challenge game.

Brian Melbourne paced 10th Belleville's attack with five goals while Steven Lee had three. Jack Rodier and Trevor Wilson bagged the others. Norman Pigden notched the lone 8th Belleville goal.

At the close of the game the boys returned to the church and a delightful lunch of hot chocolate, sandwiches and cookies was served by the ladies of the 8th Pack auxiliary.

The teams: 10th Pack — Brian Melbourne, Richard Hughes, Dennis MacCormack, Roger Dale, Jack Rodier, Steven Lee, Trevor Wilson, Allan Shorthouse and Bruce Brown.

8th Pack — Steven Sharp, Norman Pigden, Scott Reid, Stewart Andrews, Garry Wagger, Jim Noakes, Michael Goettler, John Lathan.

Quinte CLU Assoc. Wins National Award

TORONTO — The Life Underwriters Association of Quinte today was awarded the De Hearne CLU trophy.

The presentation was made in Toronto at the 54th annual meeting of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, to Donald E. Wright, Great-West Life Assurance Company, who represented Quinte at the 3-day meeting.

The De Hearne trophy is awarded annually by the national association to the one of its 76 local associations which gives the most outstanding leadership in sponsoring the study course leading to the title and designation, "Chartered Life Underwriter of Canada" (CLU). This course is a comprehensive study program sponsored by the Life Underwriters Association of Canada and directed by the extension department of the University of Toronto. Subjects range from psychology and law to estate analysis and taxation.

The trophy is awarded to an association on the basis of the percentage of its membership which successfully completes CLU examinations during the previous year. Although Quinte is a comparatively small association, its members have indicated tremendous interest in the association's educational program and increasing the professional efficiency of members through advanced education. For this reason they were able to compile a higher percentage of successful candidates in relation to membership than any other association in Canada.

Zdenek Kvarda Heads City's Jaycee Group

Zdenek Kvarda of Aluminum Star Products has been elected president of the newly-formed Belleville Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Moira Frozen Right to Bed Seen as Enhancing Chances Spring May Bring Floods

As in other years, it's all in the lap of the gods but those people who make a study of such things point out that certain conditions this year could point to a better-than-average possibility of a flood.

One of these factors is that due to low water conditions, less than average snow and extended periods of below zera temperatures, the river in many places has frozen right to the bottom.

This combination could result in a lot of ice coming down the river at break-up time.

This might produce a greater than usual flood threat at break-up time as, with little room to flow, the current will raise the ice and float it downstream to cause ice jams.

Also due to lack of snow covering, frost this year has gone deep into the ground and could result in a greater than usual run-off.

RAIN MAIN FACTOR

Alderman George Wishart, water control advisory board chairman for the Moira River Conservation Authority, Monday night told city council that possibly that the worst combination of weather factors has never been experienced on the Moira at break-up time and consequently much more severe flooding than previously experienced could occur.

The last severe flood in Belleville was in 1936 when at least $250,000 damage was caused. At that time public services were dislocated and business was at a standstill in much of the downtown part of the city. About 200 people were temporarily homeless.

To prevent as much as possible the city being caught unawares in case of an impending flood, the Moira Authority last year set up a system to give as much warning as possible if a flood seemed imminent.

The city public works department acts in co-operation with the Authority and stands ready to carry out preventive work and lend other assistance.

Records show that there has been a serious flood in Belleville about every 20 years.

"The last one was in 1936, so we are now about five years overdue," Ald. Wishart noted.

Many Outside Rinks Vie For Honors in Women's Spiel

Advancement into another round was decided by a measure in many instances as the women curlers from across the Province vied for honors in Women's spiel now being conducted at the Quinte Curling Club. Rinks from Cornwall, The Toronto Curling Club, Gananoque, Kingston, Trenton Curling Club and RCAF Picton, Cobourg, Oakville and Brockville along with rinks from the local club competed in the day's play and after the firing was over, some rinks of the Quinte Club were still in the running for the beautiful Ontario Intelligencer trophy and the accompanying plaques.

Most of the competitions were down to the eights and today will see the survivors pitting their skills with stone and broom. Although the ice was tricky the girls soon read it and some excellent curling resulted. But all of the time was not taken up by curling for the committee made arrangements for the social side of this great game and many new friends were made over a cup of coffee in the social hour.

DELICIOUS DINNER

Probably the highlight of the spiel came on Tuesday evening when a full course turkey dinner with all the trimmings and all of it home cooked was served for the visitors. The members of the men's gallery drooled as heaping plates were carried to small tables and there enjoyed to the full. If some of the curlers lost their touch in the evening games probably too much food was the cause.

All members of the committee put themselves out of their way to see that the wants of the visitors were satisfied. The draws were quickly drawn by Harry Fuke and the games were kept pretty well on schedule. The organization for the spiel was commended on all sides and the decorations about the clubhouse brought words of praise. As one curler put it "you are always assured of the best hospitality when you come to this city" and that sums up the general opinion of this fine gathering. The results of the draws:

Valentine Party Features Dinner At Kiwanis Club

Sweethearts and flowers garnished with much merriment and good fun were the order of the day at the Kiwanis Club's Valentine Day meeting yesterday afternoon. Over 100 were present with close to 50 wives and "sweethearts" in attendance. The program of entertainment featured an address by His Worship the Mayor of Wooler, Staff McKenna, which was suitably introduced with a songfest by a massed choir of 100 voices led by Harold Carruthers.

Witticisms and valentines were distributed throughout the program to various persons present together with a Christmas card from Canada's Prime Minister, John G. Diefenbaker. Also assisting with the program were Vic White and Phil Huddleston, a former local Kiwanian who was present for the meeting from Kingston. Corsaves were distributed to all the ladies present together with several favors through the good services o fthe "Mayor" and Juan Sheridan, former Montreal Alouette football great, who has just moved to Belleville.

Mrs. Reta Coleman, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, spoke briefly on the activities of the ladies, indicating that a bridge party was scheduled for the near future.

President Bob Brain mentioned that next week the Kiwanians would be observing Brotherhood Week with the local clergy as the club's guests.

RCAF Future May Be Decided By Red Missile

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — Two vital factors are reported to have entered the government's consideration of whether to acquire a supersonic jet interceptor for RCAF Air Defence Command.

They are:

1. Russia, according to the latest military intelligence, is still building jet bombers, though the number is said to be not large.

2. A belief that Russia is working on an air-to-ground missile which would enable bombers to launch nuclear warheads when still hundreds of miles from their targets.

Soviet development of an air-to-ground missile—also known as the "stand-off bomb"—might require not only acquisition of new interceptors but basing them much farther north.

Whether the government wants to pay the heavy price entailed—northward movement of bases would be almost as expensive as the interceptors themselves — is the issue at stake. A decision does not appear imminent.

The military view here is that the RCAF must have a new interceptor to supplant the subsonic CF-100 jet if Canada wants to help maintain the war deterrent and also its voice in North American Air Defence Command.

The war deterrent is simply that factor which persuades the Kremlin, day after day, that it cannot risk a nuclear onslaught on North America.

Defence Minister Harkness has not stated publicly whether he shares the military view. There are many other factors, economic and political, which enter any decision on a CF-100 replacement.

But by attacking the Liberal party view that Canada should take its interceptors out of NORAD, Mr. Harkness indicated he supports the military proposition.

P.E. County Hockey Player Has Artery in Neck Severed

A young Picton district hockey player is in satisfactory condition in Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital today after having one of the main arteries in his neck cut by a skate during a hockey game last night.

Larry Moore, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Moore, R.R. 2, Picton, was cut by an opponent's skate when he fell during a county league game.

Today the youth was said to be doing fine following surgery and after being given eight pints of blood to replace that lost through the severed artery.

Surgery was done by Dr. Kenneth Douglas of Belleville, who was called to Picton for the emergency.

Prompt action on the part of Dr. Kenneth McQueen and members of the St. John Ambulance who were in attendance at the game possibly saved the boy's life.

St. John Ambulance workers carried the Bloomfield player 200 yards on a stretcher to the Picton Hospital.

An appeal for blood was made at the arena and donors crowded to the hospital to volunteer blood.

Parks Board Executives Remain Same

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Board of Parks Management, members agreed to continue in the executive positions in which they have served for the past year.

E. M. Parker, Jr., will be chairman of the board for 1961; Miss Marion Baker, secretary; John Sayler, treasurer, and the board members will be Bill Ireland, Norman Armstrong and Clyde Mason.

The contract with gardener Bart Boers was renewed for another year on the same basis as last year.

Miss Baker told the board of a suggestion by the Chamber of Commerce that the road leading to the top of Mount Pelion be paved. Board members agreed that this would be an excellent idea, but a survey will have to be delayed until spring. The cost of paving was estimated at between $2,000 and $3,000. The chamber had suggested that this money might be acquired from interested individuals.

Mr. Boers said that he had got an estimate on repairs to the board-owned tractor used in lawn cutting operations. He said that the repairs would come to $200. He was advised to get another price on the repair job as the tractor originally cost $399.

Miss Baker read a letter from the C. K. Siddall Company, the firm responsible for the installation of the Fraser Park-Library-Bay Shore Park sprinkling system. The company had received a cheque from the board for $184.02, in full payment of the $3,300 the board considered as the full price of the job on the strength of an agreement with the company's agent.

MOVES WEST

The Siddall company said that all their records indicated that the job had been undertaken for $3,600. The letter said that the agent had moved west, "almost overnight," and had not been heard from since. Under the circumstances, the cheque would be accepted and company said that it would be glad to handle more work for the board.

James Day's mountain digging operations on Mount Pelion were discussed by the board. The town clerk had been asked to define the board's areas on the mountain in relation to the lot where the digging operations have taken place. The answer was not entirely satisfactory to the board. The general feeling was that there is a great deal of ambiguity concerning where parks property on the mountain starts and where it ends.

Other matters discussed were 1961 board projects and the flooding of the skating rinks in the town parks. All members agreed that next year a greater effort will be made to insure good skating surfaces in the parks, with special reference to High Park.

Speaker Sees Greater Use Of Electricity

TRENTON — A picture of the world of the future when one will lift the telephone receiver and be able, by the click of a switch, to view the facial expressions of a person on the other end of the line by means of a miniature television set attached to the phone; where one may record television programs; where one may telephone a businessman in India and have his conversation automatically translated into English on its way across the ocean, was painted by Albert Ward, general manager of Pyrotenax Ltd., speaking at the weekly meeting of the Rotary Club, Monday night.

Mr. Ward said that man's "silent friend," electricity, would perform these and numerous other wonders in years to come.

He said that when electricity was first introduced to Canada, it was thought to be a fad of the moment and the idea that it would replace gas lighting, heating, cooking, etc., caused much amusement among those who were "in the know."

"Today," he said, "four-fifths of all manufacturing operations in Canada are powered by electricity."

Canada uses more electricity than any other country except Norway, and electricity, with the exception of one other country, is cheaper here.

Mr. Ward said that Thomas Alva Edison, Marconi and Alexander Graham Bell had all conducted experiments with electricity in Canada.

Speaking at the opening of National Electrical Week in Canada, Prime Minister Diefenbaker said, "Electricity has made possible the unbelievable progress of Canada during the present century."

Mr. Ward was introduced to the club by James Page and thanked by Robert Condon.

Remand Men For a Week

TRENTON—In magistrate's court here yesterday, Gordon Alan Ford of London charged with unlawful possession of a Mauser automatic revolver, and vagrancy, was remanded for one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Chester Pritchett, also of London, charged with similar offences, was also remanded.

The men are asked to raise $500 bail each, failing which they will be kept in custody.

The men were picked up in Trenton Monday morning and found to be in possession of an unregistered weapon.

Joseph Mardon, of no fixed address, was also remanded for a week on $300 bail. He was charged with unlawful possession of a pair of sun glasses, the property of William House, Jr., of Trenton, and attempting to remove a $60 car radio from Mr. House's car.

Spent 35 Years Helping Sick In India

TRENTON — Dr. Constance Jackson, a veteran of 35 years in the medical-missionary field in India, was the guest speaker at a joint meeting of the chapel guilds of 6 Repair Depot and RCAF Station Trenton, Monday night.

Dr. Jackson left Canada in 1922 to teach in the mission schools of India. Because of the diseases rampant in the country at that time, Dr. Jackson decided to become a physician. She took her medical degree at an Indian university. Throughout her career, she has practised by the roadsides administering to sick persons who flocked to her make-shift clinics.

Before the Second World War, medical missionaries found their work made more difficult by the Indians' rigid adherence to the caste system. Since the war the Indian government has made an effort to blot out the old system.

Dr. Jackson said that the public health program undertaken by the present Indian government was tremendous in its scope. Sprays are being used to overcome malaria-bearing insects; the victims of leprosy are being treated in hospitals, and much work is being done to combat blindness.

She said that the greater population of the country is unable to work because of health defects.

Male and female medical students are being accepted in the hospitals of India for training. Two large hospitals are supported by the Canadian Council of Churches of which Dr. Jackson is a staff member.

Since her retirement from active practice, Dr. Jackson spends part of her time visiting and addressing chapel guild members of the armed forces throughout Canada. Her current tour, sponsored by the chaplaincy committee of the Canadian Council of Churches, is the second she has undertaken since returning to Canada two years ago.

Boost Town By Wearing Lapel Button

TRENTON — The idea of lapel buttons to boost Trenton (to be worn by associate members of the Chamber of Commerce) was one of many suggestions toward promoting the town presented at Monday night's meeting of the chamber.

Present at the meeting were Douglas Whitley, president, Herbert Smith, secretary, Miss Marion Baker, Ian Darling, Ted Kinsella, and two newcomers, Geoffrey Tinker and James Fewell of the RCAF. Host was George Kempf of Erie Resistor.

Mr. Kempf suggested that the proposed lapel buttons bear the colors of the town. Miss Marion Baker suggested that the buttons also bear the town's floral emblem. Herbert Smith was named to ascertain from town clerk O. W. Larry just what the town's floral emblem is.

Before the meeting, Mr. Kempf led his guests through the new laboratory at the plant where they saw several items of interest. Mr. Whitley thanked Mr. Kempf for the use of the board room. Then he announced that Sqdn. Ldr. Fewell was pinch-hitting for RCAF representative Sqdn. Ldr. A. A. Proctor, who has been transferred to St. Hubert, Que.

In reply to a letter from William Houston, principal of Trenton High School, Mr. Whitley said that the financial position of the chamber did not permit the possibility of granting the $100 bursary requested in the principal's letter.

However, he added, the Chamber would continue to try to influence people in town who might be in a position to assist in the matter of bursaries for deserving students who wished to enter university.

Chamber members were reminded that the Lake Ontario Development Trade and Industry dinner is to be held at the Trenton Country Club, Feb. 22.

Mr. Whitley hopes to have a meeting with Premier Frost's secretary next week to discuss the possible placing of a government Chamber of Commerce booth at the junction of highways 401 and 33.

In reference to the tourist mats which were a suggestion of Sqdn. Ldr. Proctor, Mr. Whitley announced that some art work still needed to be done on them. Miss Baker and Mr. Darling were appointed to look into the matter.

Mr. Smith said that 39 people had paid their Chamber of Commerce membership dues. This list as yet included no industries. At this point Mr Kempf said that Trenton should be united in an effort to promote the town.

Mr. Whitley remarked that some petty animosities in the town prevented full co-operation. He suggested that another Easter Parade might be held again in Trenton this year, because the one held last year was successful. This matter was placed in the hands of the retail merchants committee, with the reminder that the Trenton Ministerial Association had presented their views on the matter last year.

Following a suggestion that money for a road up Mount Pelion might be raised by some means, Miss Baker said she would present the matter to the Board of Parks Management.

Take 5 Boys To See Follies

TRENTON — Last weekend, five boys who attended Trenton and District School for Retarded Children were taken by bus to Toronto by their teacher, John Wauters, to see the Ice Follies at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Mr. Wauters and his small charges were overnight guests of the management at the new Westbury Hotel.

After the Ice Follies the boys were taken backstage to meet the stars of the show.

After such an exciting evening, the boys could hardly settle down to sleep, but finally they dropped off and were ready for their exciting trip home by train.

Parents and friends have been hearing the story of the trip all week.

Wants Teacher To Return To Eskimos

TRENTON — The deputy minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources has written to the Board of Education requesting that Raymond Gagne, head of the French department at Trenton High School, be loaned to the department for one year so that Mr. Gagne can continue language studies among the Eskimos.

The deputy minister said that Mr. Gagne had contributed valuable work in this field to the department in the past. He became a member of the Trenton high school staff last September.

Cape Dorset Eskimo Prints Go on Sale

The 3,250 prints—50 each of 65 designs—are expected to be a sellout again.

Prices will be higher, reflecting strong demand at home and abroad. The range will be $20 to $75 compared with a $40 top last year.

A Miracle of Precision

Only scientists are qualified to assay the full significance of Russia's latest space feat—launching of a space probe toward Venus from a satellite spinning around the earth.

These scientists have already called the achievement the most spectacular and important since the launching of the first Sputnik.

To fire at the moon, at a planet or at the sun from the surface of the earth itself is one thing. Though the earth be spinning through space, it is a relatively stable platform. To trigger the same shot from a small ball moving rapidly around the earth, and to do it with such precision that the probe moves even in approximately the right direction, obviously demands a degree of calculation—and of control—which is true cause for wonderment. Even the slightest error in the direction in which the rocket was pointed when fired would produce a mistake of many millions of miles three months from hence, when the space probe is due to rendezvous with Venus. If this May meeting is kept, either the Russians had miraculous control of the Sputnik used as a firing platform or equally impressive, they had devised some method of guiding the rocket after it was fired from the Sputnik.

In his "state of the union" message to Congress January 30, President John Kennedy of the United States invited the Soviet Union to join in preparing space probes to Mars and Venus. At that time he said Russia was ahead in rockets, the U.S. in the science and technology of space. On February 2, in an editorial, we ventured to question the claim to U.S. superiority, at least as far as guidance of rockets was concerned. If the Russian probe goes anywhere near Venus, the validity of this scepticism about U.S. space superiority will have been justified. Yet, paradoxically enough, the Russian space venture aids Kennedy in a domestic squabble. His election-time assertion that there was a "missile gap" between the U.S and Russia was coming in for serious questioning and he had been on the verge of back-tracking. Now, surely, he has proven his point—or rather had it proven for him. It is reported that the U.S. is a year and a half away from duplicating the Russian feat.

Lumumba - - Weak But Right

Patrice Lumumba is dead. That, and little else, seems certain.

He will not be widely mourned—but he deserved a better fate.

Of all the claimants to power in the Congo, only Lumumba had the right goal, a united nation of 13,000,000 people, instead of a collection of tribal areas, refusing to assist each other, each going its own way.

Lumumba's tragedy was that he was not fitted for his task—by training or by temperament. He had only a rudimentary education and not sufficient native intelligence to understand that, no matter how good he might think his reasons for hatred of the Belgians to be, some measure of co-operation with them was essential if the first, hard days of independence were to be passed smoothly.

When, immediately after the Belgians cut the Congo loose, the Congolese Army mutinied and was guilty of many atrocities, Lumumba could not find it in his heart to cry out against this savagery. He called in the United Nations, but was more concerned about ousting the remaining Belgians from the country than he was about establishing rule by law. Given a different attitude, he might have persuaded the UN to undertake a realistic policing of the strife-torn nation—and if he had done that he would not later have seen UN forces look idly on while he was mercilessly beaten at a Katanga airport The beating may well have been just the preliminary to his murder—there is grave reason to doubt the tale of his escape from jail, with its unlikely description of him and two companions overpowering their guards by wielding chunks of firewood.

It became fashionable to deplore Lumumba and all his works—and indeed there was scant reason to admire the manner in which he conducted the affairs of his country during his brief season of power—but his disfavor amongst the nations of the West may have been the result of his misfortune in his friends. He was supported by the Soviet Union and this, alone made him suspect.

Yet his insistence on the necessity of a strong central government makes sound sense. He himself said he was a neutralist and a nationalist—and neutralism and nationalism are the natural paths for new regimes in African and Asian lands just liberated from foreign control. If these be sins, then there will be many more sinners.

An Indian Speaks Up

By Eric Wells in the Winnipeg Free Press

Gordon Laugher dropped in on the Martin enquiry into the bush workers' dispute (at Grand Rapids, Man.), to give one man's opinion on (a recent) walkout and pass on some advice on speeches, keeping warm and the perils of charge accounts and liquor, . .

And by the time he was finished the 29-year-old Indian bushman was well on his way to becoming the star witness of the enquiry, of which Winnipeg lawyer Steward Martin is commissioner.

• • •

Mr. Laugher said he spoke as an Indian and a bushman. He was fed up with self-appointed experts, he said, who didn't know anything about the north and who unfavorably compared the conditions in which Indian workers lived at Grand Rapids, with the conditions of peasants in Cuba.

"People have been known to survive in tents all winter," he declared, referring to MLA David Orlikow's charges, made (earlier), that Indians lived in canvas in the bush. "I have.

If Indians were freezing in their tents, it was because they lazy, Mr. Laughter added. "If a man puts up a tent and he's lazy, Mr. Laugher added. "If pine boughs on the floor to put his mattress on, and he doesn't cut enough firewood to last the week, sure he's going to be cold.

"We (he and his four partners) go and get extra blankets from the commisary—not to keep us warm, but to keep our eggs from freezing." And, said Mr. Laugher, they put in a proper log floor.

"If a man wants to sleep in the snow, that's his fault, not the company's," he declared.

• • •

Representatives of Patricia Transportation Co. and Drake Construction Co., the contractors involved in the dispute, beamed happily as Mr. Laugher laid down his five-man groups theory on how to make money: work. The companies had earlier suggested the Indians weren't making much money because they weren't working hard enough.

"According to what we believe in our crew, if you're going to work hard you're going to make lots of money," Mr. Laugher said. "I cleared $117 last week, after paying all my expenses."

"This northland is a place where a man has got to struggle to survive. Nobody is going to come along and pay me $175 a week (his gross earning) for nothing."

Mr. Laugher had worked for both Patricia and Drake. he is working for Patricia now

"They (Drake) charged too much for grub," he said. "I liked their system of contracts, but everything was about 10 cents more at Drake. Me, I'll kill a rabbit first before I've got to go to work for Drake."

Mr. Laugher said he didn't think making demands on contractors was going to improve working conditions or pay.

"When I ask them for something, I go and ask them. 'Sir, we'd like this . . . . If we don't get a raise, we go someplace else and make money.'"

• • •

Mr. Laugher had strong views on charging purchases at the company store, too — and on the companies' refusal to issue credit in some cases

"It's a man's own downfall if he's either so lazy or crazy enough when he runs short of money to go to the company You can't expect Mr. Wright (Patricia's camp superintendent) to give you a $5,000 grocery bill when you only made $10 last week."

The lazy man, he said, might then go to the Indian agent in his area for groceries. Mr. Laugher said he'd never drawn rations—relief—and didn't intend to now.

• • •

No man is perfect, he admitted.

"Last week, I took I don't know how long to clear eight acres," he said. "I worked the way an old woman would loaf around when she's pregnant and ready to go to the doctor."

He'd been drunk Saturday and Sunday, he said, but he wasn't blaming the company if he didn't make money because he was drunk.

"Why don't you save your money?" Dr. Martin asked.

"I have a bank account," said Mr. Laugher . . . , "and Investors' Syndicate, too."

Shortly thereafter he took his leave. Earlier, he had observed that "I've got a car waiting outside. As long as I stand here (talking) to you people, it's costing me money, you know."

But Gordon Laugher just wanted to get the picture straight on a few things . . . and money was no object. He, after all, knew how to make it.

He's Extinct

Editorial in
The Vancouver Sun

There is only one thing wrong with Gordon Laugher of Manitoba, whose views are published today.

What is wrong is this: Mr. Laugher is dead, but he won't lie down.

Anyone who worked in the mining or logging camps of British Columbia 40 years ago will recognize him, and with pleasure. But to hear from him in these days is rather like meeting a friendly woolly mammoth strolling down Granville Street.

The country used to be full of his like. Strong men. Proud men. Hard, tough, competent, independent men. Men who knew their jobs, who did a full day's work for a full day's pay and despised a man who didn't.

We miss them, but we've killed them off, of course. Politicians, employers, unions and working stiffs, we ganged up on them. We had to. Once they'd developed the country for us, we couldn't afford to have them living in it.

Mr. Laugher obviously is not a working man. He doesn't want a job. He just wants to earn some money. Somewhere he has a stump ranch, a little mining claim, a few range cows or a bit of timber he can handlog. He has a cabin, a rifle, deer in the hills, fish in the lake.

Politicians can't have that sort of thing; they have to open up the country, hand it over to big industry and provide jobs.

Employers sigh nostalgically for employees like Mr. Laugher, but they wouldn't hire him on a bet. They can't afford it. He won't stay put.

He'll speak his mind.

He'll quit at the drop of a hat, and probably complicate the labor turnover problem by clouting the boss on the jaw when he does it.

For unions, he's poison. He sets his own wage scale and working hours. He'll blow pension plans and shop stewards to flinders. Walk a picket line? Not him. Not when there's a deer left in the hills.

Working stiffs envy him—but emulate him? Well, how many can floor a tent, club a rabbit, cut a week's firewood, stay drunk all Saturday and Sunday and still turn up for work Monday morning?

No, Mr. Laugher is extinct. He doesn't know it, but we've extinguished him. We just can't afford to have men that good around this coutry.

Still, as Hamlet said of another Ghost:

"He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again."

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

BRIGHT TALISMAN

Self-will is man's greatest vice and handicap. Jesus was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin. There was for him a particular period of intense temptation at the beginning of his ministry, but his temptations did not end there for he speaks of his disciples as those who had continued with him in his temptations.

One of his greatest temptations was in the Garden of Gethsemane when he was tempted to exercise his will in contradiction to the will of His Heavenly Father. He triumphed over His temptation and His words were: "Not My will but Thine be done."

Someone has said that these words should be in ever prayer a human being ever utters. Certainly there is nothing in life too small or too large for us to pray for. But everything should be requested under the will and according to the pleasure of God the Giver. How do we know that what we are asking for is the best thing for us? God often says No to our prayers that He may give us something vastly better than we know how to ask for. The worst thing that could ever happen to us would be for God to give us everything we ask for, when we ask for it, and because we ask for it.

"Not my will but Thine. ." This is the bright talisman which the sons and daughters of faith should cherish.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 15th, 1941.

For the last several days purveyers of St. Valentine cards, humorous and otherwise, have done a land-office business, with city's youth and school children being in the van of the purchasers. While the days of the humorous, and in some cases not so humorous, cards has not entirely departed, merchants stated today that sales of this type of Valentine, dear to the heart of the jokesmith, has dropped off considerably during the past few years.

A decided decrease in the price of apples was forecast by Dominion fruit inspectors here yesterday. Warehouses of the district and cold storage plants are fairly well stocked at present and growers, it was pointed out, may have to take a price much lower than was anticipated at first.

Members of the Belleville branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Post 201 voted considerable funds to war projects at their monthly meeting. Three seperate contributions were made by the Belleville "Vets" when a donation of $75.00 was voted to the British War Victims' Fund and $25.00 to the Greek War Relief Fund. The Army and Navy Veterans applied for a $1,000 Government Bond from the Canadian Government. The contribution to the British War Victims' Fund was made in lieu of the Club's annual Vimy Night program which has been featured as one of the Club's outstanding meetings of the year since the inception of the "Vets" club here.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

TO BE KIND

No matter how old the world ever gets, it can't afford to outlive the simple virtues that have helped so to make it a happy place in which to live.

Every day people get up in the morning hungrier than ever for something simple to nourish their souls.

What do I care about that one with the big sounding name and titles fore and aft, whose wealth mounts high and at the sound of whose name countless numbers tremble — if he isn't kind?

Kindness makes me think of fragrance of the rarest perfume, the holiness of snow flakes, the beauty of October, the full mellowed notes from the strings of the harp, that rare day in June about which Lowell wrote.

And yet kindness is above them all! For it climbs into the heart and every nook and corner there. It softens the hardest heart, melting it back into sympathy.

When you meet one who is very kind, you may be sure that you are in the presence of a kind of divinity.

Shakespeare, I believe it is, speaks of kindness as like the gentle rain.

And how it falls into people's hearts to enrich and beautify them. And how it changes entire characters.

The more important you become, the richer you get: the greater you grow, the kinder you should become.

Kindness is God in you — at work!

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

The greatest weapon used in intimidation is not a pistol, or a blackjack or a heavy fist. It is common sense. People gifted with common sense intimidate more people around them than all the armed thugs put together Sometimes the area of intimidation is only the family circle. Sometimes it is a larger area like a business employing five hundred people. A person born with common sense can intimidate a whole great organization like a railroad employing ten thousand or a trades union with fifty thousand members. Even a political party of a million or a nation of many millions can be intimidated by a man or sometimes a woman endowed with this most powerful of all the implements of persuasion.

The rise to power of a person so gifted is strewn with the prostrate forms of all who come within reach. Sometimes they are prostrate because they are merely bowing low. Others are prostrate because they have dared to dispute. But in disputes whether in a family circle, a group of friends, a business or a whole community, the lucky one gifted with common sense slowly but surely demonstrates his lethal talent. Usually he ends up on top of the heap; unless, of course, the family or his colleagues or the community rise up and hang him to a lamp post. Common sense can be the most infuriating of traits — in others.

Mastery of Mind

Detroit Free Press

An authority declared at a conference in San Francisco that absolute control of men's mind still is virtually impossible, whether through drugs or brainwashing. He was speaking about mass application, not about the job that can be done by a real master like, say, an eighteen-month-old child on a doting grandparent.

To Your Good Health

Fresh Sweat Is Odorless But Glands Create Problem

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

Editor's Note: This is the first of two articles on perspiration.

Winter brings its questions about perspiration, just as summer does. Winter brings even more questions, perhaps, because we expect to perspire in hot summer weather. If the matter remains a problem in moderate or cool seasons, then the victim is even more perturbed.

A woman writes, "I seem to be allergic to all deodorants that I have tried, but I need some under - arm protection. What do you suggest? I have heard that a mixture of talcum and starch is good."

To start with, remember that perspiration, fresh sweat, to use plain English, is both odorless and sterile. Take for example the beads of perspiration on forehead or chest in hot weather. You can be wringing wet, yet have no offensive odor.

A set of glands, the apocrine group, secrete a cloudy, odorous fluid. They are located primarily in the armpits, the groin area and the feet. These glands become active about adolescence and decrease their activity in old age.

Some body odor comes from this source and some is the result of bacteria which may cling to moist skin and become smelly.

The reader who is sensitive to commercial deodorants, obviously has a problem, but not necessarily an insoluble one.

Shaving the armpits is helpful, because much odor is due to bacteria which clings to hair as well as to skin.

Powdering with ordinary baking soda may help. This does not reduce the amount of perspiration, but it will do a good job of deodorizing and shouldn't be irritating to the skin.

It might not be a bad idea to try mixing the baking soda with either talcum or starch, or both to see which combination is most satisfactory for the individual case. But note that I point to baking soda as the most active ingredient.

In addition, scrupulous cleanliness is essential.

Why some people seem to attract bacteria which causes unpleasant odor is a puzzle. However, it is so, and daily lathering — not just a casual rinsing — to wash away as many of the offending bacteria as possible is clearly the first line of defence. Soap and water make a pretty good antiseptic. Use of a good lather is important.

I will take up some other questions relating to this same topic tomorrow.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Your articles are very interesting, but since I have been reading them, you haven't written about migraine. — Mrs. B.M."

No. Because some time ago I felt it was better to write a much longer article about headaches — with a great deal of emphasis on migraines — and have it printed in a pamphlet. You can get it by sending a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 20c in coin. Asking for "How to Tame Headaches," addressing your request to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it all right to give a one-year-old baby cold milk before putting him to bed at night? — B.B."

There's no harm in cold milk. Warming the bottle is a time-honored custom, but a recent study shows it isn't necessary. Why not give the milk at room temperature?

Fat! My leaflet, "The Lost Secret of Reducing," tells how to get rid of it the easy way. For your copy write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and 10c in coin to cover handling and postage.

Strictly Personal

Syd Discusses Complexities Of Research

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The Ford Foundation has just given a great deal of money to help the nation's libraries reorganize and improve thier reference system. To anyone who writes for a living, this will be an unalloyed blessing.

To take a minor, but typical, example: last week Michael, who is going through his military phase, asked me how "saluting" started. I fobbed him off with some double-talk, but the plain fact was that I didn't know, and he knew I didn't know.

So I began my quest for the origin of the military and naval salute. There are 3,000 books in my library at home, including two different encyclopedia sets, No help there at all.

I tried the reference library at the office and drew a blank. I spent all Saturday morning at the Chicago Public Library, one of the half-dozen most comprehensive in the country. Still no light was shed on the subject.

By this time I didn't care about the origin of saluting. I was just annoyed that so common and acient a practice was so hard to track down. I was shunted from book to book, from file to file. I learned everything about saluting in a hundred countries, except one thing — how it all began.

By this time I was slightly paranoid on the subject and determined not to give up. After several days of tedious detective work, following false leads and sniffing down old documents, I finally came to the end of the trail.

It was in a work by Geoffrey Romaine Callender, quoting "British Naval Records," and I must say that the charming tale (which I trust is authentic) was almost worth the painful and lengthy effort. It went:

"After the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588, a naval tournament was arranged for the victorious British seamen and, at the request of Admiral Drake, Queen Elizabeth consented to come down from London and award the prizes.

"The officer in charge of the arrangements proved himself one of the most tactful men in history. He issued orders that 'on account of the dazzling loveliness of Her Majesty, all seamen, upon receiving their prizes, should shield their eyes with their right hand.' Thus was born the naval and military salute."

I imparted this little nugget of information to Michael that evening, but he was already a Space Cadet and wanted to know how oxygen masks work. I took a deep breath, murmured a silent prayer for the Ford Foundation, and turned once more to my battered encyclopedia.

Many Believe Castro Pushed Into 'Moscow's Pocket' By Members of His Govt.

HAVANA (Reuters) — The most hotly debated topic in Havana today is whether the regime of Fidel Castro is Communist or non-Communist.

Reduced to the simplest terms, there are three schools of thought on the subject. Very roughly, the people may be classified into those who say: '"Castro is a Communist;" '"Castro is not a Communist;" and '"Why should Fidel not be a Communist?"

For them no further proof is needed than the agrarian reform law, which early last year stripped landowners of their property without leaving them even so much as a receipt in exchange; the urban reform law which deprived house-owners of the direct benefit of their rents; the nationalization of virtually all U.S.-owned industries and commerce, and the warm public embrace which Soviet Premier Khrushchev bestowed upon Castro at the United Nations in September.

In the second group are the still faithful '"Fidelistas," for whom Castro is still the bearded giant with a charming smile who two years ago rode into Havana to the plaudits of 90 per cent of the population after crushing President Fulgencio Batista's regime.

The socialist flavor of the reforms which have taken place since then is, for this group, merely coincidental. Cuba, they explain, was the richest underdeveloped nation in the world.

Castro merely has re-established the balance of the social structure of a country which contained the extremes of heartless luxury and grinding poverty.

They explain, too, that if, as recurrent rumor has it, the government intends to reduce sugar workers' wages, these wages henceforth will be paid for 12 months of the year instead of only four.

The third group of commentators includes those who assiduously buy the paper-back editions of Marx and Engels and Lenin displayed on Havana pavements by street vendors.

They help to distribute banners and car-stickers declaring "We support the nationalization of Yankee enterprises" and "Cuba si, Yankee no" and compare the co-operatives now being established on farms run by the National Institute of Agrarian Reform with the Kolkhoz of the Soviet Union.

Apart from these three well-defined arguments, there is a well-favored theory that Castro is not a Communist but that his brother Raul, the minister of the armed forces; Ernesto (Che) Guevara, president of the Cuban National Bank, and the president, Osvaldo Dorticos, are Soviet-type Communists of long standing who have "pushed Fidel into Moscow's pocket."

High School Activities

QUINTE SECONDARY

By GERALD PLEIZER and BRENDA HARVEY

On Thursday, February 2, the Blue and Grey Ball was held in Quinte's Gym. Many attended and danced the evening through to the music of the RCAF's orchestra. The theme was Caribbean. The Sketching Club did a wonderful job on the decorations. Everyone who attended enjoyed himself immensely.

On Friday, February 3, twenty-three students from Quinte Secondary School visited Peterborough Teacher's College. These prospective elementary school teachers under the supervision of Mr. Sloan left in the morning. At the College, they were divided into groups and attended classes with former Quinte students now at Teachers' College. They saw a number of classes in action. All agree that this was a very profitable day.

While these students visited Teachers' College, other students who are considering teaching as a career visited the Belleville Public Schools. Thirty-four students spent the day visiting classes of all grades.

They had a chance to observe the everyday classroom scene. Some students had the opportunity to do some teaching.

Students are indebted to the staff of Peterborough Teachers' College and to the Superintendent and staff of the Belleville Public School Board for making this very worthwhile experience possible.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week, there were preliminary public speeches held. On Wednesday in the assembly, speaking contest delivered t the finalists of the public speaking contest delivered their addresses. The winner in the juniors was Judy Gill who talked on clocks. Rita Demezyna who talked on twins won the Senior Division. These two now go on to the finals.

After the busy cadet week at Quinte, which included displays in the halls, cadet basketball and hockey matches, rifle competition, banquet assembly and the grand finale, the formal, one would think the school would settle down to get over all this activity, but this is not true. After three-sixteen the stage especially is one buzz of activity. Stage crew fix spot lights and other stage equipment, sketching club paints and prepares sets, and busiest of all is a very talented group of actors and their instructors who often burn the midnight oil. All this activity is for the production about which everyone, due to all the advertisement and publicity, should know or come to know, The Boyfriend.

Another sample of the busy student activities in Quinte are all the clubs to which another one was recently added Thursday, February 9th marks the birthday of the "Eighty Percent Club." Rumors have gone through the school about the forming of this club since the beginning of the school year in September, but not until Thursday have the rumors become reality. Mr. Reid is the staff adviser of the club.

Everyone in grades eleven, twelve and thirteen who acquired average of over eighty in their Christmas examinations is eligible to join this club. After every set of examinations the list of members will be subject to revision. The purpose of the club is to reward the outstanding achievements its members have made. Their first reward is to be a trip to Queen's University in Kingston on February the twenty-fourth. This is to be the first of many such excursions and I believe the membership will rise at Easter after all the Quinte scholars have seen the privileges these privileged few enjoy.

WINS SAFETY AWARD OF MERIT for one million accident-free hours was awarded recently to Ontario Hydro's East Central Region. On behalf of the National Safety Council, Hydro Chairman James S. Duncan (centre) presents the award to F. H. Gibbon, of Belleville, regional manager (right), as R. A. White, regional safety officer, looks on. East Central Region extends along Lake Ontario from slightly west of Port Hope to Gananoque, and north to the southern boundary of Algonquin Park. (Ontario Hydro Photo).

Frank A. Edgar Completes 44-Year Railroad Career

Frank A. Edgar made his last trip of his 44-year career as a railroad engineer finishing at Belleville on CNR train number 10, January 28th. Mr. Edgar started working as a fireman in 1917 in Belleville, for the Grand Trunk Railway. After firing for a considerable time he started running an engine as an engineer in 1941. From that time on he worked out of Belleville on passenger and freight trains of all classes of steam power and diesel power, finishing his trip on engine 6783 diesel. The last 10 years, he has been on passenger trains between Belleville and Brockville or Belleville and Toronto. The diesel power is very modern but the steam 62 hundred class or 57 hundred gives you more thrill to operate, he says.

Mr. Edgar has a son, Charles, who has been working in Belleville, on the C.N.R. for 20 years. He also has three grandchildren.

Mr. Edgar has enjoyed working for the railway and has enjoyed the men he has worked with and also the officials his work has brought him in contact with. He will now take a long rest enjoying such pleasures as hunting, fishing and motoring.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar gave a party for their railway friends at Club Canara. The evening was enjoyed by all and the members and brothers of Lodge 189 presented Mrs. Edgar with a dozen beautiful red roses and presented Mr. Edgar with a lovely sand platform rocker.

Bed-Pushing Craze Grips Colleges Throughout Land

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Across the land the creak of castors pierces the quiet environs of university towns.

Students, both participants and observers, assiduously compile and loudly proclaim records for mileage, speed and sheer endurance. The drain on hospital stocks of spare wheels and axles grows daily.

The bed-pushing craze, imported from South Africa by the University of British Columbia, is at its height. Students are trying furiously to outdo each other by pushing regulation hospital beds through city streets, on highways and overland.

The stunts are to publicize charity campaigns or to encourage contributions to hospitals which provided the beds.

Queen's University students in Kingston claim a world record Since 8 a.m. Saturday a student-propelled bed has travelled more than 350 miles through city streets at 6.7 miles an hour.

DENIED BY ACADIA

Students at Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., scorn the Queen's claims because bed-pushing in Kingston was confined to city streets. Queen's students answered that provincial police wouldn't let them use highways.

Acadia claimed the record with its 301-mile bed-push until students at Dalhousie University in Halifax announced they have completed 350 miles behind a bed and are still pushing.

The Dalhousie bed carries buckets slung from the sides for contributions to the Children's Hospital, from which the bed was borrowed.

Students at Sir George Williams University in Montreal were to start today on a Montreal-Ottawa run. They became interested last week when a group from Waterloo University College claimed to be "world champion bed-pushers."

FIGURE ON SPEED

The Waterloo group wanted the title on the basis of speed. They said they averaged 8.4 miles an hour over a 71-mile stretch.

Students at Hamilton's McMaster University are claiming the overland record as they struggle to complete a 135-mile route crossing frozen lakes, creeks and bush country. They said they are facing the hazards of hunger, darkness, farmers, dogs and police and hope to reach an arena in Dundas tonight for a hockey game.

A police edict that for safety's sake the pushing teams must keep off roads did not daunt the McMaster students. They have kept their movements secret and off roads.

Twenty-four McGill University engineering students in Montreal plan a variation: They intend to push a reconstructed 60-year-old caleche, a carriage, from Quebec City to Montreal in time for McGill's Winter Carnival Thursday night.

Man in Prison At Time Crime Was Committed

TORONTO (CP) — George Coy's appeal against 1957 armed robbery conviction was granted Tuesday after the magistrate who sentenced him told the Ontario Court of Appeal Coy was in penitentiary when the crime was committed.

Coy told the court he was in a state of "mental disarray" when he pleaded guilty to robbing a Belleville bread company in May, 1956. He blamed maltreatment by Hamilton police in questioning him.

Coy told the court he was in leased from Kingston penitentiary for a previous armed robbery conviction until Jan. 31, 1957, was sentenced to a year the following June by magistrate T. Y. Wills of Belleville.

Magistrate Wills said that with the record available at the time several persons — himself included—should have queried Coy's plea and the evidence. He said the matter came to his attention only last December, when he reported the case to the National Parole Board.

How to Lick Objective Exams

By LESLIE J. NASON, Ed.D., with HARRY KARNS

Article 13

Let's continue our chat about how to prepare for tests so that they become pleasant rather than harrowing experiences.

We talked about essay exams, the kind in which you are asked to remember and write out the answers to questions. Many of the same methods of preparation apply to what is known as the "objective" exam.

This is the kind that merely requires you to recognize and mark the answer.

You should prepare for objective exams by a general review, as you do with the essay type. But remember this difference:

The objective test usually requires review with a greater emphasis on specific statements.

Start by skimming through your material. Keep asking yourself: "What sort of question is the teacher likely to ask about this point, this character, this date?"

You practise baseball by throwing and hitting balls. Prepare for exams by tossing yourself questions and hitting them back.

If the exam is one covering an entire book, it is good practice to scan the index. Each item can be used as a cue to remind you of specific facts. When you hit an item that doesn't ring a bell, you have touched a short in your knowledge. Repair it so the bell rings the next time.

Some students pile up facts in their heads the way junk yards pile up old car bodies. In the junk yard, where everything is stamped together in gigantic bales and shipped off to market, this habit is all right. In education, it leads to chaos.

The best way is to fit each piece of information into its logical place in the general pattern of your knowledge of the subject. Relate it in some way to other facts and ideas. If you do this, you are prepared for tests of either ability to recognize or ability to remember correct answers.

TESTS ON MATH

In certain ways the preparation for tests in math varies from the procedure we've been talking about.
